Preparing For Annual Christmas Party For New Canadians In PEI

Charlottetown's Canadian Citizenship Council, a voluntary organization whose objective is to further the welfare of new immigrants to this Province, will hold its annual Christmas party for new Canadians in the Canadian Legion Hall on Monday night, Dec. 10th. Similar Councils are active throughout Canada and are accomplishing much in the way of making the new arrivals from Europe feel more at home, and assisting them to adjust to Canadian customs and surroundings. His Excellency, Viscount Alexander, Governor General of Canada, is patron of the Council, and the National Executive include such prominent Canadians as General H. D. G. Crerar, Madame Andre Taschereau, Hugh M. Wallis, and Professor J. C. Folger. More than two hundred new Canadians are expected to attend Monday night's gathering, and representatives of the Provincial Government and the Charlottetown City Council will be among the invited guests. The president of the Maritime Board of Trade, Mr. Frank W. Curtis and the president of the Charlottetown Board, Mr. M. Alban Farmer are also on the invitation list. An out-of-town guest will be Mr. H. M. Grant, District Superintendent of Citizenship and Immigration for Eastern Canada, whose headquarters are located at Halifax. Mr. Grant is coming to Charlottetown expressly for the Christmas party. He has been greatly impressed by the initiative and vigor of the Charlottetown Citizenship Council, and for some time has endeavored to visit the local executive. Mr. Grant's visit is most appreciated, coming at a time when the Charlottetown Board of Trade, in common with other Boards across the Maritimes, is studying means of obtaining a larger quota of immigrants than formerly, and trying to develop a program designed to retain the newcomers in the Atlantic region. In this connection it is expected that Mr. Grant will confer with Mr. Frank Curtis, Mr. M. Alban Farmer, Mr. Walther Gaudet, and other prominent members of the Charlottetown Board of Trade. The immigration head will also have discussions with Mr. J. B. Murley, Mr. W. S. C. McLeod and Mr. J. A. Murphy of the Charlottetown National Employment Office, officials with whom he is in contact throughout the year. One of his priority calls of course will be on Premier J. Walter Jones, who is very much interested in immigration matters and more especially from the standpoint of obtaining competent farm labor for Prince Edward Island farmers. At Monday's Christmas party more than fifty children of many nationalities will be presented with gifts, and given the traditional candy, fruits and ice cream. The adult guests will be served coffee and light refreshments. Mr. Austin Trainor in his well-known role of Santa Claus, will present the gifts to the children with all the ceremony linked with the season. Attending from the Provincial Agriculture Department, will be Hon. C. C. Baker, Minister of Agriculture, and his Deputy, Mr. W. R. Shaw. The Mayor and Mrs. J. D. Stewart will represent the City. Members of the Charlottetown Citizenship Council are: President, Mrs. John B. Murley; Vice President, Miss Iphigenie Arsenault; Secretary, Mrs. J. T. Davies; Treasurer, Mrs. Arthur Bruce; Executive: Mrs. Dr. W. J. P. MacMillan, Mrs. A. G. Putnam, Miss Mary Robin, Mrs. J. Walter Jones, Mrs. S. G. Peppin, Mrs. Parnell MacMahon.

Ottawa Potato Prices Boosted

OTTAWA, Dec. 6.—(Special)—Scarcity of potatoes from the Maritimes as well as from Ontario growers had boosted potato prices here to a new high of $3.50 per bag retail and 59 cents for 10 pounds in grocery stores. The increased potato price has also had repercussions in Ottawa restaurants where French fried potatoes are always in heavy demand. Typical mid-morning snack for youthful office boys and young girl clerks is a serving of French fried potatoes and a soft drink. Just this week, the price per serving of the French fries has been boosted from 10 to 15 cents and size of the servings has been slightly cut. While some continue to order potatoes, a large number of Ottawa's youth has declared a boycott until prices come down to a lower level. Civil service health authorities here take a neutral view about this favored snack of potatoes and sugared cola drinks. From a nutritional point of view they do not recommend such a lunch because of its overabundance on the side of starches and sugar. At the same time, they agree that until recently it has been about the cheapest way to fill the stomachs of hungry boys and girls who are so healthy that they don't really need to give much thought to a balanced diet. The boost in the price per serving of potatoes in Ottawa has coincided with the cut of five cents in the selling price of holidays as a Toronto newspaper says it. "The ten-cent hot dog, which has recently been selling for twenty cents, has been cut to 15 per cent. Another price increase here has occurred in milk-shakes, following on the heels of a boost of the price of milk in Ottawa from 19 to 22 cents a quart. Taking this boost as a basis, restaurants and grocery stores have bumped their prices for milk-shakes by five cents, so if the public desires a boycott, the new asking price will be dropped, but eating-house proprietors felt it worth trying. Members of parliament here are beginning to grumble about the restaurant practices of the capital and this matter of price increases for basic foodstuffs may well be aired before the session ends. On Wednesday, Robert Fair, Social Credit member for Battle River, Alberta, scored Ottawa restaurants for using tea-bags four and five times to the detriment of the consuming public. It seems likely that other members will take up the cudgels from where Mr. Fair left off. ed were the announcement of the Ways and Means Committee Chairman, Ignatius MacDonald that a dance would be held on Dec. 13th; a report on the effective public speaking programme by Ralph Dumont who said that the classes have been postponed for the Yuletide season, and the proposed change of the by-laws and constitution of the Chamber. In attendance at the meeting was Gordon MacDonald, liaison officer for the chamber with the Charlottetown Board of Trade.

Jaycees Plan Big Christmas Tree

The erection of a large Christmas tree on the North side of the Provincial Building will be undertaken by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, it was announced at the regular monthly meeting last night. Santa Claus will be in attendance during hymn and carol singing by City church choirs, and sound equipment is to be installed for the benefit of the large crowds which are expected to gather. Lights for the tree will be supplied by the Klansmen Club, and all arrangements will be completed by the week-end, chairman Jack Morris announced. The meeting was presided over by president Ralph Dumont with 15 members in attendance. A letter was read from the Canadian Pageant Association, which was formed in Hamilton for the purpose of selecting a Miss Canada from the main centres across the Dominion, stressing the importance of an entry from Charlottetown in the 1960 contest. While in favour of this project, the Chamber decided to hold further discussion on the matter. Other items of business discussed were the announcement of the Ways and Means Committee Chairman, Ignatius MacDonald that a dance would be held on Dec. 13th; a report on the effective public speaking programme by Ralph Dumont who said that the classes have been postponed for the Yuletide season, and the proposed change of the by-laws and constitution of the Chamber. Opening night has come and gone for another year, and the Little Theatre has entered upon another season which, if last night may be taken as an indication, will bring credit to its members and a great deal of enjoyment to its patrons. The program last night consisted of three one-act plays. The first "Farewell to Love" was a sketch supposedly taking place in the dressing room of a New York Theatre. The two characters have starred for a number of years in a successful play, which has just closed leaving them free to follow their own devices. An amusing scene follows, in which they reveal that their continual bickering over their love making on stage has concealed from them the fact that they are really in love. This too becomes doubtful when they quarrel as to the taking over their stage career is last night's play, "The Voice of the People", by Robert Davies, who is better known to many as Samuel Marchbanks, is in that playwright's usual racy and refreshing style. That the cast had good material to work with is undoubted, but does not obscure the fact that they did a particularly good job of presentation. The parts of Aggie and "Shorty" Morton were taken by Marjorie Rarahan and Arthur MacLean, and that of their daughter Myrtle by Valerie Rogers. Peter Shama played Sam North, and the paper boy was Alex Murchison. All five acted most convincingly. The part of Aggie Morton presented unusual difficulties, as the dual personality of a stern mother and a submissive wife. Arthur MacLean blustered his way through the part of a tired and irritable barber, come to the attention of the order and his supper not ready, in a most realistic manner. The adjudicator panned "Myrtle" a high compliment, stating that she considered her to have great possibilities as an actress. As the "difficult" teen age daughter she injected just the right amount of flippancy into her part. As the first play, the adjudicator's criticism concerned minor technicalities, such as the shortage of a few props, and the lighting which, once again, was not used to best advantage. Peter Shama she credited with an admirable job at the end of the play, where skill was certainly needed to put across the last few lines successfully. "The Voice of the People", directed by George Anderson and Sterling Walker. Mary McQuaid and George Abbott handled the properties, and Barbara Rogers the script. The cues, sometimes conveyed by a sound rather than by actual spoken words, were put across particularly skillfully in the second play. The last of the three productions was a mystery, "The Distant Drum", by Philip Johnston. The action takes place in a small room of Sarne Castle. Lord and Lady Sarne, played by Jean Giddings and Barry Bugden, were both excellent as the elderly and dignified parents of a naive son madly in love with a ruthless fortune seeker. The son was played by Harold Stewart, his lady by Marion Peake, and the third corner of the unhappy love affair was played by J. Eric MacGregor, as Michael Kenley. Had the lights been used more effectively and a realization of the tension of the play been better established, the finish would have not come as such a surprise to the audience, who were startled by the dramatic consequences of Olive Siddall's underhand dealings with the two men in the play in her effort to obtain both money and the gay life so far from Sarne Castle. All five, however, carried their parts off convincingly, and their excellent team work and good groupings resulted in a very smooth performance. Director of the last play was Betty King, and the stage manager was Fred Pound. Betty Holl and Miriam Matthews were responsible for the make up throughout the play and Gordon C. White supplied music during the intermissions. Stage properties for the performance were supplied by Aylward's Furniture Exchange and Holman's. If the plays to be presented throughout the rest of the season are as well produced and provide as much excellent entertainment for Little Theatre audiences as the first three, particularly "The Voice of the People", then the members will have reason to congratulate themselves upon a good job well done.

Twin Pigs With But One Head Born On Winsloe Farm

A record for Wiltshire sides might have been set in this Province if it, or they, had lived. In any event a pig, or pigs, arrived in a litter born to a brood sow on the farm of Mr. Perley Taylor, Winsloe, last Sunday night. There were 11 or 12 piglets in the litter. The reason for the doubt as to the number born and the correct pronoun to use is that the last to arrive was one of nature's occasional freaks in the animal world. Two completely formed bodies and limbs were joined in such a manner that only one head served for the two bodies. The head, though slightly larger than normal, was also perfectly formed excepting for one thing. It had four ears. The animal (or animals) died immediately on birth.

Fewer Sunshine Days In November

There was less sunshine in the month of November than in the corresponding month since 1922 it was learned yesterday from Mr. W. A. Bugns, weather observer at the Experimental Farm. The total hours of sunshine last month were 44.7 against an average of 76.9. The figure for 1922 was 38.3 hours. Rain or snow fell on 17 days during the month, with a total precipitation of 5.5 inches, with an average of 4.04. Mean temperature was 38.5 degrees, average 37.1, and the average daily wind velocity was 12.9 miles per hour, total mileage 9,327 miles.

Music Festival Executive Meeting

An executive meeting of the Prince Edward Island Music Festival Association was held last evening at the Y.M.C.A. with Dr. Steel presiding. In the absence of Mrs. Lantz, the report of the syllabus committee was read by Mrs. Allison MacRae. Copies of the syllabus can now be obtained at the music stores in Charlottetown and as soon as entry forms are received, will be sent to teachers throughout the Island. Mrs. Hayley, reporting for the allotment committee, suggested financial assistance in cost of transportation of school groups from rural areas to the festival. Due to the resignation of Mrs. Murdoch McGowan, Mrs. A. D. MacKenzie accepted the vice-presidency for King's County. A Choral Clinic, to be held during the Festival was discussed and a committee will be appointed at the general meeting in mid-January to work out the details. A letter was received from the secretary of the Moncton Festival Association, re. Mr. Reginald Green who is to be one of our adjudicators this year. Mr. Green who is a Canadian by birth, has studied in England and France, and is in great demand for adjudication in all branches of the art. On motion the meeting adjourned. sale of its kind ever had here and similar to the show conducted each year at Amherst.
