RICH WOMEN ARE HUNTING

ANNNOYANCES THAT AN HEIRESS MUST SUBMIT TO.
Wives of the Fortune Hunter He Make It His Business to Propose to Every Rich Girl He Meets—The Newspaper Post.

The position of an heiress is a very trying one at any time. It is not so bad for a young girl who is content with too much staidness, or for a plain girl who is blinded by excessive vanity. It is worst of all for a plain girl who knows that she is plain and is oppressed by the fear that every man who is decently civil to her is pursuing her with the hope of marrying her for her money.

An heiress very soon learns that she is regarded as "fair game" by almost every man with whom she is brought in contact, and many of her would-be capturers, in their anxiety to secure the prey as soon as possible, do not trouble to give her the ordinary "in" to her during the ordinary delays and deceptions of courtship—before coming to a proposal of marriage.

One heiress tells a story of a certain man who was invited to a luncheon party expressly to meet her (as she afterward found out). He was introduced to her before lunch and sat next to her during the meal, when he made a far more favorable impression on her, owing to the rapid and cynical nature of his conversation, after lunch he contrived to pin her into a corner, on pretence of showing her some photographs, and, without more delay, asked her to marry him. She was so outraged by what she regarded as an insult that she did not answer, turned away and has since resolutely refused his acquaintance.

He was asked by an intimate friend why he hurried matters so and he replied: "Well, you see, I was going to meet Miss X—(naming another heiress)—at dinner in the evening, and I wanted to know whether Miss Y—would have me or not, in order to know how to behave to Miss X."

In another case a certain man was in love with a girl, whom he thought had money. As it happened, she had but little and he had less, so she told him they could not marry.

"But there's my friend Miss L., the heiress; why don't you make up to her?" She thereupon introduced him to the heiress, and in a very short time she told the latter that she was the only girl he ever loved. The heiress laughed.

"Either you must be very forgetful or very tickle," she said. "A week ago you were for ever asking my friend to dance with her all night, were always with her, and had no eyes for anyone else. If you have forgotten her already, you may as well not meet at all, and if you have not forgotten her, how can you have the assurance to tell me that I am the only girl you ever loved?"

A form of annoyance which every heiress has to go through is that of being proposed to by a certain number of impudic men, who make it a regular business to offer themselves as suitors. The heiress who is the object of their attentions, who makes it a regular business to offer themselves as suitors, who make it a regular business to offer themselves as suitors.

Another heiress was pestered by a correspondent who used to write her a long and often very complimentary letter, in which he not only called her by every endearing name and professed his undying devotion to her, but actually invited her to his "dinner," "her last dear letter," and the kisses which he had pressed upon her "dear lips." Whether those letters were written by a madman or a scoundrel was never known, and they ceased as unexpectedly as they had begun.

While they lasted they were a source of great trouble to the poor girl, who was especially anxious that they should not fall into other hands than her own. In a third case an heiress received a written proposal from a gentleman whom she knew very slightly. It happened that shortly afterwards two girls came to see her who were also heiresses and intimate friends of hers. In the course of conversation she alluded to the proposal which she had had, whereupon it was ascertained that both her visitors had some little time before received proposals from the same man, which they had refused. The heiress was so indignant at the heartlessness displayed by the man that she referred to her knowledge of it in her reply.

Another girl was really in love with an impudent man and consented joyfully when he asked her to be his wife. But when he found that her fortune was not so large as he had supposed, and that her parents declined to settle anything on him, he broke off the engagement.

It is as annoying, but quite troublesome enough, is the newspaper criticism and advertisement which a rich girl has to go through. "One ladies' paper will say that she is 'not exactly good looking, but very pleasant in expression.' Another observes that she has blue eyes, when she is most anxious that everyone should know that they are gray. A third ladies' paper will describe her features for feature, and every one of them wrong, and wind up by observing that, as she will have a dowry of so much a year, she is one of the greatest catches in the matrimonial market.

Then there are the ladies' columns and "gossip" in other papers, which will observe that she was in the park by Sunday in green, and that her appearance was not improved by the cold; or will say that she has taken to cycling, and describes her early tumbles; or will find out that she smokes, and express a hope that she will "grow out of that;" or will the strength of the fact that she was once at a private view, will include her in the list of "those present" at almost every artistic function of the year, and sandwich her in between the newest divorcee and the latest erotic minor poet.

Abtuction may be dismissed from the list of an heiress' possible troubles, but undue influence is not by any means the least of them. Her family may insist on her marrying some man who is absolutely objectionable to her, but who is a person of high rank. Of course, no girl can be really forced to marry a man put on a sensitive girl which renders life so intolerable that she will do anything to escape. Again, an unscrupulous guardian (if she be so unfortunate) as to be left an orphan) may exercise pressure on her through her feelings of gratitude and obedience, to oblige her in spite of her objections to marry to secure her property in his own family.—Boston Herald.

MEN'S STYLES THIS SPRING.

Large Checks—New Shaped Hat—The Toga Overcoat.
According to The New York World, the young man's fancy this spring will lightly turn to thoughts of large check clothes. This direction of his fancy will be accomplished without much effort on his part for the best London tailors have decided that cloth of a large check pattern shall be worn.

The most trustworthy features of the latest form of evening dress is the piping which edging the waistcoat and the tails of the coat. It is of gross-grain silk.

The tails of the coat are not very long, fit closely to the figure and are cut sharply away. There may be four buttons on the sleeves. The cuffs are occasionally turned over. A remarkable innovation is the outside breast pocket.

The shawl collar has passed away. The notch collar faced with silk remains. No striking variation is promised in the frock coat, that garment in which all sartorial art finds its climax. The very long tail, frock coat, of course, an abomination in the eyes of those who sit on the pinnacles of fashion. The frock coat should barely cover the knees and fit closely behind the waist.

The new silk hat is of exactly the same design as the one that was in vogue about seven years ago. The body is perfectly straight and the brim is of tapering slightly towards the top. It is, in fact, the stovepipe returned. The brim is smaller and less curled than in the late hat.

The latest pattern in derby hats is called the D'Orsay. The crown is low, being but four and a half inches high, and its general shape is square. The brim has a half inch roll. Like all other fashions, this hat is not new but a revival. It is practically the same that was worn about thirty years ago.

We are at least two months from the season of straw hats, but the fashions may be foretold. For a year or so London swells have taken kindly to straw hats. At first they wore them with very wide brims and low crowns, but they were soon adopted by every Tom, Dick and Harry. Then the golden ones were forced to hats with high crowns and narrow brims. These are still to be seen.

Scarf hats for summer use, called Alpine and Italian, will also have high crowns and narrow brims. In color they will vary from pearl gray to light brown and tan.

The new overcoat for evening wear is called the toga. It is believed that the Roman Senator's garment was made of a great circular piece of cloth, in which a hole was cut for the head. The new overcoat is constructed on a similar principle. It opens, of course, in front, where there is but one fastening, a clasp, at the neck, with chain. The material is black cloth without lining. It requires about seven yards of cloth to make a toga. It is a great recommendation is that it is difficult to wear with grace.

THE KENT CASE.
OTTAWA, April 20.—A visit paid yesterday to the work of the British North American Bank Note Printing Company in whose employment is Mr. G. H. Kent, the report of whose recovery from Bright's disease with all its accompanying horrors of swollen limbs, convulsions, coma, and fearful pains, has been the cause of so much discussion in the city, showing that he is still in the enjoyment of the health which he has gained by the judicious use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. For a man who may be said to have had one foot in the grave, and whose health is repaired, it he presented a remarkable picture of health and vigor, and pursued his work at the heavy press without any indication of weariness. He is loud in his praises of the remedy which cured him.

"No, George," said the mature but still lovely maiden by her youthful adorer, "I can never be anything more than a mother to you. Your father spoke first."

20 YEARS OF SUFFERING.
20 Failures to Cure
For 20 years I suffered the torments of the damned with blind and itching piles. Had known of any cure I would not have hesitated to have given hundreds of dollars to obtain it. I followed the instructions of an eminent physician in using syringe treatments. I used Fowler's Pile Cure and 20 others of different kinds. From some a little relief was gained, but nothing approached a cure. I was about resigned to the fate of having to pass through an almost uninterrupted course of suffering so long as I lived, when Chase's Ointment was brought to my notice. The statements in regard to it were so strong and bore with them a sense of conviction sufficient to overcome my skepticism in regard to its being no better than the rest. I used it with the result of receiving immediate relief and permanent cure. For weeks and weeks I was fearfully afraid of a return to misery, but it did not occur. I relied on Chase's Ointment, hoping for relief, and realized a cure that is permanent. I do not believe there ever was a worse case of blind and itching piles than mine, which leads me to think there is not a case to be recorded that Chase's Ointment will not cure.
Yours truly,

SIR MCKENZIE SWELL'S CRAFTY ANSWER
That the election would take place some time between this and 1897 marks the astute politician. Uncertainty as to the date is a little annoying, but personal comfort, to the ordinary citizen, appeals more powerfully than any political question; and Righty Porous Waterproofs are the perfection of comfort on a rainy day. No other name, no other claim, can be considered in the same breath with Righty. Most perfect of all the waterproofing processes, Righty offers perfect ventilation, stylish appearance, and lasting wear. A garment for the rainy day; a fine Tweed overcoat, absolutely rainproof yet porous, the cloth of which is undistinguishable from that of any ordinary garment. Ask for Righty.

The Professor of Botany was puzzled—"This is most extraordinary," he muttered. He looked again. "Strange that I cannot classify them." He was examining the flowers on his wife's Easter bonnet.

Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart gives perfect relief in all cases of Organic or Sympathetic Heart Disease in 30 minutes, and speedily effects a cure. It is a peerless remedy for Palpitation, Shortness of Breath, Smothering Spells, Pain in Left Side and all symptoms of a Diseased Heart. One dose convinces. Sold by S. W. Dodd.

If too rapid eating causes dyspepsia, and it in its turn produces nervous exhaustion, debility, weakness, anaemia, etc., the first step in effecting a cure is to eat slowly. The second and most important is to take a course of Hawker's tonic and stomach tonic, which aids the process of digestion, invigorates the stomach, renews the vitality of the blood, relieves brain fatigue, and makes weak nerves strong.

"Isn't it sad," asked the young girl, romantically, "to think of the roses of your year?" "It is," said the young man, emphatically. "I have an unpaid florist's bill of $24."

Neglects and the Result.
Neglect of the head and you will surely have catarrh. Neglect nasal catarrh and you will as surely induce pulmonary diseases or catarrh of the stomach with its disgusting attendants: foul breath, hawking, spitting, blowing, etc. Stop it all by using Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure, 25 cents a box cures.

Within the memory of middle-aged people Consumption and other lung troubles were much more prevalent and fatal than they are to-day. The existing improvement in the public health in this respect is, in considerable measure, due to a more widespread appreciation of sanitary laws; but Puttner's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, and Pancreatic, may justly claim to have largely aided in the good work. Many persons who some years ago were in a most critical state of health, are to-day strong and well, as a consequence of a faithful use of this valuable remedy.

Relief in Six Hours.—Dressing Kidney and Bladder diseases relieved in six hours by the "Great South American Kidney Cure." This new remedy is a great success and delight on account of its exceeding promptness in relieving pain in the bladder, kidneys, back and every part of the urinary passages in male or female. It relieves retention of water and pain in passing it almost immediately. If you want quick relief and cure this is your remedy.
