DENTISTRY.

THE cry of "Hard times" and "No money" is universal. Yet people lose their teeth, and in consequence their health. Again, recent improvements have cheapened the cost of Dental material;—considering which I have decided to reduce my prices, and for three months from the date of this I will make a set of teeth for Ten Dollars. Parts of sets correspondingly cheap. More than this I will use good material and guarantee, in every case, a perfect fit.

National Characteristics.

Since the days of Tacitus, the subject De Moribus Germanorum has never been worthily treated. It has been the custom to epitomize the character of a nation in a proverb. Voltaire, whose wit, like a Malay kreese, carried poison on its blade, turned his satire on his own countrymen, whom he epigrammatically described as Moiety singe, moitie tigre. A German proverb says, "A German will do as much work as three Russians, an Englishman as much as three Germans, and an American as much as three Englishmen." The Italians say "It takes three Jews to make a Genoese, and three Genoese to make a Greek." The Turks are as little complimentary to their own nation as Voltaire to his, for they say, "The Turks hunt hares in carriages drawn by oxen;" and of the Persians, whom they regard as heretical Mohammedans, they say that in the other world they will be transformed into asses to carry Jews into a locality not to be named to ears polite. Of a greater liar they say, "Send him to Persia to teach Persians to lie;" and the Russians they describe as "Bears in kid gloves."

The great fault of a German is that he cannot understand a joke unless it be a very practical one; and herein he resembles the matter-of-fact lowland Scot and the English peasant. The Frenchman, who has but a dash of German blood in his veins, is active in mind and body, has neither time nor pertinacity to be inquisitive; he has general views, but changes them every moment; is quick to anger, ambitious and egotistical, but none so readily takes or makes a joke. Count Bulow cleverly describes the three nations—French, English and German. "Many years ago," says the Count, "a prize was offered for the best drawing of a camel. A French artist, as soon as he heard of it, rushed to the Jardin des Plantes, and in a week had finished a beautiful imaginative picture. The Englishman took a week to consider, and then went to Arabia, whence he returned in six months with an accurate and bold sketch of the subject. The German shut himself up in his atelier, and endeavored to elaborate a camel from the depths of his moral consciousness, and he is still at work."—The late W. H. Harrison, in University Magazine.

The Earl of Derby now scowls at his wife's step-son, the Marquis of Salisbury, from the cross benches of the House of Lords. His Lordship is no orator, and has owed his success to a general belief in his common sense and supposed hard-headedness. His outside influence is diminished by the fact that his brother and heir presumptive sits in Beaconsfield's Cabinet.

The Archbishop of Canterbury deserves and receives universal sympathy in the loss he has suffered in the death of his wife. To quote some elegant words of Dr. Newman, she was happy in being gifted with "largeness of mind, abhorrence of strife, clemency of criticism, absence of suspicion, tenderness of compassion, and love of brotherhood," and invariably made a practice of looking more to the ends aimed at than to the manner in which work was done. The Queen not only telegraphed her condolence to the Archbishop of Canterbury, but sent him a kind letter of sympathy.

Her Royal and Imperial Highness the Duchess of Edinburgh.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Edinburgh, and the Royal children, arrived at Clarence House, London, two days before the arrival of the Duke of Edinburgh with the Black Prince, at Portsmouth. The Duchess and family left Mayence, via Cologne, Brussels and Calais. His Excellency the Russian Ambassador, attended by Count Ceneroff, Baron Aldressy, and ladies, left London by special train, to meet the Royal Duchess and her children at Dover. Immediately after, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Prince Leopold, the Duke of Cambridge, the Princess Mary Adelaide, Duchess and the Duke of Teck, followed by Royal train, and met her Imperial Highness at Dover. The distinguished party returned by special train, and reached Clarence House in the afternoon. The Duchess and children were in excellent health, and were warmly received on their arrival in London. Clarence House is the city residence of the Duke of Edinburgh.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

[A correspondent hints that next summer we may look for some stir in Halifax harbor. A Russian fleet, commanded by a Russian Prince, arriving as escort, with British ships of war, with his Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh, as Admiral, and accompanied by the Duchess and their three children.—He. Herald.]

Notes by a Subscriber.

MR. CHARLES STEWART, of Bradalbane, lost a child on Saturday last, with diphtheria. The father and mother are also low with this fearful disease.

WELL ADVANCED IN GRAMMAR.—While the first-class in grammar was parsing, one of the class, a lass of sixteen years, was asked to parse "cow;" and not being in full friendship with the teacher, she said "cow" was a noun, singular number, and stood for "Mary." The teacher wished her to explain why the cow stood for "Mary." She said that Mary milked the cow, and if she did not stand Mary could not milk her.

BRIGHT BOY.—A gentleman was trying to catch a runaway horse. He called to a youth to stop him. The youth said he had no stopper. "Well, head him." "He is already headed." "Turn him, then." "He is right side out now." "Well, for sake, speak to him." "Good morning, Mr. Horse," said the boy, and let him go.

ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN.—Be polite. Speak when you are spoken to. Be generous—be kind. Read good books. Don't tattle. Learn something new every day. Follow for a business the natural bent of your mind. Keep the company of those superior to yourself. Don't smoke. Never sing, whistle, or read in company unless you are asked. Never rest your feet upon another seat.

The Good Farmer.

1. He considereth a field and buyeth it. He looketh well to the title, that his children may not become outcasts.

2. He fences it around with a strong wall. His flocks and herds do not trespass upon the domain of his neighbor, but increase and fatten within his own bounds.

3. He ploweth deep. He harrows liberally and manures abundantly. He feeds the earth with rich food. At the harvest he repeth much grain.

4. He dots his land with fruit trees. His apples fill his chambers, and his vineyards run over with pure wine.

5. He riseth with the lark. The morning sun finds him at labor. He cometh from his fields when evening shadows gather, but he resteth from his labors in the heat of the day.

6. He buildeth barns and storehouses. His cattle increase in numbers and his purse is filled with plenty. Whatsoever he doeth prospers, for his labor is directed by the wisdom of experience.

7. He pays cash for his necessities. His name is not found on the ledger of the merchant. His name is not a familiar one in courts of justice.

8. He pays tithes without grumbling. He bears his share of the public burdens. He casts his ballot as a free man and seeks no office.

9. His home is a paradise of beauty: flowers and vines in great abundance please the senses, educate the taste and purify the soul.

10. His sons and his daughters are known in the land. They dispense his charities. The poor, the sick and the afflicted are sought out and receive comfort, sympathy, relief.

11. He storeth the chambers of his brain with exact knowledge. His head and his hands are co-laborers. He reads the papers and profits by their teachings.

12. He gives from his fountain of knowledge to all who ask. He is not puffed up with vanity or filled with self-conceit and arrogance.

Young Housewife.—"What miserable little eggs again! You really must tell them, Jane, to let the hens sit on them a little longer!"

Curate (visiting poor cabman, down with bronchitis).—"Have you been in the habit of going to church?" Poor cabby (faintly).—"Can't say I hev, sir; but (eagerly) I hev druv a good many parties there, sir!"
