"HIS WIFE'S WITH HIM!"

Leslie Dale groaned. Then he swore. "One of the firm's lovely little remittance boys from home I'll bet," he said. "Old Harwood keeps a limitless supply of cousins and nephews, who go on coming out. But as a rule he has the sense to hang on to the pretty boys in Shanghai where they're less likely to get hurt."

Janet shook a finger at him. "I was pulling your leg," she said, "and you mustn't adopt a prejudice. He's got a charming smile, a nice firm handshake, and almost the prettiest girl I've ever seen for a wife!"

"You must have got matey very quickly, Janet, if he started hauling out his family snapshots!" "We made friends—I think," said Janet slowly. "Pat is helping him with his baggage. He seems to have the dickens of a lot, and of course he doesn't speak any Chinese—"

"Ye gods!" "His wife's with him, Leslie. I saw Janet took no notice of the inter-ruption. "What!"

"It's true," Janet glanced round her. "It's as well that you've got two guest rooms," she went on. "She looks as if she might be pretty modern in her outlook on life. It might be as well if I helped you to clean things up a bit. And you'll have to warn the houseboys. Of course they can come to us for a few days if that would help at all."

Leslie Dale was waking up and down the room. "But this isn't sane, Janet," he said over and over again. "It's a raving hussy. What is there of a girl—a pretty girl to do here? How will he do a job of work, with a girl to worry about all the time? How can I live with a woman in the house after all this time? Janet, my dear, never before have I needed so badly to be able to forget that you are a person's wife, so that I could swear decently and without bursting!"

"O don't," said Janet, smiling. "Leslie swung round and stared at her. "You agree with me, don't you?" he demanded. "I'm not sure, Leslie."

"Not sure?" "No. There are other things in life besides work, Leslie. Even you may find it out one day. Pat and I have, you know. All the things you're afraid of—they won't amount to a row of beans if the girl has stuffing in her; and if she happens to love her husband."

Dale shrugged his shoulders.

SEARCH ENDS FOR B.C. MAN

Mr. Geo. Hallett, Vernon, B.C., has been searching for relief from rheumatic pain for fifteen years. Recently his search ended. Mr. Hallett said, "It wasn't until I tried Sarnak that I had found a medicine that brought an end to my suffering."

If you suffer from rheumatic, neuritic, or arthritic pain, sciatica or backache or from some stomach, kidney or liver disorders, nutritional anemia and nervousness, try Sarnak for one week, prove that Sarnak can help you. $1.35 at all drug stores.

"There you take me out of my depth," he said. "You mean—out of experience," retorted Janet shrewdly. "If you prefer to put it like that, I think I do," Janet moved across the room and put a hand on Dale's sleeve. "You'll give them a chance, Leslie, won't you? I knew you'd hate it. But don't let it show up the moment they arrive. They're probably not feeling any too comfortably about it themselves."

Dale grinned. "You do know how to handle me? don't you, Janet? Sorry I behaved so badly. You rather threw me off my balance for a moment. What a nice person you are!"

"Pat's been nice to me for just on forty years," said Janet, and for once spoke softly. "Even that can be catching, you know."

On an unexplained impulse they shook hands. As they did so a high clear voice sounded from outside the window:

Is that really the house, Mr. James? But I think it looks charming—honestly I do. Don't you, Gerald?"

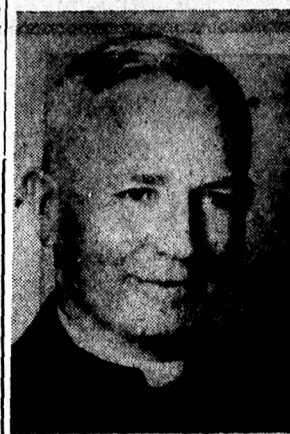

Janet moved quickly towards the verandah. Leslie Dale hastily pocketed his pipe, twitched a couple of cushions straight, and was irritated to find that his pulses had appreciably quickened at the prospect of meeting his uninvited guests.

Bishop Boyle Speaks On Work Of The Christophers In Address To Rotarians

His Excellency Bishop Boyle

The New Year address to the Charlottetown Rotary Club yesterday was given by His Excellency Bishop James Boyle. He said in part:

"It is my intention today to outline briefly the work of the Christophers in the United States. The word 'Christopher' derived from the Greek word, 'Christophoros' means Christ-bearer."

"The aim of the Christophers according to its founder is to encourage and reintegrate into every segment of American life the fundamentals of Christian civilization upon which our country was founded and without which it cannot endure. Each Christ-bearer or Christ-bearer strives in a personal way to bring Christ into the 'market place'."

"The Christophers are organized into (1) education, (2) government, (3) labor-management, (4) newspapers, magazines, books, radio and movies, as well as all other phases of public life that affect the well-being of the majority of people."

"The Christopher movement has been in operation in the United States since 1945 and has made a strong appeal to persons of all faiths. Its founder is Reverend James Keller, a Maryknoll Missionary. He is the director of the movement, and the official name and address is 'The Christophers', 18 East Forty-eighth Street, New York City."

"While visiting Montreal last month, I had the privilege of hearing Father Keller speak on the 'Christophers' at a banquet put on by the Canadian Club at which he gave a brief summary of the philosophy underlying the movement which is given in detail in the four books he has published—'You Can Change the World', 'Three Minutes a Day', 'One Moment Please' and 'Careers That Change Your World'."

"Father Keller says: 'Less than 1% of humanity have caused most of the world's recent major troubles. This handful regardless of their labels—share a militant hatred of the basic truth upon which Christian Civilization was founded (and without which it cannot endure) each and every human being is a child of God, deriving his rights from God, and not from the State. Anyone driven by such hatred seldom keeps it to himself. He becomes a missionary of evil, striving to reach the many, not the few. He usually gets into a field that touches the lives of all people the world over: education, government, trade unions, the writing end of newspapers, magazines, books, radio, motion pictures and television.'

"If another 1% go as apostolic workers, as Christophers or Christ-bearers into these same fields and strive as hard to restore the fundamental truth the other 1% are working furiously to eliminate, the trend toward 'darkness' can be changed for the better."

"Tens of thousands have already gone as Christophers into the market place. Their aim is to find a million. It is far more important to get workers of good in than to get workers of evil out, essential as this latter is. Positive constructive action is needed. Little is accomplished by complaining and criticizing."

Fundamental Purpose Of The Christophers

"It is better to light one candle than to curse the darkness." "Good people look out for themselves while the wicked take care of the rest of us." "Business and professional men have three interests, their business or profession, their families, and their weekends, while subversive elements influence the mainstreams of the nation's life." "If a nation is not ruled by God it will be ruled by tyrants." This last is taken from a speech made by William Penn, the Quaker who founded the State of Pennsylvania. Penn's principle is verified today in the slavery of the Soviet Union. "A Russian citizen" says, Robert Ripley's "Believe It or Not" may not own land, may not choose his own job, may not strike, may not employ labor, may not own jewelry, may not be friends with a foreigner, may not picket, may not travel, may not ring a church bell, and is forbidden freedom of speech; freedom of religion; freedom of assembly; freedom of soul."

Some Typical Letters Sent To The Christophers

The following is from a lady in New York State: "I am a Protestant. I study each summer at Teachers' College. The general tendency is definitely anti-religious. Enclosed is a short excerpt from one book which bothers me both as a teacher and the mother of a nineteen-year-old. This is what students are getting these days. 'Supernaturalism in religion should be replaced by a naturalism in which man is recognized as a part of nature—doctrines with respect to atonement, inspiration, incarnation, salvation and judgment are no longer socially significant.'"

She ends her letter by saying: "Any help will be appreciated—I am determined to do anything I can—With deepest gratitude for your book—'You Can Change the World'—which is worn out from travelling."

Another letter to the Christophers from an army officer in Washington reads as follows: "I am a Protestant and I think you are on the right track with the Christopher idea of getting better-quality people into govern-

Prayer Of The Christophers

"Lord, make me an instrument of Your peace. Where there is hatred, let me sow love; where there is injury, pardon; where there is doubt, faith; where there is despair, hope; where there is darkness, light; and where there is sadness, joy. O Divine Master, grant that I may not so much seek to be consoled as to console; to be understood as to understand; to be loved as to love; for it is in giving that we receive; it is in pardoning that we are pardoned; and it is in dying that we are born to eternal life."—St. Francis of Assisi.
