

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

OCTOBER 3, 1896.

P. E. ISLAND HOSPITAL.

It is reported, upon good authority, that the Rev. Dr. Brecken has given, or is about to give, the land and premises of the Brecken Homestead, at Kensington, for the purposes of the P. E. Island Hospital.

CHIGNECTO SHIP RAILWAY.

An effort is now being made to revive the agreement which provides that a subsidy shall be paid to the Chignecto Ship Railway Company when their railway shall be in successful operation.

and voted for him. On the contrary if he would have preferred to Mr. Campbell he would have cheerfully acquiesced and rightly claimed that his victory was a defeat for the Government.

The fact noted by the Patriot that many Conservatives who voted at the general election did not vote at the bye-election, shows that the Government's position before the country is worse than we stated it to be.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

There is danger that a good deal of the Cape Breton potato crop will be lost this year through rot. The North Sydney Herald says: "We are told that in some cases as little as 10 per cent. of the crop is left in this way, and the danger is that the per centage will increase from day to day while the tubers are left in the ground."

The London Spectator proposes the ideally best course to be pursued by Turkey. It says: "The ideally best of all courses to pursue would be to obtain an agreement among the Powers for the partition of the Turkish Empire. Russia should be asked to take Constantinople and Anatolia; France, Syria; Austria, Salonica; Greece, the islands; Italy, Tripoli; while we should remain in Egypt. Of course this could be done, and done effectually, only if Russia would agree. Were she to consent, Austria, though angry, would be obliged to acquiesce. But, unfortunately, it seems impossible to get Russia to agree. She prefers that Turkey should advance yet a stage further toward complete prostration, and appears oblivious to the sufferings she thus inflicts upon the Christian subjects of the Sultan."

FARMERS CO-OPERATION.

(Montreal Gazette.)

The American Agriculturalist, one of the foremost of the farmers' papers in the United States, thinks it is time for farmers to act in accord with the tendency of the times in other departments of business, and combine in the growing and marketing of their products. The Agriculturalist holds that a business combination between two or more farmers whose properties are conveniently located might result in a decrease of the expense of each for help and doing away with the expense of many sets of farming implements. Furthermore, it is argued, such a combination could save money in the purchase of seed, etc., and the general cost of production would thereby be lessened. At the same time, the credit increased. Another point made is that the partner with the greatest aptitude for business might do the buying and selling while the others acted as directors or managers of the farm work. The Agriculturalist has been discussing before and to some extent, but it is to be carried out in the Grange stores, when the Granges filled the place now occupied by the Farmers' Store. Like many other theories, however, it failed in practice, and the Grange store is now a thing of the past. Either the combined capital of the Granges was not sufficient for the successful carrying out of their idea, or the ability to manage a mercantile establishment was better remunerated by private individuals, competitors of the farmers' store, than by the farmers themselves. It is to be remembered, however, that the cheese and butter factories now so common in this country, and generally so successful, are conducted on the same cooperative lines that are recommended to be adopted in the purchase of merchandise, and that in other countries cooperative buying and selling has been done to a remarkable extent, to the great benefit of all concerned. The weakness of the system in the case of the farmers is likely to lie in the difficulty of obtaining in any reasonably small locality a sufficient number ready and willing to take up the scheme, and patient enough to put up with the mistakes that always attend the inception of new ventures.

THE BYE-ELECTION.

The Patriot declares that THE EXAMINER'S figures as to the bye-election are "ingenious but altogether deceptive." The Patriot's reasoning towards this conclusion is inconclusive. It does not deny THE EXAMINER'S statement that both Messrs. Campbell and Humphrey were opposed to the present government, or THE EXAMINER'S inference that those who voted for these gentlemen were all opposed to the government. But it assumes that the Patrons are "more opposed to Toryism than to Liberal principles" and, therefore, would have voted for Mr. Nutt if Humphrey had not been in the field. This assumption is inconsistent with reasonable and business-like action on the part of the electors. Why are electors, Liberal and Conservative, opposed to the Peters administration? Because the pre-election promises of those who compose the administration have not been fulfilled, and because unfair direct taxation goes hand in hand with corruption and increasing debt. To assume that intelligent Liberals would, under these circumstances, have rather voted for the Government candidate than for the Opposition candidate if the Patrons were not in the field, is to give them credit for very little discernment as to their own interests and the interests of the province. Men now-a-days judge Provincial governments by their administrative record. If a government has been false to its promises and if it has been corrupt, there are good reasons why the electors should vote against it, and in that way show that they have lost confidence in it. Ask Mr. Humphrey and those who voted for him the reasons for their action and they will, at once say that it was to express their condemnation of the present administration. The Oppositionists have no quarrel with Mr. Humphrey or with those who promoted his candidature

A band of brigands on the outskirts of the town of Seres, Macedonia, recently kidnaped M. Glakow, brother of the Austrian consul at that place, and carried off also a Christian and three Turks. All five captives were murdered. The brigands demanded 45,000 for M. Glakow, and as the money was not forthcoming they killed him.

THE EUROPEAN SITUATION.

(London correspondence of the New York Sun.)

It is now more than three years since Alexander III. made an agreement with France "in the interests of peace," as it was called, which has since been ratified into a defensive alliance. That professed friendship to a country which had been practically friendless in the European family of nations since peace was made in 1870 aroused a genuine fervor that is still anxious still to pour out all the treasures of French affection, asking nothing in return. The rest of the world knows, if France does not, that Russia's union with her is a one-sided partnership. All the world knows, including France, that Russia's overture to her in 1893 was the first overt act in the execution of the most stupendous project which any man or nation ever undertook to accomplish with "peaceful" weapons. The object was and is to pull down the banner of almost universal British prestige in all quarters of the globe, and to substitute that of Russia. France fondly believes that the new banner would be allied to, bearing the banner of "peaceful" weapons. ENGLAND'S ISOLATION AMONG THE POWERS WAS ALMOST COMPLETE. Italy alone was believed to entertain genuinely friendly sentiments toward Great Britain. Austria was lukewarm in her support of Russia, but the Kaiser was unreservedly pro-Russian in his sympathies. An important change has come over the situation within the past month. First, in the case of Italy—and here is involved the secret history of the Sudan expedition. When Italy's campaign in Abyssinia became desperate and the Kaiser, overruling her government appealed to her ally, the Kaiser, for help. Emperor William, it must be confessed, is a poor diplomatist. More than once in the past few months his indiscretions and ill-considered precipitations have been the despair of his ministers. He made the stupid mistake in this instance of seeking the aid of Great Britain for his ally, King Humbert. Lord Salisbury, it may be imagined, was not slow to respond. He advised Italy to preserve the status quo, and forthwith launched the Sudan expedition, with the double object of reconquering Egypt's whole domain on the Nile and drawing off the Derwishes and other hostile forces from the Nile valley. The Kaiser's policy was to support Italy, but his policy was to support her in opposing Great Britain in that quarter of the world. If she is allowed to dominate Asia first, Russia can then turn her attention to the Bosphorus and the Straits. The Kaiser's policy was to support Italy, but his policy was to support her in opposing Great Britain in that quarter of the world. If she is allowed to dominate Asia first, Russia can then turn her attention to the Bosphorus and the Straits.

THE DANGERS WHICH THREATEN RUSSIA'S VAST POSSESSIONS IN ASIA. The danger to Russia is not so much the loss of the Sudan as it is the loss of the Bosphorus and the Straits. The danger to Russia is not so much the loss of the Sudan as it is the loss of the Bosphorus and the Straits.

RUSSIA'S GREATEST ANXIETY AT THIS MOMENT IS THE SULTAN. Until recently she had him under tolerable control. Now, apparently, he is defiant of every body. He believes he is perfectly secure from foreign interference. Why should he not go on in his sweet and bloody way? But I do not propose to discuss the Turkish question in this letter. His plans change from day to day, and the cable is a better medium than the post through which to present them to American eyes.

One suggestion only I will make with regard to the world-wide scheme for England's undoing. It is a complete safeguard against war. The plan is to construct a railway from London to the Pacific coast, and to connect it with the transcontinental railways which are being completed and which will have a free outlet in the Pacific by a better equipped navy. It would be a desperate resource for Great Britain, but more desperate than that now.

We ought to act as the guardians of order, the protectors of the peace of the world. It is the most urgent question, it is the salvation of all, and if we march forward together, if we unite in order to combat the enemy of God and of kings, we shall be rewarded by the gratitude of the world and of history.

The czar's response is said to have been a rather vague expression of his pacific intentions. But that by no means ended the discussion, and no newspaper pretends to give the practical and important developments of it. The diplomatic world, in its best-informed circles, is assured that the czar finally discussed his relations with France in a remarkably frank fashion. He intimated that Russia's alliance with the French republic was based upon the temporary exigencies of politics and not upon natural affinity; that the bonds between Russia and Germany were naturally "peaceful" weapons. The object was and is to pull down the banner of almost universal British prestige in all quarters of the globe, and to substitute that of Russia.

Her special trouble was Bright's disease, and was of nine years standing. It was so pronounced by two physicians. While she does not claim to be completely cured, having taken only four bottles of the remedy, yet she feels so much better that she does not hesitate to recommend its use to any one afflicted as she has been. The pains in her head have entirely ceased, and almost the glow of health, and the puffed appearance is gone from the face. She has increased nine pounds in weight in two months, and is thereby encouraged to believe that what has so improved her physical condition will ultimately accomplish a complete cure. J.
