Steamer Collision—loss of the Collin's Steamer Arctic, and fearful loss of life!

We have this morning to lay before our readers a few of the details of a disaster which has spread deep gloom over the community, but of which the incidents are soon told. On Wednesday last at noon, whilst the Collins Steamer Arctic, which left Liverpool on the 20th ult., was proceeding at the rate of 13 knots an hour, when within 55 miles of Cape Race, she came in contact in a dense fog with the Iron French screw steamer Vesta, from St. Peters to Granville, by which the latter sustained considerable damage, having struck on the starboard bow, about 50 feet abaft the cutwater, which made three large holes in the ship, two below the water, one of which was about 5½ feet in length, and 1 or 1½ in depth, leaving the whole cutwater and stern of the iron steamer clean through the Arctic's side. It was not apprehended at first that the Arctic was much injured, and a boat was lowered and sent under the charge of the first officer to the assistance of the French steamer. But in a few minutes it was discovered that the Arctic had several feet water in the hold, and the pumps, which were worked by the machinery, were set to work, the steamer being at the same time headed for the land. She had proceeded only about 15 miles when the water rose so as to extinguish the fires in the furnaces, when all hope of keeping her any time afloat was lost. In the meantime, as it was evident that all on board could not escape by the boats, the state of the passengers and crew can be easier conceived than described. Mrs. Collins with her daughter, many other ladies and Mr Collins Jr. were placed in a boat, which, while being lowered, was swamped and all perished except one lady who clung to a seaman. Another boat was lowered containing a party of ladies accompanied by some gentlemen, a quantity of provisions being thrown in; but having no seamen to row the boat, it is feared they could not reach the coast, especially considering the tempestuous weather since experienced. Two other boats, as will be seen by a communication to the American Consul with 45 of the passengers and crew made the land. The long boat capable of carrying over 50 persons remained on deck, and would probably be crowded on the vessel going down; but it is to be feared that it would go down with the ship. The three life boats furnished the only means of escape; but they could carry but a small portion of those on board the steamer. The pumps being worked by the machinery it was impossible to stop the vessel to lower the boats. Captain Luce had no hope of the vessel remaining afloat any time, and when the boats were leaving, after the engines stopped, said he would remain in the ship. It was also proposed to take his son, a delicate boy of 10 years old, when he declined that proposal. The Arctic had about 185 first class passengers, 75 second class, and her officers and crew numbered 130—in all 390. We are happy to learn that Messrs Warren Brothers have promptly despatched their Brigantine 'Ann Eiza,' with a supply of provisions on board, to cruize for three days off the Southern coast of the Island, in search of the missing boats.

HASZARD'S GAZETTE.

Saturday, October 14, 1854.

The accounts from England received by the Europa, which arrived at Halifax on the 11th inst. are to the 30th September, and from the extracts we have made, our readers will perceive that the important event which we have been so long looking for, the occupation of the Crimea by the Allied powers, has taken place; and what is still more gratifying, without opposition or loss. It was calculated, that the invading force would reach Sebastopol by the 20th September. If the progress of the Allied army at Bomarsund is to be taken as a rule, the fate of Sebastopol has been long ere this decided, and Russia has received a check that if the Czar be not completely infatuated, will tend to cause him to reflect, and to consent to put an end to the war upon terms sufficiently humiliating, it is true, but by no means so severe as they would probably be, if the war be prolonged, and he suffer greater losses in the Baltic than those of the Islands of Aland. With the taking of Sebastopol and the consequent destruction of the Russian fleet in the Black Sea, added to the opening of the Danube, and the evacuation of the Principalities, the end for which the war was begun, will have been accomplished.—The independence of Turkey will then have been secured, and all the Allies will have to do—unless they choose to go further—is to take care that the present, or any future ruler of Russia shall never have it in his power again to disturb the peace of Europe by attempts at territorial aggrandizement. It is not unlikely that Great Britain may demand pledges for the security of her possessions in the East, which in the event of the fall of Constantinople, would have unquestionably been the next object of attack by the Emperor Nicholas. Enough, however, has already been done to shew to him and to his successors, that this is not the age for any Sovereign of Europe to aim at universal dominion. We trust by this day fortnight, to be able to announce that Sebastopol has shared the fate of Bomarsund, and we sincerely hope with as little comparative loss. But we shall not be disappointed, if it be not so soon reduced. The operations of a great army are necessarily, to a certain degree, slow, and it is impossible to say what obstacles it may not have to contend with. "The battle" it is said, "is not always to the strong," but as every precaution which human foresight and prudence could dictate, has been taken, and as the cause in which the Allies is engaged is just, we very confidently trust, that a favorable result will follow.

Our temporary absence from town prevented our acknowledging the receipt of Blackwood's Magazine for September. PROCLAMATION

TO THE

Good People of P. E. I.

PROBABLY there is not a family in your Province but what some members of it are more or less afflicted by Humours or Chronic Affections. As a remedy for these various complaints, there are numerous preparations brought into the market, but all of them of little or no good. But there is a discovery which has recently been made in chemical analysis that is wonderful in its operation. It has been long enough tried and we have proof sufficient to satisfy—all from men holding the highest offices the people of the United States can give—that the medicine will do just what it is recommended. It is Doctor Hampton's Vegetable Tincture. The medicine is compounded from the Vegetable Kingdom and may be used by any person without injurious consequences. By a wise choice and combination of some of the best of each class of co-operative, simple remedies, it fully reaches all the essential organs of the human system and there it has proved itself so effectually curative of the whole round of chronic affections.
