

Oil Pinch In Western Europe Begins To Hurt

LONDON (CP) — Thousands of automobile drivers in Britain, Sweden and Switzerland stayed off the highways Sunday as the pinch resulting from the Middle East war squeeze began to hurt.

The move was voluntary in Britain—in answer to a plea by the government to co-operate in saving petroleum products that come largely from the Suez Canal.

The Swiss government, however, banned Sunday motoring, except for special cases, as a forerunner to full scale rationing expected next month.

Sweden banned private motoring on weekends and directed filling stations not to sell any gasoline on weekends.

"DRAMATIC REDUCTION"

The British Automobile Association reported a "dramatic reduction" of traffic despite bright weather in some places. Traffic was down 50 per cent.

Even if the Suez Canal is opened in relatively quick time—and few expect this—western Europe faces a bleak winter. Oil and coal prices predict new rises in prices. Economists suggested that the temperatures in factories and office buildings be lowered as a fuel conservation measure.

Reports from European capitals provide the following picture:

Paris: France has cut fuel oil allocations and gasoline deliveries by about one-third and restricted private motoring. Filling stations will be closed from noon-Saturday to noon Monday starting next week.

ORDER SEVERE CUTS

Rome: The Italian government has ordered a five-per-cent cut in fuel oil supplies to the public as its only measure so far to conserve oil stocks, which are estimated to be sufficient for the next six weeks.

Bonn: West German oil firms have increased prices of gasoline and oil fuels and cut supplies to dealers by up to 20 per cent of their last three months' consumption. No rationing has been introduced. But the economics ministry is reported preparing legislation for the introduction of rationing if necessary.

Brussels: A 10-per-cent cut in gasoline deliveries to retailers will come into force Nov. 25. Unnecessary weekend motoring will also be banned and private bus trips stopped. Public bus services and taxis will be allowed to run normally.

VIENNA SUPPLY GOOD

Oso: The Norwegian government has ordered a 10-per-cent cut in deliveries of oil and gasoline for industry, heating and transport.

Vienna: There is little shortage of supplies in Austria except in fuel oils. This is not because of the closure of the Suez Canal but because of the large supplies that have to be sent to Russia under the Austrian state treaty agreement. Chancellor Julius Raab has asked the Soviet ambassador for a reduction in shipments.

Stresses Spiritual Value Of Remembrance Services

Following is the text of a sermon preached by Canon J. T. Irborn, Rector of St. Paul's Church, on Remembrance Day, November 11th:

Rev. 7: Part 14 "These are they which have come out of great tribulation."

Memorials and Memorial Services are nothing new to us, for they are as old as human history. From the very beginning of human history, as far back as we can trace it, the whole human race has been associated with memorials.

The Pagans of ancient time — or those who followed Ancient religions — no matter what race or colour or part of the world they inhabited, all have had Memorials of some form or other.

Looking to your Old Testament you find that when Joseph died there was held a great memorial service. The same thing was done at death of Moses, Joshua, David, and a host of other Old Testament saints.

And the greatest lasting Memorials these men of the Old Testament could have had, were not memorials built of marble or stone, but rather that their names found a place in the Religious writings of their race, which writings became our Old Testament.

"Little did they realize in their day that they were leaving such great memorials."

Not only were men themselves memorialized — but great events with which they were associated.

When God parted the waters of the Jordan and the hosts of Israel were saved from the pursuing Egyptians... the first word of God through Joshua was that they erect a Memorial Altar to serve as a constant reminder of that great event.

Later after the Seven Years War, and the land had been conquered, a great Altar of Stone was erected in the Jordan Valley as a Memorial of victory.

Then after the "Fullness of time had come" — that is after Jesus came as the Saviour of the World, among His last acts was His institution of the Lord's Supper, a memorial service for all His children until He shall come again.

the standard of greatness — there can be nothing greater — and it was Jesus who set this mark of greatness of living — in the words "Greater Love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

Surely we should see on the Remembrance Day above all days — the folly of giving life over to the values of little worth.

The late George Bernard Shaw, world-famous author, philosopher and playwright... had all this in mind when in writing to a very personal friend, Mr. A. B. Walker, he wrote — "This is the true joy of life, the being used for a mighty one; the being thoroughly worn out before you are thrown on the scrap-heap; the being a force of Nature instead of a feverish selfish little clod of ailments and grievances complaining that the world will not devote itself to making you happy."

Cynic that he was, yet Mr. Shaw has pictured here the vital elements in Christian Living.

another few years the world will not be drowned in blood again. I pray that the people of all nations of the world will be big and wise enough to work for everlasting peace, happiness and prosperity without allowing their prejudices, personal greed, or selfish ambitions to stand in the path of such an aim."

How I wish that these words could be placed before the eyes of the representatives of the United Nations Assembly at the present time when they are debating the terrible situation of the Middle East and the invasion of Hungary.

The question that comes to my mind this morning is... What must our war dead — our nations' heroes think of us today? The terrible drowning of Hungary in blood during the last two weeks... The state of war existing in the Near East... The preparations being made for a Third World War... which may break out any moment, the situation is so tense and full of awful possibilities. Yet we did make solemn promises... We were under sacred obligations... but how weak again has been our interest in, and our efforts towards world peace and security... Over 11 years since the end of the last War and still the United Nations lacking in any power to say to Russia or any other War — Intent Nations... STOP, to say "STOP" with the power of enforcing nations so to do.

The minutes of the last annual and regular meetings were read, approved and signed. It was moved and seconded that a bill for fruit be paid. Correspondence was read by the secretary.

MEMORIAL DAYS

We, too, have our own National Memorial Days — and with pride we observe Remembrance Day — This National Day of remembrance when we recall the heroism, the sacrifice of those who laid down their lives for us, and made sure for us, our goodly heritage.

Memorial Services such as we are holding this morning should prove of great value to all.

In the hustle and bustle of modern living — in a world where competition is keen — in a world where men's minds are so easily filled with material concerns we are prone to forget our benefactors — We forget that "We are brought with a Price" — the price of Supreme Sacrifice.

So — let us come to this Memorial Service in the true spirit of reverence and devotion — let us honour in truth those of whom it can be said: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

Let us not be unmindful of the fact that when we say as we so often do — that our dead "PAID THE SUPREME SACRIFICE," that we are in very truth saying, "THAT THEY BY THAT VERY SACRIFICE, set us an example of 'SUPREME LIVING'."

When Jesus Christ Himself sets

SACRIFICE AND SUFFERING

First, it is the true joy of life to be part of a great cause.

There is something glorious in knowing that you have personally have something worth-while to give to the world... that you have given your life — not to getting but giving — not to being served but like Jesus have given life to the service of others.

War — War always means sacrifice. Some must suffer Supreme Sacrifice. Only when the cause is righteous, when the cause is just, does such sacrifice shine out in all its glory, only when is it Supreme.

Let us not be unmindful of the truth then this day — That "It is out of sacrifices and suffering that the greatest things in Life come." As the great Apostle has reminded us "We are bought with a price." I like the lines written by Patience Strong in her book "Golden Rain" —

"To A Hero."

"There are many doors that open into Paradise — but none so fit with Glory as the Door of Sacrifice."

The Golden Door through which all heroes pass triumphantly — out into the rich reward of God's eternity.

Higher can no man aspire — and more he cannot give. To die, that others might be saved — to die that they may live... For him no slow declining years — no long and weary pain, but death with honour, going like a soldier and a Man.

So again this very Sunday, Remembrance Day we pay honour to our Nation's War dead — hold this Service in their memory, because it is the universal desire of the human heart to be remembered.

All cry out for that... No one wants to be entirely forgotten. "To be remembered." It is the one universal, overwhelming passion when life is ebbing away. On how many battlefields, or wherever War men have been wounded or dying... the great hope was to be remembered.

In this not the truth expressed in one of the Old Songs now forgotten by many... but inspired by the death of a young lad as he lay dying on the battlefield... "Farewell Mother, you may never see me."

Clasp me to your heart again, But, oh, you'll not forget me Mother.

If I'm numbered with the slain," And if our War dead would be remembered — surely it is just as true that they would have us remember Why they died — the cause for which they died.

This thought too has been so well expressed in the line of Col. John MacLean — a War Hero of the First World War — "In Flanders Fields," I quote but the last verse of his poem... "The up our quarrel with the foe, To you from falling hands we throw the torch: Be yours to hold it high. If ye break faith with us who die we shall not sleep, Though poppies grow in Flanders Field."

Yet, how very weakly we who were saved from death in the First World War, how weakly we held aloft "The Torch," how weak our efforts to keep faith with our war dead... So that in so few years, came World War Two, far far more devastating than the first... Then when blood began to flow in torrents, again we pledged... "This is the war to end all wars."

Again our soldier heroes pledged that we would forget neither them, nor the great and noble cause for which they die.

How one could illustrate this truth... but none clearer than that which you may see inscribed on the very walls of this, your own Church.

"All that I pray for is that they who are here shall not be forgotten when this war is over."

"I pray that our sacrifices were not have been in vain, and that in
