

SAVE THE MOTHERS

Dodd's Kidney Pills Their Only Safety in Female Diseases.

You have seen a flower-nipped by frost, fade and die in the flush of its beauty. That is how women die when attacked by any of the diseases peculiar to their sex.

Woman's burdens are woefully heavy. Her sufferings are agonizing. Her patience is grand. Disease preys upon her. The light dies out of her eyes, her steps become slow and dragging; she loses flesh; grows sallow, listless, droops like a flower. Then she dies. Her family is left to the cold mercy of the world.

"Mother's dead!" What a piteous phrase. What sufferings have been endured before it was used. Why should mothers, wives, sisters suffer so? They need not. Dodd's Kidney Pills will quickly and thoroughly cure all cases of Female Weakness. They never fail. They give health, strength, courage: a new lease of life.

We are the original manufacturers of portable Vapor Baths. We have, during the last ten years supplied thousands of our Baths to physicians, hospitals, sanitariums, etc. and we are now, for the first time, advertising them direct to the general public.

IN BUYING A VAPOR BATH Get one with a steel frame that stands on the floor. If a manufacturer does not show you a cut of a frame without the covering you may take it for granted that his "steel frame" is a wire hoop that rests on the shoulder of the bather. We insist on seeing a sample of material before ordering. We make our own covering material and print it with a handsome "all over" pattern of Niagara Falls.

Get one with a thermometer attachment. Don't get one that is too hot or too cold. It will be of no benefit to you.

Get one that you can return and have your money back if not satisfactory in every way.

Send for sample of material and interesting booklet that will tell you all about Vapor Baths.

Vapor Baths are an acknowledged household necessity. Turkish, Hot Air, Vapor, sulphur or medicated Baths at Home, etc. Purifies system, produces cleanliness, health, strength. CHAPTER I.

THE BEAUTIFUL, MYSTERIOUS STRANGER.

"I wonder if it is true that coming events cast their dark, grim shadows on before? I have had such a strange foreboding of impending evil all day long, and as night draws nearer, my heart grows heavier and heavier."

A slight, girlish figure springs up from the white sands as she utters the words and turns away from the sea with a shudder, walking hurriedly up the steep, narrow, irregular path that leads to the arched entrance of Black-Tor Light-House.

The warm September afternoon is drawing to a close. The lurid rays of the setting sun glint with a touch of gold the picturesque Florida coast, the motionless sea, and the light-house that rises like a towering monument in gray stone out of the curling waves which surround it, and the narrow strip of fertile island, dotted with dense thickets of palm and wind-blown orange trees, on which it stands.

The heat, for this season of the year, has been almost intolerable, and night is coming on in sullen sultriness. For hours no breath of air has stirred the leaves of the trees, or broken the calm of the purple sea.

It is the dead calm which, in tropical lands, precedes the hurricane of the September tempest.

The slim figure, fitting up the path, sinks down on the worn door-sill of the light-house, anxiously watching the dark, warning clouds that creep over the sky in advance of the on-coming night.

"The storm will break before Mark returns from Rocky Point," she murmurs. "What can detain him? He should have been here by noon."

Even as she spoke, a few rain-drops splashed upon her upturned face.

"It's coming," she cried, in affright, straining her eyes toward the distant line of shore. "The terrible storm! God watch over Mark, and speed his boat safe home!"

As she gazed, the gloaming deepened into inky darkness, and the storm began.

The slender palms bent to and fro like reeds before the wind. Lightning flashed luridly, and terrific crashes of thunder mingled with the torrent of rain, lashing the angry sea into turbulent waves that rose mountain high, beating with wild, mad fury and mighty roar against the impregnable rocks of the old gray light-house.

Mark Sefton, the keeper of the light, had gone to Rocky Point early that morning, and all the way the parting words of his pretty young wife haunted him, try as hard as he would to forget them.

"Don't go, Mark," she had pleaded, earnestly. "I feel sure something will happen before you return. I have a premonition—"

"Nonsense," he had cut in, with a hearty, cheery laugh. "Don't be foolish and whimsical, Nella. Nothing is going to happen. Nothing could happen. I shall be back before the storm sets in, and in time to light up."

Darkness had crept on, the storm had burst, but where was Mark?

Suddenly Nella remembered the light. She had quite forgotten it. Great heaven! what if any ship was out in that gulf of blackness without that beacon light to guide her?

With winged feet Nella sped up the spiral stairway that led to the summit of the great tower. A moment more and a broad glare of light shot out from the great lamp, sending a ruddy glow over the vortex of seething waters that lashed the walls of the old light-house till it trembled and rocked on its foundation.

"Heaven grant that no vessel is out breasting the fearful storm—to have need of the signal in the tower to warn her off the dangerous reefs."

Hark! what was that sounded over the fierce roar of the maddened elements, and the shrill, piercing cries of the storm-driven sea-gulls?

Cured of Asthma After Eight Years of Almost Constant Suffering—She Says the Absolute Freedom From the Disease Seems Like a Dream—Clarke's Kola Compound Cures.

Mrs. J. Wise, Mt. Pleasant, Vancouver, B.C. writes: "I have been a great sufferer from bronchial asthma for the past eight years, many times having to sit up nearly all night. Through the advice of a friend who had been cured by Clarke's Kola Compound I resolved as a last resort to try it. The first bottle did not relieve me much, but before I had finished the third bottle the attacks ceased altogether, and during the past six months of damp and cold weather have not had a single attack. It seems something like a dream to be free from this worst of all diseases after so many years of suffering. I have since my recovery recommended this remedy to others suffering as I was, and know many others in this city whom it has cured. I consider it a marvelous remedy, and would urge any person suffering from this disease to try it."

Three bottles are guaranteed to cure. A free sample bottle of Clarke's Kola Compound will be sent to any person who has asthma, mentioning this paper. Address the Griffiths & Macpherson Co., sole Canadian agents, 121 Church-street, Toronto, Ont.

Clarke's Kola Compound should not be confounded with the other Kola preparations on the market, as this is altogether a different preparation, designated especially for the cure of asthma. All druggists, Price 75¢ per bottle.

NELLA SEFTON STARED HER EYES TO ESCAPE. The sound was repeated in quick succession. Suddenly the horrible truth burst upon her. The lamp had been lighted too late. A ship is in distress. In the inky darkness she has drifted on the fatal rocks, and is signaling for help.

Boom! boom! boom! peal the minute guns.

Nella Sefton, clinging to the rails of the spiral stairway, watches the horrible scene from the tower, as the blinding flashes of lightning reveal it to her gaze, in terror too great for words.

In the meteoric light she sees the great ship strike the fatal rock, and dark forms casting themselves into the seething whirlpool. Then darkness reigns.

"Mark," she moans, "God save you from being on the sea to-night!"

Another flash, and she sees a dark object one instant high on the mad waves, then hurled beneath them. It is a plank with a dark figure clinging to it. His white face was turned to her for one awful instant; and the wildest cry that ever fell from human lips burst from Nella Sefton's. She had seen and recognized—Mark.

But in this appalling moment her daring courage did not forsake her. In that glance she had realized his peril, and she knew the only means of saving him would be to fling him the life-ropes.

If he were to miss it, that meant death—death in the horrible sea she had always dreaded so much! but, ah! she must not think of that now.

Down the spiral stairway Nella flew like a storm-driven swallow, out of the light-house, and out on the sands. The flying spray dashed in her face, and the fierce tempest almost hurled her from her feet, but she scarcely heeded the hurricane.

A moment more, that seemed the length of eternity, and she had unfurled the great coil of rope which was made fast at one end of the iron ring embedded in the solid rock.

And over the wild fury of the storm, the man clinging to the plank heard her voice.

"The rope, Mark! Catch the rope!"

Once, twice it eluded his frantic grasp. Again it was hurled out over the mountain waves. Oh, God! would he reach it, or miss it? Nella could only fall on her knees and pray. A breathless moment of horrible suspense. God had answered Nella's prayer. Mark had seized the life-ropes in his strong right hand.

Terror lent strength to Nella's slender arms. Bracing herself firmly against the projecting rock, she succeeded in drawing Mark to the shore.

As his feet touched the sand and he clambered up on it with her aid, she discovered it was not a plank to which he clung, but the body of a woman.

A moment more and he had staggered, panting and exhausted, into the living room, followed by Nella, and had lain his dripping burden down upon the old chintz-covered settee.

"Never mind me. Do what you can for them, Nella," he said. "There's two of 'em. I picked them up in the water, just before my boat struck the rocks, and threw us into the waves."

As she spoke, he threw back the dark cloak which enveloped the unconscious figure, and Nella saw a tiny infant, which the woman held clutched tightly in her arms.

But it was not the sight of the child, pitiful as the scene was, that brought that startled cry to Nella Sefton's lips.

It was a face as gloriously beautiful as the dawn, and the perilous risk of losing his own.

It was a face as gloriously beautiful as a poet's dream, or artist's ideal; pallid as marble, framed in a mass of dark curling hair, lying in short clusters over her brow, from which the water dripped in tiny pools; eye-brows dark and perfectly arched; and lashes long and silken, curling like fringes over the perfect rounded cheeks—a dimpled chin, and lips that seemed too delicately curved and beautiful to have ever been invested with the breath of life.

A strange, subtle, fierce, jealous pang shot through Nella's heart as she gazed. The rapt admiration in Mark's eyes pained her—she could not tell why.

But there was no time to waste precious moments, standing there idly, gazing at the helpless creatures.

Headless that she herself was drenched, Nella sent Mark from the room, and set about restoring the waifs.

In a trice she had divested them of their clothing, wrapped them in soft woolen blankets, and, with Mark's help, bore them to her own chamber, where her own slumbering, fair-haired baby—little Verlie—lay.

And there, a few moments later, under the influence of the powerful stimulants which had been administered—the beautiful, young stranger opened her great, dark, velvety eyes; and they flared wonderingly not into Nella's, but up into Mark's face.

"Where am I, and where is baby?" she murmured, faintly.

"Here is the little one; you are both safe and sound, and in good hands," responded Mark, cheerily, as he placed the little one in her arms.

At that instant memory surged back again to her own overwrought brain.

"Oh, I remember—I remember all," she cried, with a wailing shriek.

ARE YOUR Artificial Teeth...

:: Giving Satisfaction

Many persons who are compelled to wear Artificial Teeth on Plates, find that the Rubber or Vulcanite plate causes heating of the mouth, bad taste, shrinkage of the gum, etc., finally causing the plate to get loose. Sometimes sore lips, sore mouths and sore throats are caused directly from the wearing of a rubber or Vulcanite plate. While it is true that a majority of persons can wear rubber or vulcanite plates with satisfaction, yet it is a fact that to a large percentage the same material is poisonous.

We have seen many cases where people who had rubber or vulcanite plates were continually suffering from the above causes, and came to us for relief. In cases of that kind we always recommend a metal plate, either of

Gold, Platinum, Aluminum

Our reason for recommending a metal plate is that it is a conductor of heat and cold, thereby keeping the mouth cool, and it is non irritating, and is thinner, lighter and stronger than any other plate. It is clean in every particular, and is enjoyed by the wearer. You can have your impression taken and have a Gold, Platinum or Aluminum plate made same day, fully guaranteed because we make them ourselves and know all about the material used. We also make the famous THURLO PLATE, noted for its thinness, coolness and durability.

We would like you to call and see specimens of all our different lines of work including our Continuous Gum Plates—the very finest plate work known to Dental Science. Every piece of work done by us must give entire satisfaction to the patient else we will not allow it to leave our office.
