

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

MAY 14, 1890.

Suggestions to Farmers.

Professor Saunders, of the Experimental Farms, makes several suggestions for the special benefit of farmers in this Province.

How best to maintain the fertility of the soil, was one of the subjects of discussion at almost every meeting, and the best methods of preserving and storing barn yard manure as to prevent any waste of its fertilizing constituents were carefully considered.

As to the means of obtaining manure, Prof. Saunders says:

"There are not many farmers on the Island who keep sufficient stock to produce manure in the quantity required to thoroughly fertilize their fields, hence substitutes for barnyard manure are in much demand, and artificial fertilizers are probably more largely used on the Island in proportion to the population than in any other part of the Dominion.

Concerning the means of avoiding or destroying the wheat midge—known here as weevil—Professor Saunders says:—

"It has often been a matter of surprise that the wheat-midge should be found invariably common, and more or less destructive, every year in Prince Edward Island, while in most of the other Provinces its occurrence is only occasional.

"The growing of fruit is not so general on the Island as it should be. The orchards found there are fairly successful. The trees are thrifty and promise well and there seems no reason why farmers of this province should not become exporters of fruit.

Notes and Comments.

Zion Church, in this city, was, at an early hour this morning, the scene of an interesting and auspicious event—the marriage of Miss Mutch, daughter of William Mutch, Esq., of Hopeton, and the Rev. Dr. McLeod, pastor of Thorburn (near New Glasgow) Nova Scotia.

The Patriot gives currency to the report of Mr. L. H. Davies that the Conservative party evidence "marked signs of demoralization," and that the political situation is full of hope for the Grits.

Hodgson Memorial Chapel.

The interior of the chapel which has lately been erected in connection with St. Peter's Church in this city, to the pious memory of the late beloved Priest Incumbent, George W. Hodgson, has just been enriched by the erection of an altar and reredos, and by the placing of a picture, which, for design, construction, beauty and general arrangement, surpasses anything yet seen in Canada in connection with the Anglican Church.

The roof is a simple Gothic, gabled one of two intersecting arches, the ribs springing from columns and capitals in the four angles of the sanctuary at the same height as the sanctuary arch and nave arch rib capitals. The sweep of the roof ceiling arch, being struck from the same centre as the sanctuary arch and nave roof ribs, gives to all the curved lines of the interior roofing an effect of unity and harmony with each other.

The Markets.

BOSTON, May 8.

The receipts of eggs have fallen off a good deal this week, and with a steady fair demand the market has been a shade firmer than last week.

There is no material change in the provision market since last week. Below are the quotations for wholesale lots:—

FARMERS TELEPHONING!

HELLO, WILTSHIRE! Hello, Montague! Is that you, Thomas? Yes, that you, John? Yes.

Tom—I just got THE EXAMINER with Aleck and Ezra's little chat, and thought I would like to have a little talk on the telephone with you. I tell you they talked just straight, common sense, and plain as a pike-staff; and any farmer, after reading that, who would go and deliberately purchase an imported implement, and thus rob his country of cash, workmen and reputation, as a punishment ought to have no crop and be ashamed to look an honest hard-working mechanic in the face who pays him cash for his produce.

John—Yes, that's a fact, Tom. I was wishing you here in your old seat in the House that day. I know you would have backed us up and made the old House ring with that deep-toned voice of yours in behalf of our slighted and down-trodden workmen, and no shaming boodle or fear of the consequences would have kept you silent.

Tom—Put your hand there, old boy! You just have me I'd just die of remorse if I'd kept silent or will ever buy another imported implement.

John—Hello! who's there? It's me. Who's me? Well, if you must know it's J—, from Pownal. Well, what's up? I've got it. Got what? The remorse. I went to town and those fellows talked smooth and nice and persuaded me that we belonged to Ontario and the Dominion, and it made no difference as the cash did not go out of our country, and stuffed me with a lot of polished and worn-out jargon, and I nibbled at the bait and got caught with the cheap Harrow. I just tried it alongside my neighbor Gray's, bought from Lepage, and soon saw my mistake. I tell you I felt sick when I saw the difference in work and draft; and when I read Ezra's and Aleck's talk the blamed harrow stuck in my throat, and I thought I had the grip (or it had me), till I came to telephone for one of Lepage's and heard that word "remorse." Then I knew I had it. But I've repented and back it goes, even if they keep the money too—see if it don't. But I'm interrupting your little chat.

Tom—Bless you, my boy, not at all, not at all. You're on the right track, and a clear conscience is not dear at any price, and you will live longer and die happier. Give us your hand. You're a brick. Bye, bye.

Burr Bur—Hello! who's there? Pat from Morell.

Well, Pat, what's wrong? Pat—I just heard J— from Pownal. I've been there too; got me in a horse trade, but I traded it for one of Lepage's with that jolly big-hearted Reardon, and gave him a V to boot. I feel sorry for Reardon, but I'm as happy as a trout. Bye, bye.

John—That's a smart fish, but he'll swim whoever sinks. What do you think of the horse?

Burr Bur—Hello! who's there? Jim from Savage Harbor. I heard it all and read the paper, but I am in the same box as J. and P.

Tom—Well, how does your pulse feel now, Jim? I don't mind my pulse as much as the horse's.

Ha! ha! ha! Say, don't laugh at a fellow when he's down. If you see that sunny-tempered, whole-souled Reardon around, please tell him to call with one of Lepage's and I'll make it all right with him. I'd rather burn it than buy sweat-pads, and more oats at present prices. Bye, bye.

John—That fellow's head is level now. Tom—Yes, I guess that harrow will level lots of heads before long. That big fellow, Andrew Mooney from Little Harbor, put one of Lepage's in Burns' field with a Frost & Wood and cleaned it out.

John—Yes; Little Harbor is too small for Big Andy since he got Lepage's Harrows and Seeders. He puts on his seven-mile boots and goes over the country, and the Giant, the Killer, and the imported harrows and seeders hang on the fence before him every time. The railway has carried 150 to him already, and he says he has only just got warmed up to it. Go it, Andy! You're a whole-souled Irishman, and no flies on you.

Tom—I hear that fellow Ellis, at O'Leary Station, has sold 100 and ordered 50 more, and from every station they are calling for Lepage's Harrows and Seeders. Even Nova Scotia and New Brunswick are sending for them, too. I am told by the Customs House that Lepage has shipped over 100 Harrows and a lot of Seeders there, and he has the able dealer, Schurman, from Freetown, over there appointing agents and showing those bluenoses what our little Garden of America can produce, and the report is they are selling like hot cakes. I tell you, Ben, this looks like business. A good push, a strong push, and a push altogether, and in a few years we will have all our money back again, and have a rich little Ontario of our own down here, with noisy factories, busy workmen, more cash, less mortgages, better implements, more prosperous farmers and happier homes.

Central—Hello, time is up! All right! Bye, bye, Tom. Bye, bye, Ben. We'll have another little chat later on. Bye, bye!
