Fractured Skull Is Found To Have Been Cause Of Death

SUMMERSIDE — A fractured skull and other multiple injuries were found by a coroner's jury at Summerside last evening to have been the cause of death of Stanley James Crossman who came to his death at Sherbrooke, Prince County, on the Central Street extension, three tenths of a mile north of the Pope Road intersection on, or about midnight, September 27, 1958, when the 1950 Pontiac car he was driving left the road, went into the ditch, struck a culvert, turned over, and threw the deceased out, causing a fracture of the base of the skull and other multiple injuries".

Dr. A.R. Grant, the first of five witnesses at the inquest, told of being a passenger in a car which discovered the accident. He said he had examined the deceased and found him to be dead.

He said the deceased was found lying under the overturned car, but the car was not resting on his body.

Iley Crooks, the second witness, an employee at RCAF Station Summerside, where the deceased also worked, told of talking with him earlier in the evening at the airport. The witness said he had done work on the Crossman car about two months previous to the accident and the front wheel brakes had been pretty well worn at that time.

William MacLellan, mechanic at Reliable Motors, told of his work in towing the car from the ditch after the accident, and of a subsequent examination of the vehicle. He said it appeared that the left front wheel brake had not been working for some time, and that the right front wheel lining was badly worn. In applying the brakes, he said would tend for the car to pull to the right.

Ronald MacArthur, the fourth witness, indentified pictures taken at the scene of the accident.

Cnst. R.E. Mailman, of the Summerside Detachment of the RCMP, described police investigation into the fatality. He said the rain was falling heavily, visibility was poor, there was no white line on the highway at this point, the shoulder of the road was soft and muddy.

He said marks on the highway indicated the vehicle had been proceeding towards Summerside, and the car had proceeded 68 feet from where it left the highway until it struck a culvert in the ditch and overturned.

The pathologist's report on the autopsy described the various injuries, noted a blood alcohol content of 4.0 MGM-ML, and described the cause of death as including "a fracture of base of skull with damage to underlying brain sustained while under the influence of alcohol".

Coroner Dr. W.E. Callaghan presided at the inquest. Members of the coroner's jury were Errol T. Laughlin, Foreman, Leslie Willard Fox, Clarence J. Gaudet, G. Keith Pickard, George P. Philip, Charles S. Read, J. Elmer Murphy.

An Exclusive Biography

The Private Papers of MACKENZIE KING

This outstanding Canadian statesman was "holding the reins" even at the rocking-horse stage of his childhood! How did the early influences of his mother and the ghost of his rebel grandfather, William Lyon Mackenzie, encourage his young sense of family responsibility to expand and eventually absorb the political responsibilities of a vast nation? The formative years of a great man are traced vividly by Robert MacGregor Dawson, who actually "set up shop" in Mackenzie King's Ottawa residence to capture the authentic atmosphere of his life. You'll be absorbed by the intimate excerpts from his private papers, which are used liberally in this significant biography.

Traditional vs Abstract

Do you wonder if there is method in the madness of modern art? Do you think traditional, realistic artists are stodgy? Weekend Magazine offers some pointers to make you feel more at home with both, when two contrasting schools state their intentions in painting.

Miss Grey Cup

Anticipating this year's Grey Cup festivities, a Weekend photofeature shows the behind-the-scenes excitement when a profusion of Canadian beauties gather. How and when did this spirited contest originate, and why is each entry the apple of her city's eye?

Gordie Howe

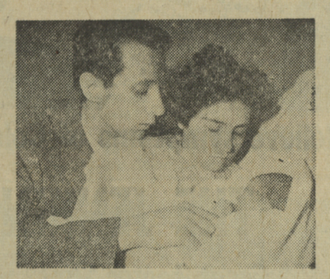
has a lot of points in his favor. In Andy O'Brien's revised opinion, he is in the skating for the title of All-Time Greatest — hot on the trail of Rocket Richard. Admired and feared by Montreal hockey fans, Howe receives the majority of his fan mail and "boos" from this city. Discover Howe in our Weekend Magazine.

Fair Competitor

Raz Ma Taz is Dee Hall-Holland's best friend. No—14-year-old Dee is not a "hep-cat," but an accomplished horsewoman. The fourth generation of her family to enter the Toronto Royal Winter Fair, she has been riding competitively since the age of six. Read and see in Weekend how the life of a young equestrienne differs from that of the average teenager.

Sacha Croons, B.B. Swoons

A beautiful B.B. makes no objections when Sacha Distel wants to rock her in his cradle of love. Why did beautiful Brigitte Bardot choose this handsome Frenchman from her vast multitude of pursuers. Weekend's photofeature tells you about the romance that set Hollywood columnists buzzing about B.B.



Quints' First Baby

For Cecile, famous one-fifth of the Dionne quint combination, her new baby is more than the quintessence of her life. The bouncing boy erases fears long-harbored by the sisters — that they could not lead a normal life. Exclusive color pictures of the new family will be released in this issue of Weekend.

Getting Away with Murder

was the chief occupation of notorious lady-killer Rheal Bertrand. A fast-moving exposition by Weekend Staff Writer Stanley Handman traces his career in pursuit of crime, women and easy money. Read how Bertrand, after pulling the wool over the eyes of his gullible "patients," finally pulled the noose over his neck.
