MARY HAWORTH

Prolonging Life Question Is Discussed In Letters

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I felt that your answer to the teenager's question (which she herself said "pertains to religion") was not responsive.

She wants to know why one tries instinctively to prolong human life and conscience by asking "Why do people think it is so bad to die, if a better world awaits us?"

I feel it would be most appropriate (and possibly, helpful) if you had commented on a religious standpoint, we are on this earth to live and do good, something that most of them, second, by developing our capacity for love, by what we do for others.

Thus every additional day of life allows us added opportunities for building our character and doing more for others.

The youngster is mistaken in concluding that it is "bad to die." The property religious person should be ready to die, but unwilling to die one day earlier than necessary. Sincerely, A.B.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In regard to the teenager's question as to why we try to prolong life, I hope to enlighten the world, if I truly believe that the world - to come - is a far better place. I would like to offer the following comments:

I doubt that any of us would bother sending for the doctor if we honestly expected that within minutes or hours after death we would be in heaven, enjoying bliss.

The fact is, the Bible plainly teaches that the dead are asleep and "know nothing" (Eccl. 9:5). And that "in death there is no remembrance of Thee" (Psalm 65).

Elderly Folk Treated By WI

The Wood Islands West Institute met at the home of Mrs. D. MacMillan, when 10 call cards were answered by 9 members with an exchange of Christmas gifts.

President, Mrs. Arthur MacMillan, newly elected, presided and the usual routine of business was carried out.

The members decided to meet at the home of Mrs. E.T. Jeffery to pack a box of cookies as a treat for elderly folk at Beach Grove Inn.

A Christmas treat for school children was also planned and the secretary Mrs. D.M. MacMillan was responsible for same.

Tickets were drawn on a cushion and the lucky winner was Mrs. Jeffery, who received a home from England to make her home with her son, Comm. G. Jeffery.

PM's Wife Finds Social Gatherings Intimidating

By GODFREY ANDERSON LONDON (AP)—Mrs. Harold Wilson is a self-confessed suburbanite obliged to live in the limelight at a famous address—10 Downing Street—because she is the prime minister's wife.

"I find large social gatherings where I don't know many people rather intimidating, but I shall do my best," Mrs. Wilson told her biographer, "in the dressing up on special occasions. But to be doled up all the time would drive me mad."

When she married Harold Wilson, a young professor of economic aid at Oxford—on New Year's Day in 1946—she thought she was heading for a quiet life in academic surroundings. But Harold was ambitious, went into politics, rose high in Labour ranks, and became prime minister last October.

"I had always claimed he had never been under false pretences," Mrs. Wilson says, noting her progress from a professor's wife to what she calls a Westminster widow.

She doesn't much care for politics herself. And she hates political arguments.

DOESN'T LIKE SHOUTING "I don't like people shouting at each other," she says.

But she has dutifully attended every Labour party conference since 1945, though she has never made a political speech.

Her social life is limited to garden parties with a non-political word or two.

"My place is to listen," she says. "I rarely give advice except to think too obvious and it's a help to him."

Of the sudden change in October which swept her into Downing Street, Mrs. Wilson commented:

"I shall do everything I can—short of neglecting the children."

She made up her mind long ago that Robin, now 20 and a student of economics, and Giles, a 15-year-old schoolboy, must have priority in her life.

"You have to decide," she says. "Either you go right in with your husband, into all the activities of politics and put your children in boarding school, or you have to make an acute decision to concentrate on your home and children."

She chose the latter. When the time came, she refused to move to Downing Street until Giles' school vacation. She did not mind the change to a new life.

She tackled her new job in a rather cryptic way by dismissing Mrs. Alice Green, the cook at 10 Downing Street, with a friendly letter of resignation.

BARITONE STARTS NEAR RIOT

American baritone Cornell McNeil, seen here, started a riot when he performed in the Regio Theatre in Parma, Italy Saturday night and called them "idiots." The uproar that followed forced the suspension of the opening night's operatic performance in the theatre. Because of their demands, and sometimes noisy behavior, the audiences have given the Regio Theatre the informal title of "the lions' pit of grand opera." The 38-year-old Minneapolis-born McNeil, now living in Rome, had been enthusiastically applauded in the same theatre last year. (AP Wirephoto)

Biblical Scenes Portrayed At Sunday School Concert

The pupils of Kensington Presbyterian Sunday school recently presented their annual Christmas concert on the theme "We Tell of His Love." Mr. Charles Kennedy was organist. Superintendent Boyd Beatrix offered the service with the call to worship, the congregational singing of the hymn "O Come All Ye Faithful" scripture reading and prayer. "I love to Tell the Story" was sung by the choir. Seers from Luke 2 were portrayed by Jennie MacArthur as "Mary" in the manger scene, and John Farquharson as "Joseph." Teachers of classes four and five, Mrs. Horace Heckbert and Judy Waite sang "Away in a Manger" and the shepherds were Michael Kennedy, Stephen Bernard, Wendell Douglas and Alan Clark. "Holy Night" was sung by the choir. Doubly MacArthur, Karen Thompson, Elmor Douglas, Clive Bernard, Judy Bernard, Joy Beatrix, Tommy Kennedy and Dean Thompson were the angels. Bridge club did songs at 7:30.

The dedication poem before the offering which will be sent to Rev. Russell Self for translation work in Dhani, India, was recited by Ethel Douglas. "There's a Song in the Air" by the choir, and a congregational hymn was followed by a recitation and song by Mrs. Boyd Beatrix's class, and a solo "You Didn't Leave Thy Throne" by Margo Clark. An exercise, "Jesus Loves Me," and scripture and song, "Little Baby in the Manger" by Mrs. F. F. D. Sample's class were interspersed.

Other teachers are Arnold Walker, Charles Beatrix, Mrs. Charles Kennedy.

Following remarks by the superintendent, carol singing was enjoyed. Scripture passages were read by Errol Thompson, Denton Mann and Bobby Sample. Members of the choir were Debra Douglas, M. A. H. Thompson, Janet Douglas, Judy Douglas, Peggy Kennedy, Beverly Bernard, Audrey Walker, Margie Clark, Helen Robertson, Isabel Crozier, Debbie Kennedy, Gloria Brander, Ann Paynter, Ruth Farquharson, Barry Thompson, Don Thompson, Don Brander, Leslie Hunter, D. O. Kemp, Kenny Waite, Clark Paynter, and Garth Thompson. Closing remarks and benediction were by Rev. George Tannahill.

Anniversary Observed

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Johnson, Long River, when 20 of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Chester MacLeod gathered on the occasion of their 40th wedding anniversary.

Ernest Dunning presented a gift on behalf of those present, while a daughter, Mrs. Irvin Campbell, presented one for the family.

Mr. MacLeod gave a splendid account of the great changes that have taken place in the last fifty years.

With Mrs. Ernest Dunning presiding at the piano, a presentation song followed, also a gift by Ernest Dunning and Andrew Johnson, presented one for the family.

Funerals the gift supreme!

The luxury of a nice, fashion appeal no woman can resist. The Christmas gift rated high above all others comes in today and see the beautiful selection.

Choose from mink, moiré, holly and sable for the woman in your life who appreciates elegance.
