Privilege To Refuse Vote Established For Members

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Barring a rules change in the future, the privilege of an MP to refuse to vote for or against a motion in the Commons appears to have been firmly cemented into Canadian parliamentary practice.

The right of abstention was a bit hazy until Monday night's mass refusal to vote by 14 New Democrats brought an up-to-date ruling on the question by Speaker Alan Macnaughton.

The Commons may see further mass abstentions this session, especially from New Democratic and Social Credit parties.

Should either of the smaller parties or both agree with criticisms of the government by the official opposition, the Progressive Conservatives and the Conservatives embody these criticisms in a non-confidence motion, the small parties are in difficulties. Passage of such a motion would mean another election, something they are pledged to prevent.

On the other hand, defeat of a non-confidence motion with the help of their votes can have the appearance of giving the government a clean bill of health.

NDP ABSTAINS

So on Monday night the New Democrats announced they agreed with the criticism of the Conservative non - confidence motion but would not vote for the motion because such a step would be interpreted as breaking their public promise to give the Liberals a reasonable chance to govern. The course chosen was abstention.

Opposition leader Diefenbaker challenged their action, quoting various authorities on parliamentary procedure in support of his contention that an MP who remains in the chamber must declare for or against a motion being voted on.

Speaker Macnaughton rejected this, and offirmed a 1945 opinion by a former Speaker, James Glen, in the case of an individual MP who abstained from voting. Mr. Glen noted that a Commons rules committee in 1944 turned down the proposal that an MP be required to vote if the remains in the chamber when a vote is called.

While there may be efforts to write a new rule banning abstentions, it's not likely to get the support of the smaller parties while they are in the minority, the Liberals. Removal of either or both smaller parties gives the Liberals a better chance of surviving a non-confidence motion.

Canada May Get Contracts For New F-111 Components

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada is expected to get sub-contracts for the new F-111 jet fighter-bomber to be built in the United States by General Dynamics corporation, informed sources here say.

Canadair Limited, Montreal subsidiary of General Dynamics, is negotiating with its parent firm and, the sources said, expects to get some contracts for F-111 components. Other Canadian companies may also enter successful bids on components, especially in the electronics field.

An industry spokesman stressed that orders were not likely to be big enough to permit Canadair to rehire the some 5,000 employees it has laid off in recent years.

Canadair has been the big defence contractor in Canada since 1960 and a source close to the cabinet said the firm cannot, at least at this time, expect any special government help in obtaining new business.

NEW CONTRACTS

Aircraft industry spokesmen said new Canadian government contracts cannot be expected until the Liberal government decides what it wants to do about roles and tasks assigned to the armed forces. This would take some time.

The only new defence program announced by the Liberal government so far is development, with British participation, of a battlefield surveillance drone for the Canadian and British armies.

However, this is a fairly minor project. A production program would amount to some $25,000,000—provided tests are successful. The drone is being developed by Canadair and will be tested in the U.S., probably next year.

Russia Seen Leading U.S. In Arms Field

WASHINGTON (AP)—Dr. Edward Teller said here he believes Russia is ahead of the United States in the field of nuclear explosives and may be the first to develop an effective defence against missiles.

Teller, known as the "father of the nuclear bomb" addressed about 100 House of Representatives members at a breakfast.

Teller said there "are strong indications" that Russia has outdistanced the United States in nuclear testing and experimentation. He theorized that some of the experiments may deal with work on a defence against missiles.

CONGA LINE CARRIES RISK

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A judge said it: When a middle-aged man dances in a conga line with spirited chorus girls, he assumes a certain risk.

Superior Judge Frederick F. Houser has dismissed the $253,600 damage suit Benjamin Satz, 58, had filed against a Las Vegas resort hotel. Satz claimed a chorine induced him to join a conga line and one of the girls kicked him, causing a blood clot in the leg.

Satz, a Long Beach, Calif., furniture man, pointed out that he had lost weight—from 220 pounds down to 200—and claimed he suffered permanent injuries. The judge said he had assumed his own risks when he climbed on the stage to dance.

Criticism Is Levelled At Novelists

OTTAWA (CP)—John Wyllie, Montreal novelist and critic, charged here that far too many of today's serious novelists fall into the category of "onion-peelers."

"I would suggest that there must be writers with the courage to commit themselves on the important issues which face us all," he said in delivering the keynote address at the 42nd annual Canadian Authors' Association.

Mr. Wyllie defined the "onion-peelers" as writers who carry on self-conscious monologues about their own growing pains . . . literary hypochondriacs who hang their morbid anxieties about themselves and their environment on the thinnest excuses for a plot.

"We need authors who will dare more than the formula writers and will present the public with a provocative picture of humanity as we stand on the brink of disaster, or on the threshold of the greatest era in history."

"More urgently than ever before, our communicators should be communicating."

Authors Feel Concern Over Council Action

OTTAWA (CP)—Concern was expressed at the annual convention of the Canadian Authors' Association here over rejection by the Canada Council of a request for financial assistance for the association's official magazine.

National president Dr. Helen Creighton, commenting in her annual report on the council's decision not to aid the Canadian Author and Bookman, said:

"I am bewildered, for it seems a very foolish country that refuses to foster its authors."

She said the magazine is a unifying link and an important means of communication among the association's membership.

J. A. Gibson, president, Canadian Writers' Foundation, noted that the foundation's grant from the council also had been cut. The foundation now was helping to support about a dozen beneficiaries but it would not be able to assist more without receiving more funds.

Dr. Creighton also appealed to established writers for their support of the association.

There are unfortunately some Canadian authors who have reached such lofty heights that they stand aloof from this association."

Opening lead — king of diamonds.

Perfect card play would be relatively easy if you could see all four hands. The difficulty in most deals lies primarily in diagnosing how the unseen hands are divided. Here is a case where West had only a tiny clue to guide him to the proper decision at the crucial point.

South was in four spades, having opened with a forcing two bid. Some players might quarrel with the two bid, since South didn't quite have game in his own hand, but, by and large, not many would criticize his choice.

West cashed three diamonds and shifted to a trump. Declarer won with the ten, and, seeing he would probably lose another trick unless the queen of hearts fell when he later cashed the A-K, decided to play all his trumps in the hope the defense might make a mistake in discarding.

After he had cashed four more rounds of trumps, on which West discarded a diamond and a club, and East the 2-4-5 of hearts, this became the position:

South now led his last trump and West had to find the proper discard. He had to choose between unguarding the king of clubs or the queen of hearts. He guessed right when he discarded a club and the outcome was that South went down one.

In asense, the club discard was a guess— but it was an educated guess. East had discarded the 2-4-5 of hearts in that order and West therefore knew his partner had no values in heart He furthermore knew that East did not have the three. This meant that declarer had the A-K-3 and that the hearts had to be guarded at any cost.
