HONOR SAVED BY A DAY.

It was Leap Year, but the Simple Folk Didn't Know It.

At the time when, in England, the punishment for overstaying a furlough was hanging a poor soldier who had, or thought he had, overstaid his time was on the top of a stagecoach prepared to return to his post. His mother, brother and sweetheart vainly entreated him to remain. The scene is depicted by a looker who truthfully adds that it reflects upon Teddy.

"Come down wid ye, Teddy!" cried his mother. "Come down now to your old mother! Sure it's flog ye they will and they'll break the heart of me, Teddy! Come down, Teddy, darlint."

"It's honor that won't let me, mother," the soldier said as he set his teeth.

"Teddy, come down, ye fool of the world!" said his brother. "Come along down wid ye!"

"It's honor, brother, it's honor," replied Teddy sturdily.

"Oh, Teddy," cried his sweetheart, "come down! Sure, it's me, your own Kathleen, that bids ye. Come down, or ye'll break the heart of me, Teddy! Come down!"

"It's honor, Kathleen: it's honor bright that tells me to go," said Teddy, fixing his eyes steadily before him.

"Come down, Teddy, honey!"

"Teddy, ye fool, come down!"

"Oh, Teddy, come down to me!" was the chorus from mother, brother and sweetheart.

"Would you have me lose my honor?" exclaimed the soldier, not daring to look at his dear ones, whose words moved him so deeply.

The next moment the whip cracked and the coach was off, bearing the gallant Teddy with it. Then a gentleman who sat beside him spoke up:

"When does your furlough expire?" he asked.

"The 1st of March, sir, bad luck to it of all the bad days of the world! And one way it come sudden on me like a bolt."

"The 1st of March? Why, my good fellow, you have a day to spare, then. Tomorrow is the 1st of March. It is leap year, and February has 29 days."

"Twenty-nine days, is it?" cried Teddy, his countenance illumined with hope.

"Say it again! You're sure of that same?"

The next moment he leaped from the coach and ran back to his lamenting friends.

"Oh, mother, mother, it's your almanac that deceived us!" he exclaimed, and in the embrace of his joy he hugged mother, brother and Kathleen. "My word's true, and it's a happy man I am! But I forgot to consult the previous year's almanac.—Youth's Companion.

THE BARGAIN CORNER.

The old man who looks out at the world with clear and healthy eyes cannot help feeling great gratification at the thought that his children have inherited from him no weakness or tendency to disease. The healthy old man is the man who has throughout his life kept his digestion good and his blood pure. Not one in a thousand does it. Germs go through the healthy body without effect. Let them once find a weak spot, they will develop by the million and the blood will be full of them. Instead of giving strength to the tissues, it will force upon them unwholesome matter, and the man will lose flesh and the more susceptible he is to disease. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the only medicine that absolutely and infallibly cures all blood diseases, and almost all diseases are blood diseases. It isn't a medicine for some one particular so-called disease. It is a medicine for the whole body. It forces out all the germs of disease, and replaces impurities with rich, red blood.

His Early Training at Fate.
The sympathy women who were visiting the jail were deeply impressed by the good looking young man in one of the second tier of cells.

"You do not look like a guilty man," said one of the boldest of them as she stepped up to his cell, "but the guard tells me that you already have been convicted. To what, may I ask, do you attribute your—your—misfortune?"

"To my early training when a child," he replied.

"Poor fellow!" she said sympathetically. "How much ignorant or careless parents have to answer for in this world! What particular feature of your early training do you think had the effect of bringing you here?"

"Learning to write."

She was still wondering what the poor fellow could mean, when the jailer suggested:

"He's up for forgery, you know."—Chicago Post.

A Pirate in Bad Luck.

Mr. Frank R. Stockton, writing of "The Buccaneers of Our Coast" in St. Nicholas, says of the celebrated Bartholemey Portuguese: In the way of well defined and conspicuous ups and downs few lives have surpassed that of Bartholemey. He had many adventures after the desperate affair in the bay of Campenchy, but they must all have turned out badly for him, and consequently very fortunately for divers and sundry Spanish vessels, and during the rest of his life he bore the reputation of an unfortunate pirate. He was one of those men whose success seemed to have depended entirely upon his own exertions. If there happened to be the least chance of his doing anything, he generally did it. Spanish cannon, well armed Spanish crews, manacles, imprisonment, the dangers of the ocean to a man who could not swim, bloodhounds, alligators, wild beasts, awful forests impenetrable to common men—all were bravely met and triumphed over by Bartholemey. Yet when it came to ordinary good fortune, such as any pirate might expect, Bartholemey the Portuguese found that he had no chance at all. But he was not a common pirate and was therefore obliged to be content with his uncommon career. He eventually settled in the island of Jamaica, but nobody knows what became of him.

Thoughtful.
Mrs. Greene—My husband is such a thoughtful man! He always goes down into the basement kitchen to smoke.

Mrs. Gray—And lets the smoke come up stairs into the dining room through the dumb waiter.

Mrs. Greene—Yes, but that's because he is absentminded, poor man! That has nothing to do with his thoughtfulness, you know.—Boston Transcript.

Exercise all the muscles every day of your life for ten minutes. Stop before you feel thoroughly tired. Never overtax the muscles, or they will revenge themselves.

A simple and very efficient disinfectant to pour down a sink is a small quantity of charcoal mixed with clear water.

TIPPING IS LIKE GAMBLING.

Walters Prefer It to Higher Wages With Elements of Chance Omitted.
An up town caterer, when speaking of the tipping evil the other day, said that he would like to abolish it in his place, but that this couldn't be done.

"I give my waiters $25 a month and their board," he continued. "If I were to offer them $60 with tipping prohibited, they would one and all go away. Yet I doubt whether they average $1 a day, which is less than the difference in tips. My place is a modest one, you know, and few tips are higher than 10 cents. Many of my customers, too, are women, who seldom tip at all.

"In my opinion the attraction in tipping to a waiter—that is, the reason he prefers it to higher wages with it prohibited—is the element of chance. He'd rather have $1 a day and the possibility of making $3 or $3 more in tips than a certain $3, not so much because of the additional gain involved as because of the uncertainty. It has the zest of gambling. He counts each dime he gets during the day, and when the aggregate reaches the higher figure just named, if not the lower, he feels all the triumph of a gambler who has broken the bank. Take away tipping, and you remove this stimulus which has added interest to his day's work and deprive him of what has made his toil a comparative pleasure. Even when he gets less than the sum I think my waiters average, $1, he feels like the gambler who considered that next to the pleasure of winning was that of losing.—New York Sun.

The Toilet Table.
Here are a few things which the woman who is thoroughly careful of complexion, teeth, etc., will always keep on her toilet table.

She should have an array of glass stoppered bottles containing alcohol, alum, camphor, borax, ammonia and glycerin or vaseline. A little camphor or water may be used as a wash for the mouth and throat if the breath is not sweet. Powdered alum applied to a fever sore will prevent it from becoming very unsightly and noticeable.

Insect stings or eruptions on the skin are removed by alcohol. A few grains of alum in tepid water will relieve people whose hands perspire very freely, rendering them unpleasantly moist.

Be careful in the use of scented soap. In many cases the perfume is simply a disguise for poor quality. A good glycerin or honey soap is always preferable. Of course one may rely on scented soap from a high class manufacturer. In addition to the soap for bathing, white castile should be kept for washing the hair.
