Weatherman Cuts Big Swath In Schedules Of Baseball Leagues

(By The Canadian Press)

The weatherman cut a big swath through baseball yesterday, washing out two National League games and all four International League games.

The American loop was luckier and all three scheduled games were played. Boston downed Detroit 13-12, Cleveland edged Philadelphia 4-3 and Washington whipped Chicago 7-3.

In the National, Brooklyn beat St. Louis 9-8 and New York wall-popped Chicago Cubs 10-4. Cincinnati and Philadelphia and Pittsburgh at Boston were postponed.

At Detroit, the Red Sox nearly blew a 10-run lead but hung on to defeat the Tigers and knock them out of their spot as co-leaders in the American League race. The teams poured 13 runs across in a wild fourth inning.

The Boston club poured seven runs across in the fourth to grab what seemed to be an insurmountable 11-1 lead, but the Tigers roared back with six runs in their half to make it 11-7.

Photo Finish

Detroit, striving desperately for a victory that would have meant sole possession of first place, carried the contest right to a photo finish. The Tigers made it a 13-12 game by pushing over two runs with only one out in the last of the ninth.

With one out in the last of the ninth, the bases loaded and the score tied, Lou Brissie issued a walk to Bob Kennedy, forcing in the winning run for Cleveland over the Athletics.

It was the rubber game of a three-game series, and Brissie's sixth straight defeat.

Ferris Fain homered in the fourth and Kennedy in the sixth but the Athletics tied it up again in the eighth. After loading the bases, Steve Gromek let Paul Lehner single a runner home. Al Benton, who then took the mound for Cleveland, issued four straight balls to Bob Dillinger to force in another.

The Senators rolled to their ninth victory in 12 games by coming from behind to defeat the White Sox before a tiny Chicago crowd of 3,867.

Sid Judson had little trouble as he checked the White Sox on nine hits to score his fourth victory against two losses. The Washington pitcher also shared in the Senators' 10-hit offensive against loser Randy Gumpert and Jack Bruner with a triple which brought in a run before he also scored.

Errors Prove Costly

In the National, the Dodgers took advantage of three ninth-inning errors committed by St. Louis third-baseman Tommy Glaviano to score five runs and come from behind to nip the Cardinals.

Few of the Brooklyn Ladies Day crowd of 15,000 would have given a plugged nickel for the Brooks' chances as the Dodgers came to bat in the eighth. Howie Pollet, on the mound for the Cards, appeared to be headed for an easy triumph as his mates had given him an 8-0 lead.

Then a three-run homer by Carl Furillo, two singles, and an error by outfielder Johnny Lindell not only gave the Brooks four runs in the eighth but finished Pollet in favor of Gerry Staley.

Then came the uproarious ninth. Jimmy Russell and Jackie Robinson doubled to give the Dodgers their only legitimate run of the inning. Al Brazie came in to retire Furillo on a pop to Stan Musial. Gil Hodges singled and Duke Snider walked, filling the bases.

Glaviano, who earlier had hit a home run to atone for a previous error, misused again on a ground ball to Glaviano. This time Tommy threw high to the plate to allow Hodges to score.

Pee Wee Reese became the third straight batter to hit to Glaviano, and the bewildered third-baseman let the ball go through him into left field to enable Snider and Campanella to cross the plate with the tying and winning runs.

Monte Rivin, only two days up from Jersey City, batted in five runs with a grand-slam homer and a single to lead New York Giants to victory over Chicago. The game was halted after six innings because of rain.

The Cubs played under protest, disputing a balk called by umpire Lon Warneke against pitcher Walter Dubeil in the fifth inning while Dubeil was trying to give Henry Thompson an intentional pass with runners on second and third.

In the fourth, manager Frankie Frisch of the Cubs was ejected from the game after an argument with Warneke.

Al (Rube) Walker, Cub catcher also hit a grand-slam homer.

While there, we also had the pleasure of furthering our acquaintance with Mr. and Mrs. Marc Sandow, his new Club Professional and his wife who have been engaged in their new duties for the past three weeks or so. We use the term "their duties" because although Mr. Sandow is the Club pro, Mrs. Sandow acts as her husband's personal secretary and is as active and as busy as her husband is in his new position.

A professional golfer of high standing, Mr. Sandow, accompanied by his wife, came out to Canada from England a little more than a year ago where he had been active as a professional instructor with many British Clubs as well as in Switzerland and other points in Western Europe. He came to this Province from the Yarmouth, N. S. Golf and Country Club where he held the position of Club professional for the past year.

Really keen on his work, Mr. Sandow has been very active in his duties right from his arrival here, and already has given over 80 private lessons in the short time he has been here in addition to many odd duties about the premises, in which he has been previously assisted by Mrs. Sandow. An expert at repairing clubs and equipment, Mr. Sandow has also done much in this line since he has been here, and also has in supply a fine array of new golf equipment for members of the Club to choose from.

While enjoying a cup of tea, served in typical English fashion by Mrs. Sandow as the perfect host, this writer took the liberty of asking the Sandows how they are enjoying their new position, etc. This, in part, is the text of their reply:

"The beginning of our duty has been a pleasant one; and by the reception of the Members of the Golf Club, we feel that we want to do our utmost for the golfers. "Most of my time," stated Mr. Sandow, "will be devoted to the teaching of the game, and to my valuable experience with which I have taught many high ranking golfers. Golf has been made both complicated and difficult, and I have simplified the method of teaching by standardizing the Basic Golf, which gives one an opportunity to learn the right and easy way."

"Since my early apprentice days, I have been making Golf Clubs, so I know the balance value of each one. I have studied the strength and weakness of players, analyzed the club length and weight, the lie and the grip, the best suited for each individual player." "One must realize," continued Mr. Sandow, "that the Club Professional, a man of many parts, with years of diligent study, can best aid the golfers to improve their game."

"I am always willing to give sound advice and consultations, making the Members' Golfing season, more interesting, more successful, and more enjoyable," he concluded, "in our books, that should be enough in itself to encourage anyone to want to play golf and improve their game."

Mrs. Sandow also informed this writer, that "What she and her husband have so far seen of "The Island" is really lovely, and that her husband has already written a letter to one of the leading golfing magazines in the Old Country, telling them of their position here." Eddie Waitkus Reported Now Better Than Ever

PHILADELPHIA, May 18 (AP)—Everybody counted Eddie Waitkus out but Eddie Waitkus.

"After all," the Philadelphia Phillies' first-baseman said today, "I'm a ball player. What else could I do?"

Waitkus was nearly killed a year ago by a gun-toting, love-crazed girl who lured him into a Chicago hotel room. Later she was judged unfit to stand trial and was sent to a mental hospital.

The sick-felding Eddie, one of the best first-basemen in baseball, missed most of last season, brooding about inaction as he convalesced in a hospital room.

At the time of the shooting, the 30-year-old Waitkus was sparring the Phils in their fight to stay in the pennant race. He was hitting a shade above .300 and had been voted No. 1 choice of the fans to play first base for the National League in the All-Star game. The bullet spoiled that.

Now Eddie is back where he left off. He's connected solidly on his comeback—and his big bat and his classy fielding have a lot to do with the Phils' current position on top of the league.

"It gives me great satisfaction," Eddie said with a shy smile. "Everybody sure counted me out. They said I was through, never would play again."

"That's because they never asked me what I thought about my chances."

Right now Eddie is clubbing the horsehide at a .324 clip, good enough for anybody's team.

Does the injury bother him?

"Not yet, and I hope not ever," Eddie says. "Oh, it feels a little stiff every once in a while when I get up in the morning, but a little massage and sun lamp treatment on the back and I'm raring to go."

Waitkus broke into the majors with Chicago Cubs in 1941, played 12 games, then was shipped back to Tulsa in the Texas League for more seasoning. He played with Los Angeles in 1942, then went to war the next three years.

The Phils acquired Eddie from the Cubs in an eight-player deal during the winter of 1948.

The schedule of the Prince Edward Island Physical Fitness League has been released. The Curran & Briggs diamond at Summerside will be the scene of the opening game, the Ables and the C & B boys being the participants. Let us hope that June 7th will give us balmey baseball weather to insure an auspicious opening.

We think the idea of having neutral plate umpires and base judges this year in the Island League is an excellent idea. Of course, the proof of the pudding is in the eating and we shall know better about this scheme after several games have been played but it is our guess that there will be less bickering over umpire's decisions. The point is this: During a baseball game there is bound to be some close decisions. No matter how fair an arbiter is, if he calls a close decision in favor of a team from his own or group, he is suspect, as far as a lot of the fans are concerned. A neutral official does not labor under this handicap. Nobody suspects that he is trying to help either of the teams. Of course he will probably be called a robber occasionally because fans have to let off some steam. What would a ball game be if the fans didn't occasionally berate the poor umpire. The time-worn, motecaten jokes about the umpire's needing glasses, etc. are always good for a laugh, and the wise ump knows the fans have nothing against him, but are only playing a role that is as much a part of the grand old game as is the consuming of peanuts and crackerjacks.

Wakefield On Yankees' Payroll, But Blacklisted

By Joe Reichler

NEW YORK, May 18 (CP)—Dick Wakefield, the American League's No. 1 problem child, is back on New York Yankees' payroll, but it's a cinch he will never be in their line-up.

In announcing Wakefield's reinstatement today, the Yankees let it be known in no uncertain tones that the balking outfielder never will play for them again. Wakefield's previous activity as a member of the Yankees was confined to three pinch-hit appearances in which he singled, walked and struck out.

"The Yankees do not want Wakefield," said Arthur (Red) Patterson, club secretary. "He will not be asked to return. Some disposition of his case will be announced soon."

Patterson hinted strongly that Dick will be sold to another big league club. Rumor had Wakefield going to a National League team.

Whether the Yankees reinstated Wakefield of their own volition or did so under pressure from Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler is a matter of
