On a Large Scale.
"I have heard some very romantic stories about your successes," said the young woman as she looked out of the corners of her eyes and adjusted her mouth so as to make dimples.
"Yes?" responded Senator Sorghum with a complacent smile.
"It has been intimated to me that you have made money out of politics. But, of course, one doesn't have to believe everything one hears."
"Well, these silver people did so badly when they tried to make politics out of money I dunno's a man would be to blame for turning the experiment the other way around."
"And then another person told me that you got your very first start in life as a curbstone fakir."
"That's libelous."
"I thought so."
"Absolutely false. The way I got my first start was this. I had a farm left me, which wasn't good for anything else, so I got it surveyed and had maps printed and opened up an office and sold the whole thing off in lots. I'm not a man of small enterprises. When I start out to do anything, I do it with a will. As soon as I made up my mind to fake I faked a whole town. I wouldn't stop with a curbstone."—Washington Star.

She Kept Her Appointment.
A. was a young man in a cavalry regiment who fell in love with B., the daughter of an opulent merchant. He grew tired of her, and when his regiment was ordered to the east he left her without explanations.

Returning home with more dust than medals on his coat, he dined and went to a ball, where B. was the daintiest among the beauties. They danced, and she showed no resentment on the score of past unfaithfulness. Pressed by A., she gave him an appointment at a certain church near her father's house, which had been their trysting place in other days.

A. went happily to his club, and his old friend, Major C., offered him a cigar.
"I met Lucy B. this evening," said A., and he told his friend of the appointment she had given him.
The major expressed no surprise, but said Lucy was a good and forgiving girl—for he knew what had gone before.
A. went to the church on the day named, and there was a wedding. When the ceremony was over, B., the bride, came out of the church on the arm of Major C., the bridegroom.
A. went home to his lodgings.—Pearson's Weekly.

Sure They Were Safe.
The method adopted by a rustic looking individual to prevent the loss of his hat and coat while dining furnished the patrons of a Market street cafe with much amusement yesterday. The stranger meandered leisurely into the place during the busy lunch hour and made his way to the nearest vacant chair. Producing several yards of twine from his pocket, he removed his hat and passed the string once around the crown, making it fast with a double knot.
This, of course, caused a number of diners to suspend hostilities in order better to observe the next move, but the careful stranger appeared oblivious to the sensation he was creating. Taking off his coat, he passed the loose end of the string through one sleeve, and, after securing the end to his wrist, hung hat and coat on the rack. Assuring himself that the knots were firmly tied, the cautious individual sat down and proceeded to get away with a substantial meal.

No Prisons Needed.
In Iceland there are no prisons, and the inhabitants are so honest in their habits that such material defenses to property as locks, bolts and bars are not required. Yet its history for the past thousand years records no more than two thefts.

Of these two cases, one was that of a native who was detected after stealing several sheep, but as he had done so to supply his family, who were suffering for want of food, when he had broken his arm, provisions were furnished to them and work was found for him when he was able to do it, and meanwhile he was placed under medical care, but the stigma attached to his crime was considered sufficient punishment.
The other theft was made by a German, who stole 17 sheep. But as he was in comfortable circumstances and the robbery was malicious the sentence passed upon him was that he should at once sell all his property.

Why She Protested.
The proud young husband of the beautiful young wife declared that it mattered not to him how poor he might be in the world's goods.
"For thou," he exclaimed, "art wealth untold!"
"But I expect to be told everything!" she protested, fearful lest there arise misunderstanding between them.—Detroit Journal.

Had Its Use.
Mrs. Watts—Don't you find your neuralgia an awful annoyance?
Mrs. Potts—Oh, I get used to it more or less, and besides I always get the tenderest piece of the steak when my teeth are lame.
