TWO SPRING CREATIONS

These two spring fashions were among creations previewed in New York to fashion writers as part of American designers show. Left is double - breasted jacket with tie neckline, under which is a sleeveless vest which buttons down front. Three - piece costume, creation of designer Jacques Tiffeau, is pink and white checked wool mohair. Right is taupe, gray and white back - belted coat in houndsteeth, another Tiffeau design. Coat has deep side pleats for extra stride room. (AP Wirephoto).

MARY HAWORTH

'Crush' On Camp Friend Sign Of Growing Pains

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 14, in love with a camp counsellor, I'll call her Marjean. She is 15-½ and a friend of my sister, who is 16.

The past two summers I've gone to camp a few hundred miles from here. I smoke a little at camp not much, maybe one cigarette a day.

Last summer I had no way of getting cigarettes at camp, so I filched them from my counsellor Marjean. My conscience bothered me and I felt I should confess. But I kept putting it off, afraid she might yell at me or tell my sister.

When finally I did confess, Marjean's reply surprised me. She said she didn't mind, that she would even give me cigarettes except counsellors weren't allowed to. She refused payment.

Afterward I sent her little notes, saying how much I liked her. Also I did pay for the cigarettes I had taken. One night I sent her different kind of note, paying her lots of compliments, saying she is the nicest person I've ever met and the best counsellor . . .

She thanked me for the note and kissed me and said it was the nicest gift she was ever given. I felt terrific after she kissed me.

The last night at camp everyone was crying because this was the end of the season. I cried because I probably never would see Marjean again; she lives in another town . . .

Since being home I've written Marjean several letters and she answered once. She and my sister talk on the telephone but I haven't had a chance to speak to her. In letters to my sister she often sends regards to me.

I cry myself to sleep almost every night, thinking of Marjean. I really love her; I have her initials written all over, with mine, in a heart. I don't know what to do about this; it is almost ruining my life. Please advise me. Thank you. G.S.

DEAR G.S.: Cheer up. This isn't a case of being in love. It is rather a matter of growing pains. There are different types of growing pains. The sore of discomfort and or heartache one has depends upon how fast, or how slowly, one is growing.

Very few children grow at an overall even pace, with mind, body and emotional constitution maturing at equal speed, in easy harmony.

Some boys and girls are mentally precocious from an early age, showing a grasp of learning that verges on genuis, before they are six or eight or 10 years old, while their emotional nature and their physical size continue to be quite childlike.

Other boys and girls may grow like bean vines physically, while their minds track slowly and their emotions muddle along uncertainly, showing progress one day and backsliding the next. (That is, until their overall development begins to even up, and level off, in the latter teens or early twenties).

There are almost as many mix-match patternsn of growth (along the lines indicated above) as there are children. Every child is hard at work, whether he knows it or not, "getting his growth," as the phrase is. Sometimes his family is a help on this score; but just as often the family is hardy any help at all.

Now, to come to grips with your present emotional upset.

As I get the picture, you are heart-hungry for warm loyalty, sympathetic understanding, psychological support and affirmation from your family, your mother especially, that you haven't received. At least, not sufficient to satisfy your growth-needs. If you had been well nourished on this score, as your growth-needs require, you would be ready by now (or any minute now) to get smitten with boys.

But it happens that you are undernourished in this respect. So, in effect, you are turning back the clock, temporarily, as regards your emoional development, by having a crush on a girl-a kind of mother-substitute. You day deram of a "first-love" exchange with her, to assuage a sense of "something missed" in relation to your mother.

What to do about it? Awareness of what goes on should cool the fever. Recognize the crush as a symptom that you've got some emotional growing to do, to get on the beam of wholesome, rewarding sweetheart love. Make up your mind to turn off these fantasies of a romance with Marjean.

IDA BAILEY ALLEN

Pears Beyond Compare Make Tempting Relish

IDA BAILEY ALLEN

FROM the Northwest comes a refreshing new relish made of sweet juicy winter pears, bright cranberries, sugar and a hint of lemon, deftly combined into a meat accompaniment that deserves applause.

Perfect Accompaniment

This Pear Cranberry Relish is a perfect "go along" with poultry, smoked meats, roast beef, veal and lamb.

Anjou, Bosc and Comice pears, the winter pear varieties, are alike in taste - appeal and quite different in appearance, but may be used interchangeably.

The Anjou is green in color even when fully ripe and, as all pears, yields to gentle pressure when ready to eat.

The Bosc, recognized as the "gift box pear," is heart-shaped, often with a reddish blush on its greenish yellow skin.

Measurements level; recipes for 6

FRESH PEAR - CRANBERRY RELISH

2 Anjou, Bosc or Comice pears
4 c. (1 lb.) fresh cranberries
1-3 lemon, with peel
2 c. sugar

Quarter and core pears. Wash cranberries; stem if necessary. Put fruits through coarse blade of food chopper. Add sugar and mix well. Refrigerate 6 hrs. or more. Makes 2 pts.

SUNDAY DINNER

Grapefruit Halves
(Filled with Fresh Pear-Cranberry Relish)
Roast Beef with
Cauliflower Vinaigrette
(hot or cold)
Baked Macarooned Peaches
or
Canned Peaches with Half-thawed Raspberries
Coffee, Tea, Milk

BAKED MACAROONED PEACHES

1 can (1 lb. 13 oz.) cling peach halves
6 almond or coconut macaroons (2 inches each)
2 tbsp. brown sugar
1 tbsp. butter

Drain peaches; arrange hollow-side up in baking pan Crush macaroons; combine with brown sugar. Heap into peaches. Dot with butter.

Bake in 375 degrees F. (mod.) oven 12 to 15 min.

Slip under broiler 1 min. to glaze tops. Serve warm with cream or ice cream.

TOMORROW'S DINNER

Let stand about 3 min. before unmolding.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Sparrows Haunt Yards When Cold Winds Blow

"January has only the frosts and the sparrows! It's a bleak month" one we talked with today, remarked.

"And the owls!" we reminded him with a chuckle, recalling that the "Wh-o-oo!" of one reaching us over the night-fields invariably bids us listen to its charm. There is an eerie quailty to that hunting call, which comes from firry upland thicket, or perhaps from a grove by the stream. In any event, it comes across distance, accenting the silence of the farmlands. Forecasting, as older folk will have it, the weather. Will it continue fair? We wonder, trying to determine the location whence it arises.

A bleak month? In a way. But the snow is white and clean — and warm, a garment of the resting fields. And the frosts are our diamonds. Not to wear but to exclaim over, and admire, as they scintillate in a rainbow of colors against the bosom of the snow.

And the sparrows? What plucky little creatures they are, gleaning grains and seeds in the wintry bareness, picking up crumbs at the doors. Obviously light - winged and happy in the warmth of the sunlight, stopping in a company on a shrub to chat, to laugh over some amusing incident, or bird-joke. And then, when winds blow cold, quite forlorn rounds of feathers somewhat dejected in their circumstances, as can be sometimes we humans in ours, nevertheless with "heads unbowed."

"I'm to feed the cattle — come with me" Mack invited us this evening, when at the time, James and the younger farmer were away.

If, as some poet has declared "mothers have the happy knack of tying bows and sashes" a boy who likes his farming, has a gift for tending the stock. Hands that open bales, and distribute flakes of hay to the mangers, and add straw to the beds in a manner which glorifies his work, has it — that tend to the milking, and feed the calves, or let them to their dams to nurse.

No impatience, Mack showed throughout, no sign of displeasure, no complaint. No angry slap was given to any creature, but many an understanding word and a pat as human to human it seemed, the evening chore was being done. There was a smoothness to it, a spirt of co-operation between lad and animal, reflected, we could fancy, even in the pair of barn-cats at the alert then in probable mouse-terrain there.

And then feeding past, he tidied the floors, checked the workings of any suspected water - bowl, showed a yearling unaccustomed to this mode of quenching thirst, where to find her drink, replaced a broken bar on a calf-pen, tapped down an open window, and was happy this was "a night free frorm schoolwork" as he turned out last lights.

We parted where paths crossed. A mild wind stirred the treetops. Above the yard-light, we caught sight of a star.

"I reckon I'll have to get a move on, if I'm going to get away to rink tonight!" he said.

And a change of weather, thr day brought. Mild and pleasant.

WA Is Given Suggestion To Brighten Devotion Period

St. Mark's Senior Anglican WA met at the home of Mrs. D.L. McInnis Friday afternoon January 3, with the president, Mrs. Elmer Moase in the chair. The meeting opened with a hymn, followed by responsive reading of Psalm 66, and the New Testament reading from St. John, led by Mrs. Albert stafford. Mrs. Bruce Graham conducted the prayer service. Roll call was answered with the word "Promise".

It was reported that Christmas treats were sent to the elderly and shut - ins, and a gift of flowers was presented to Mrs. J. G. Townsend who was a patient in the Prince County Hospital.

A leader has been found for the Junior Auxiliary in the person of Mary Rogers, and Mrs. Wayne Champion has been appointed leader of the Little Helpers. Mrs. H. L. Howard was appointed vice president, also interim flower fund secretary.

Mrs. Elmer Moase explained about the new form of devotional service in the Living Message, and suggested that the members might use this material to make the devotional period more interesting.

The study period was taken by Mrs. J. H. Sheen who read from the book, "The Kingdom, the Power and the Glory", which told of God's great act of salvation during the time of Moses. Next month the study period will be conducted by Mrs. Walter Moase.

Mrs. Harold Mill conducted a Bible quiz on the occupations of famous men of the Bible.

Mrs. Elmer Moase will be hostess for the next WA meeting. It was agreed that two members help the hostess on lunch each month as their names appear on the roll call.

Meeting closed with a hymn and prafer and benediction.

Lunch was served by the hostess.

MORELL UCW

The regular meeting of Morell UCW unit II was held in the church hall, Wednesday, January 8, in the form of a short business period only. Mrs. Marion Anderson presided, and 11 members and two visitors were present. All yearly reports were read and adopted.
