Old Established S'side Paper Ceases Publication

The Summerside Pioneer announced yesterday afternoon that it is ceasing publication. Its circulation is being taken over by the Journal which will publish under the name of Journal and Pioneer.

The Pioneer carried the news of its disappearance from the publishing field in the following front page story: "Due to the tremendous increase the past few years in wages and materials, it is impossible any longer to provide a first class newspaper for what we are presently charging for subscriptions and advertising."

The Pioneer was first published at Alberton by John L. MacKinnon and removed to Summerside in 1880. It afterwards passed into the hands of a company in support of the Liberal Party. Connected with it was the Island Farmer. Its editors included the late B. D. Higgs, subsequently managing director and editor of The Guardian.

The late John Mollison and the late John Pond were among its more prominent editors. They were followed by the late George Lockhart and Bertram Robertson and J. P. MacInnis. Mr. MacInnis was editor ten years, from 1936 to 1946, and in 1943 there was a change of ownership. In April 1944 the paper moved into a new brick building on Water Street East from its home of many years on Central Street.

The Young Adult Group also reorganized on Monday night with the president, Gerald MacKenzie in the chair. Fifteen members and three guests were present. The worship period was conducted by Elizabeth Caruthers and the Bible study led by Rev. Mr. Murray.
