REMINISCENCES OF WAR.

The Old Soldier Recalls His Experience With the Army Shoe.

"The first pair of shoes I had in the army," said the old soldier, "were two sizes too big for me. I wore sizes; my first army shoes were eights. I didn't take them from choice—I got the nearest I could to my size. We were being fitted out from head to foot for the first time; that was when we were mustered in, and the required numbers of pairs of shoes, of assorted sizes, had been delivered to each company. When I got at them, they had been culled over so much that there was nothing left smaller than eights.

"I didn't think it would be possible for me to wear a shoe two sizes too big for me, but I tried a pair on. They were brogans, having flaps, with two eyelets on each side, lacing over the instep with leather shoe strings. They tied snugly, so that the heel and open part of the shoe, and the sole, did not shuck on the foot. The forward part of my foot felt as though it were outdoors, but I thought they might do; I had got to have a pair of shoes, and I took them.

"I wore those shoes for months, and with the greatest comfort. They were enormous, or they looked so to me. As soon as I began to wear them the thick leather of the uppers humped up into big, rounded ridges, with valleys between, across the top, giving to the top of the shoe a sort of fluted or corrugated effect. These corrugations remained always just the same as long as I wore the shoes. They were not what you would call a handsome shoe, but, as I said, they did not shuck around on my feet, and they were mighty comfortable.

"But it doesn't follow that after that I always got shoes two sizes too big for me; as a matter of fact, I didn't, but I always did get shoes plenty large for me; plenty, and found comfort in wearing them.

"Sometimes we used to draw boots, cavalry boots. And it was kind of fun to get boots. I remember very well the first pair of boots I drew. I think I felt (perhaps in a little maturer sort of way, though not much so, either) about as much pleased over that pair of boots as I did with my first red tops when I was a boy. To get on a pair of cavalry boots sort of made a man feel a little bit less like a plodding infantryman, and a little more like a cavalryman; it gave him a sort of a horse and sabre touch. But this was only as he walked down the company street after drawing the boots from the quartermaster. The next day, on picket, the boots were about the same to him as shoes would have been.

"Still, there were men who preferred boots and always drew boots when they could get them. But for myself I liked shoes better. A mounted man, of course, wants boots, but according to my notion the most comfortable thing for an infantry soldier to wear is a good, roomy shoe that can be made snug enough somewhere so that it won't shuck around on the foot." —New York Sun.

Chance or Design.

He should have lived in the days of chivalry. He is so constituted that he cannot bring himself within the common sense rules prescribed for the government of modern society, and the story of his experiences would be a big volume of romance.

"There are two events in my life," he says, "that mix me all up on the material, the spiritual and the influences that are operative in behalf of fate. At one time I was caught in the floods of the Mississippi valley. I had assisted in helping a good many and began to believe myself a kind of storm god who could successfully defy the elements when I was caught in the whirl one night and went booming toward the gulf with no better prospect than that I would in the end succumb. While floating on my back and striving to be philosophical, I felt my face swept by the leaves of a tree branch, seized it with both hands and was saved to live the remainder of my life.

"Three years later, because of experiences that made me weary of life, I was ready to cut the thread of my own existence. I had lost faith in humanity. It seemed to me that the last shred of honor, fraternity and good will had disappeared. While I was settling my affairs, with a view to taking the eternal future into my own hands, I met a woman who restored my faith and confidence. She was good. She routed my cynicism. She put a new face on this probationary existence of ours. She gave me new views, new impulses, new ambitions. It was her fair and dimpled hand that drew me back and filled me with a desire to go on to the end. She did what the unconscious tree branch had done three years before. Can it be that the same power was not behind both acts?" —Detroit Free Press.

Chinese Soldiers.

Chinese soldiers march anyhow. Their armament is in the highest degree varied. One has a rifle; a second, a sword; a third, both rifle and sword; a fourth, a spear. In fact, so diverse is their equipment that it is impossible to describe the numerous variations. The noncommissioned officers possess revolvers and swords, but the officers are entirely unarmed.

Had Her Doubts.

"I have been told," said she, as they sat in a shady corner of the porch, "that you have rather a grasping disposition." "You don't believe it, do you?" he asked. "Dear me, no. I have never seen you exhibit the least sign of catching on." —Indianapolis Journal.

It has been frequently stated that steam is driving sailing vessels off the seas. It appears that about one-half of the tonnage of the world is in vessels propelled by wind, and even in Britain 40 per cent of the tonnage is in sailing vessels.

The Bell Organ & Piano Co., Ltd

Dear Sis,—Allow me to compliment you on the qualities of the Piano ordered from you for the Toronto Conservatory of Music. The tone is remarkably pure and brilliant throughout, while the bass is deep and powerful. The mechanism is apparently perfect, the touch elastic, and in appearance the entire Piano is a work of art

Yours truly,
