Opening lead—jack of clubs.

A few years ago the bridge World magazine ran a feature called Favorite hands. The top experts were solicited by Dick Frey, who wrote the articles to submit favorite hands.

Naturally enough, most of the hands submitted showed the experts in a favorable light. Charley Lochridge, one of our finest players, found his favorite to be one where he stumbled over his own feet and fell flat on his face.

Considering Charley is as great a dummy-player as you'll ever see, his selection of this hand as his favorite is all the more remarkable.

Lightner, North; Mrs. S. Wainwright, East; and Sam Fry, Jr., West.

The game was rubber bridge and, according to Charley, when he bid six diamonds, Sam Fry was so startled he doubled before he gave he situation a second thought.

Lochridge's partner, the ever-lugubrious Lightner, gazed at Charley as if he had been stabbed in the back by his best friend. The rest of the story should be told in Charley's own words:

"West opened the jack of clubs and when I got a look at dummy I was so awed by my own brilliance I forgot to cover. This play automatically qualifies me as a life-master moron, Fry went into a coma.

"How long this might have lasted there is no way of telling. but I could see that Lightner was suffering unbearably (and besides my time at the bridge table is extremly valuable) so I spead my hand and claimed the balance. No one has ever accused Sam of being unable to count to thirteen. He led a heart which his partner trumped.

I managed to grab Lightner just before he jumped out the window, and tried to console him with the fact the opponents could make six spades. But even today, after all the years, when Lightner sees me his mumbled greeting sounds suspiciously like 'You big jerk.'"

Former U.S. Senator Is Critical Of U.S. Policy

By MEL SUFRIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Former U.S. senator Herbert H. Lehman said Wednesday the recent suicide of the Canadian ambassador to Egypt is a "tragic example" of what can happen when fundamental rights and freedoms are sacrificed to the exigencies of the East-West struggle.

"To combat the enemy, we have to some extent adopted his ways of fear, regression and intolerance," he declared in an address to a meeting of North American Reform Jewish leaders.

He attacked the U.S. Senate internal security sub-committtee and its chairman, Senator James Eastland (Dem. Miss.), for reviving old charges—denied by the Canadian government—that E. H. Norman, Canadian envoy to Cairo, had once been a Communist.

Mr. Norman committed suicide in the Egyptian capital shortly after the charges were renewed

"SAD DAY"

Referring to the unsubstantiated RCMP report on Mr. Norman's past which apparently got into the sub-committee's hands, Mr. Lehman said:

"It is a sad day—but that day has been with us for some time now—when police intelligence reports concerning individuals, based on the statements of unnamed or unsupported informers, can be freely used to furnish grist for newspaper headlines."

"If the general public were animated by deep moral purpose, we would not continue to tolerate such vagrant and dangerous operations as those of the house un-American activities committee and the Senate internal security sub-committee."

The former senator, a Reform Jew, himself, spoke at a meeting of the combined campaign for American Reform Judaism, the fund-raising arm of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations which is holding its 44th biennial convention here.

MAN OF THE CENTURY

He was presented with an award as American Reform Jewery's "man of the century."

In his speech he criticized what he called the "upside-down attitude" in the U.S. and some other Western governments toward the Middle East problem.

The former New York governor exempted from his criticism on the Middle East the Canadian government which, he said, has shown a "statesmanlike attitude and understanding" of the problem.

Mr. Lehman said that if Americans had an underlying moral purpose, there would be no question of what U.S. Middle East policy would be.

"It would be built on a determination to remove the basic cause of strife and unrest. It would guarantee our little sister democracy of Israel . . . against attack and threatened annihilation.

"It would insist on freedom of navigation in both the Suez Canal and the Gulf of Aqaba for Israel as well as other nations. It would be directed a timproving the condition of all the people of the Middle East, rather than making accommodations with feudalistic regimes for the sake of temporary political or economic advantage."

Helicopters Track Herring

LONDON (CP) — Helicopters may be used to rack down herring in the North Sea this summer.

The secretary of state for Scotland, John Maclay, said in the House of Commons the British government is considering a proposal that experimental efforts should be made to locate herring shoals by use of helicopters.

The minister made the statement after Sir Robert Boothby, a Conservative member who represents a Scottish constituency, said it is absolutely vital that herring should be found in the North Sea, or the herring industry "might as well pack up."

BEDTIME STORIES

Old Orchard Chat

'Tis good to have a little chat,
A friendly talk on this and that.
—Jenny Wren.

Peter Rabbit was over in the Old Orchard. Peter is rather fond of the Old Orchard. He goes over there often. He has many friends there. Even in the middle of winter he is pretty sure to find someone among his feathered friends who is spending the winter either in the Old Orchard or near it.

Peter is especially fond of the Old Orchard in the springtime. He is quite sure that nowhere in all the Great World is there a lovelier place than the Old Orchard when all the apple trees are in blossom.

"I'm over here to get the news," said Peter.

The trees were not in blossom yet, but they would be before long. Peter found Polly Chuck still living in the old home under the stone wall on the edge of the Old Orchard. Polly and Peter are old friends.

"Hello, Peter," said Polly Chuck. She was sitting on her doorstep. "What brings you over here"

"I'm over here to get the news," said Peter.

"You should bring news if you expect to get news. That is only fair," said Polly Chuck.

"How can I bring news if I don't get it first" asked Peter.

Just then Striped Chipmunk poked his head out from between stones of the old wall, just back of Polly Chuck's doorway. Of course he saw Peter at once. "Hello, Longears,' said he.

"Hello yourself," replied Peter. "What's the news"

"You tell. I haven't been away from the Old Orchard since you were here last and neither has Polly Chuck. So how can we have any news" retorted Striped Chipmunk.

"You should have a lot of news," declared Peter "Aren't there any newcomers here in the Old Orchard. You know I haven't been over here for quite awhile. Haven't you any new neighbors"

Just then they heard a voice scolding a little way off. "Tut-tut-tut-tut-", scolded the voice.

"Jenny Wren!" cried Peter. "I didn't know Jenny was back."

"Well, you know now," replied Polly Chuck as Jenny Wren continued to scold.

"Is Johnny with her?" asked Peter.

"Well, who do you think she is scolding if not Johnny Wren" spoke up Striped Chipmunk.

And then there was a lovely little song. It was a familiar little song. It was Johnny Wren's reply to Jenny Wren's scolding tongue. "He doesn't seem to mind the scolding," said Peter.

"Some folks are funny. They scold most the ones they love most. I guess that is just what Jenny Wren is doing,' said Polly Chuck.

Johnny Wren sang again. It was a lovely little spring song, good to hear.

"Tut-tut-tut-tut-tut-", scolded Jenny Wren.

Sterling Areas' Revenues Increase

LONDON (Reuters)—The sterling areas gold and dollar reserves rose by $111,000,000 during April, the treasury announced Thursday.

Main reason for the big increase is that during the month Britain put back into the reserves $104,000,000 earlier put aside as interest on loans from the United States and Canada.

During the height of the Suez Canal crisis, when Britain was facing oil supply difficulties, she asked the two countries to waive this interest. Since then both the United States and Canada have agreed to do so.

The gold and dollar reserves now stand at $2,320,000,000, the treasury said.
