

thinness

The diseases of thinness are scrofula in children, consumption in grown people, poverty of blood in either. They thrive on leanness. Fat is the best means of overcoming them. Everybody knows cod-liver oil makes the healthiest fat.

In Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil the taste is hidden, the oil is digested, it is ready to make fat.

When you ask for Scott's Emulsion and your druggist gives you a salmon-colored wrapper with the picture of the man and fish on it, you can trust that man.

THE SIGN OF THE FOUR

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

"That he was, sir: I never got such a turn in my life as when I saw him grinning at me with his head on his shoulder as I climbed through the window, and his eyes on me. I had half-killed Torgs for it, if he had not scrambled off. That was how he came to leave his club, and some of his darts, and his pipe, and his hat. I have said, 'I hope to put you on our track, though how you put on it is more than I can tell. I don't feel no malice against you for following me down a queer thing,' he added, with a bitter smile, 'that I who have a fair claim to night upon half a million of money, should spend the first half of my life building a breakwater at the Andamans, and am like to spend the other half digging drains at Dartmoor. It is not a very pleasant prospect, but I can't do anything else. I am a curse to the man who owned it. To him it brought murder; to Major Sholto it brought fear and guilt; to me it has meant slavery for life. At this moment you are looking at me through my broad face and heavy shoulders into the tiny cabin. 'Quite a family party,' he remarked. 'I think I shall have a pill at that. Holmes, Well, I think we may all congratulate each other. Pity we didn't take the other alive; but there was no choice. I say, Holmes, but I was not the man that you cut it rather fine. It was all he could do to overhaul her. 'All is well, that ends well,' said Holmes. 'But I certainly did not know that the Aurora was such a clipper. 'Smith says she is one of the fastest launches on the river, and that if he had had another man to help him with the engines we might never have caught her. He swears he knows nothing of this sort of thing. 'Neither he did,' cried our prisoner; 'not a word. I chose his launch, because I heard that she was a flyer. I was not at all wrong, but we got well, and he was to get something handsome if we reached our vessel, the Esmeralda, at Gravesend, outward bound for the Brazils. 'Well, if he has done no wrong, we shall see that no wrong comes to him. If we are pretty quick in catching our man, we are a little in a condemning mood. It was amusing to notice how the consequential Jones was already beginning to give himself airs in the strength of the capture. From the slight smile which played over Sherlock Holmes' face, I could see that the speech had not been lost upon him. 'We will wait a half-hour, shall we say, Dr. Watson, with the treasure-box. I need hardly tell you that I am taking a great responsibility upon myself in doing this. It is most irregular; but, of course, an agreement is an agreement. I must, however, as a matter of duty, send an inspector with you, since you have so valuable a charge. You will drive, no doubt? 'Yes, I shall drive. 'It is a pity there is no key, that you will have to break it open. Where is the key, my man? 'At the bottom of the river,' said Small, shortly. 'Hum! There was no use your giving this unnecessary trouble. We have had work enough through you. However, doctor, I need not warn you to be careful. Bring the box back with you to the Baker street rooms. You will find us there, on our way to the station. They landed me at Vauxhall, with my heavy iron box, and with a bluff, official inspection. I carried a quarter of an hour's drive brought us to Mrs. Cecil Forrester's. The servant seemed surprised at so late a visitor. Mrs. Cecil Forrester was out for the evening, she explained, and likely to be very late. Miss Morstan, however, was in the drawing-room; so to the drawing-room I went, box in hand, leaving the obliging inspector in the hall. She was seated by the open window, dressed in some sort of white diaphanous material, with a little touch of scarlet in the neck, and was lit by the soft light of a shaded lamp fell upon her as she leaned back in the basket chair, playing over her sweet, grave face, and tinting with a dull metallic sparkle the rich coils of her luxuriant hair; one white arm and hand dropped over the side of the chair, and her eyes were fixed on me with a pale, absorbing melancholy. At the sound of my foot-fall she sprang to her feet, however, and a bright flush of surprise and pleasure colored her pale cheeks. 'I heard a cab drive up,' she said, 'I thought that Mrs. Forrester had come back very early, but I never dreamed that it might be you. What news have you brought me? 'I have brought something better than news,' said I, putting down the box, and leaning over the railing, speaking joyfully and boisterously, though my heart was heavy within me. 'I have brought you something which is worth all the news in the world. I have brought you a fortune. 'She glanced at the iron box. 'Is that the treasure, then?' she asked, coolly enough. 'Yes, this is the great Agra treasure. Half of it is yours and half is Thaddeus Sholto's. You will have a couple of hundred thousand each. Think of that! An annuity of ten thousand pounds. There will be few richer young ladies in England. Is it not glorious? I think that I must have been rather over-acting my delight, and that she detected a hollow ring in my congratulations. For I saw her eyebrows rise a little, and she glanced at me curiously. 'If I have it,' said she, 'I owe it to you. 'No, no,' I answered; 'not to me, but to my friend, Sherlock Holmes. With all the will in the world, I could never have followed up a clue which has taxed even his analytical genius. As it was, we very nearly lost it at the last moment. 'Pray sit down and tell me all about it,' Doctor Watson, said she. 'I narrated briefly what had occurred since I had seen her last—Holmes' method of search, the discovery of the Aurora, the appearance of Athelney Jones, our expedition in the evening, and the wild chase down the Thames. She listened with parted lips and shining eyes to my recital of our adventures. When I spoke of the deed which had so narrowly missed us, she turned so white that I feared she was about to faint. 'It is nothing,' she said, as I hastened to pour her out some water. 'I am all right again. It was a shock to me to hear that I had placed my friends in such horrible peril. 'That is all over,' I answered. 'It was nothing. I will tell you no more gloomy details. Let me turn to something brighter. There is the treasure. What could be brighter than that? I got leave to bring it with me, thinking that it would interest you to be the first to see it. 'It would be of the greatest interest to me,' she said. There was no eagerness in her voice, however, I struck her, doubtless, that it might seem ungracious on her part to be indifferent to a prize which had cost so much to win. 'What a pretty box!' she said, looking over it. 'This is Indian work, I suppose? 'Yes, it is Benares metal work. 'And so heavy?' she exclaimed, trying to raise it. 'The box alone will be of some value. Where is the key? 'Small threw it into the Thames.' (To be Continued.)

Bees Farms in Serbia.

A new industrial departure of great interest has been taken in Serbia, where a "Society for Bee and Fruit Culture" has been established. This society seeks to introduce a system of bee-keeping on scientific principles. The industry on a profitable basis throughout that country, where until lately the peasants have been in the habit of keeping their bees in conical straw skeps daubed with mud or plaster, and destroying the bees to obtain the honey. It is probable that the society will provide the peasants with cheap straw skeps with aspers, as well as bar-framed hives and other apicultural appliances. The farm of the society contains about 200 hives, placed in regular rows over the ground, 6 feet 6 inches from each other, facing north. These hives are all on the bar-frame principle, and of the pattern generally known as the Dzierzon hives, and they contain about 80 pounds of honey in the comb when full. They are made of wood, with straw sides, and cost about $2.25 each. The bees appear to be a species of the common bee (apis mellifica), but are rather small in size and unusually tractable. The Italian bee (apis ligustica) does not succeed well in Serbia, becoming quickly merged into the indigenous stock. The bee farm is provided with two centrifugal honey extractors of very simple design, but perfectly practical. After extraction the honey is put into glass bottles, with neat screw tops, imported from Austria, containing respectively 1-2 pound, 1 pound and 2 pounds. The price of the honey is about 17c a pound, exclusive of the bottle, for which an extra charge is made. The wax is sold to the wax candle makers in Serbia, and realizes about 30c a pound. The importance of encouraging bee culture is evidently fully realized by the members of this society and others interested, and the introduction of a law is in contemplation obliging all private schools, schoolmasters and certain other holding employment under the Government to turn their attention to the keeping of bees.—San Francisco Republican.

Castoria destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children. Dr. G. C. OSOON, Lowell, Mass.

Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me. H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are doing their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphia, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves. A Night Clock.

Among the effects of the late J. E. Davies, which are to be sold by J. S. Pitt next month, is a curious form of night clock, which is not described in any of the histories of clockmaking, and is believed to be altogether unique. Water clocks and sand clocks are known to have preceded more mechanical timepieces, and Asser attributes to King David the Great the adoption of the candle clock, with wax candles two inches long, which burned all day at the rate of an inch in twenty minutes, and were put in horn lanterns to prevent draught. This clock is a more modern rendering of the candle clock, and consists of a light stand cast in lead in the form of a candlestick on the top of a glass cylinder used as a reservoir for the oil, the wick being placed in a little projection at the bottom, very much like the Isolant inkstands which are now in use, and, of course, appropriate to the very earliest form of oil lamp. Passing vertically over the oil reservoir, immediately behind the wick, so as to be lighted by it, is a band of metal, on which are marked the hours from four up to twelve, and then on to five, presumably with the idea that it does not get dark before four, and that by five everybody ought to be up and about. The stock of oil was no doubt calculated to last the requisite number of hours. The relic, presumed by the British Museum authorities, to belong to the last century, is quite perfect, and is likely to excite a good deal of interest among antiquaries.—Bristol, Eng., Mercury.

THE REVIEW OF REVIEWS

Edited by ALBERT SHAW. THE REVIEW OF REVIEWS, as its name implies, gives in readable form the best that appears in the other great magazines all over the world, generally on the same date that they are published. With the recent extraordinary increase of worthy periodicals, these careful reviews, summaries, and quotations, giving the gist of periodical literature, are alone worth the subscription price.

Aside from these departments, the editorial and contributed features of the REVIEW OF REVIEWS are themselves equal in extent to a magazine. The Editor's "Progress of the World" is an invaluable chronicle of the happenings of the thirty days just past, with pictures on every page of the men and women who have made the history of the month.

The Literary World says: "We are deeply impressed from month to month with the value of the 'REVIEW OF REVIEWS,' which is a sort of Eiffel Tower for the survey of the whole field of periodical literature. And yet it has a mind and voice of its own, and speaks out with decision and sense on all public topics of the hour. It is a singular combination of the monthly magazine and the daily newspaper. It is daily in its freshness; it is monthly in its method. It is the world under a field glass."
