

Many persons cannot take plain cod-liver oil. They cannot digest it. It upsets the stomach. Knowing these things, we have digested the oil in Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites; that is, we have broken it up into little globules, or droplets. We use machinery to do the work of the digestive organs, and you obtain the good effects of the digested oil at once. That is why you can take Scott's Emulsion.

THE NICARAGUAN CANAL.

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY has called upon Congress to act at once in respect to the completion of the Nicaraguan canal. This call is doubtless a result of the delay of the battleship Oregon while coming round by Cape Horn during the critical period at the beginning of the recent Spanish-American war. The length of the canal, if constructed, will be 46 miles, of which about 15 miles will be on the Atlantic and 7½ miles on the Pacific side, or about one half of the whole distance, will be at sea level. Of this distance, 18 miles, or about two-fifths of the entire route, is practically completed so that at a moderate outlay for dredging it will be at once serviceable. There is therefore only to consider the 22½ miles between Bobio, on the Atlantic side, and Niraflores, on that of the Pacific. Two excellent harbors, which will demand no outlay for protection, are available; and the Panama railroad skirts the canal throughout its entire route to be availed of in construction. Ample quarters, in fair condition, for the increased force of laborers are already prepared at many sites. These advantages are great where time is of so much importance. It is claimed that the difficulties hitherto experienced from the unhealthy climate affecting the labor employed has been overcome by employing negroes from the British West Indies instead of coolies. As to the cost of the work General Abbot says that there appears to be considerable difference of opinion. The chief engineer of the company estimated it, in 1895, at $69,893,660, and the Ludlow commission at the same date, at $133,472,893.

Where Do the People Profit?

The politicians and the agencies that were going to do so much good under the new regime are doing good for themselves.

Eleven members of Parliament have dropped into nice sinecures.

The old stumpers who went on the platform about the hard lot of the farmer have forgotten the farmer and reached for situations.

Ministerial relatives have found comfort in offices and Ministers have woe'd pleasure in their luxurious cars and in their European and Washington trips at the public expense.

The old Globe has taken off its mask, and has led its factions right up to the trough and has helped them to "the stuff."

All the politicians and at least one of the organs are doing mighty well for themselves.

But what of the people? They get nothing but the right to pay more taxes.

The Pope Not Hostile

LONDON, Dec 6.—Wm T Stead, editor of the Review of Reviews, who has just returned from the Vatican, gives the correspondent of the Associated Press an unqualified denial of all stories representing that the Pope is hostile to the American policy regarding the Philippines. On the contrary, His Holiness is ready to cooperate with the United States in restoring order there.

—Elector of East Prince, are you satisfied with the Liberal Government? If you are, vote for Bell; if you are not, vote for LeFurgey—irrespective of every other consideration.

—The postal revenue seems to be dropping behind. The latest return concerning the five months from July to December contains this item:

Postal revenue, 1897, $1,439,000.

Postal revenue, 1898, $1,304,985.

Here is a decrease of $125,000 in five months. Something wrong, somewhere!

THE ONLY HOPE!

For Victims of Bright's Disease is Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Not a day passes on which the newspapers do not record the death of one or more persons from Bright's Disease. Already its victims number hundreds of thousands. Day by day the awful total grows larger. No class is safe from this destroyer.

War and intemperance, with all their miseries and fatalities, are not responsible for as many deaths as have been caused by Bright's Disease. Yet, there is a way of resisting it; of drawing its poisoned fangs, and making it as harmless as a summer breeze. That great medicine, Dodd's Kidney Pills, has cured thousands of the worst cases. It never fails to cure, hopeless as the case may seem.

Would you safely shield your loved ones from the fatal grip of this curse of mankind—Bright's Disease? Then use Dodd's Kidney Pills, the only cure on earth for this disease.

For The Children

When Santa Claus Comes.

A good time is coming; I wish it was here!

The very best time in the whole of the year;

I am counting each day, on my fingers and thumbs,

The hours that must pass before Santa Claus comes.

Good-bye for a while, then to lessons and school;

We can laugh talk and sing without "breaking the rule!"

No troublesome spelling, nor writing nor sums,

There's nothing but playtime when Santa Claus comes.

I suppose I shall have a new dolly, of course,

My last one was killed by a fall from her horse.

And for Harry and Jack there'll be trumpets and drums,

To deafen us all with when Santa Claus comes.

I'll hang up my stockings to hold what he brings;

I hope he will fill it with lots of nice things;

He must know how dearly I love sugar plums;

I'd like a big box full when Santa Claus comes.

Then while the big snowflakes so swiftly come down,

And the wind whistles sharp and the branches are brown,

I'll not mind the cold though my fingers it numbs,

For it brings us the time when good Santa Claus comes.—Selected.

A Boy Prodigy.

John Philip Baratier, the son of a French Protestant clergyman, was born in 1721. His learning was truly wonderful. He could speak in Latin, French and German, when he was only four years old, and at six he could read the Greek Testament. Between the ages of seven and ten he mastered the Hebrew tongue, and made a dictionary of the most difficult words for his own use. He then translated into French the Travels of Benjamin of Tudela, a Jew who had lived in the twelfth century.

Before he was fourteen, he had written and published a learned book against a divine named Crellins. About the same time he was made a Master of Arts at the University of Halle, and his fame reached the ears of the king, who often conversed with him, and made him presents.

The last four years of his life he spent at Halle, in the study of law. In 1740 he died of consumption, aged nineteen years and eight months, and thus a career of great promise was cut short. He left behind him many manuscripts, the chief part of which he was not able to finish. He was never fond of amusements, but he was always cheerful and happy, and he loved his father and mother as much as a boy could. So John Philip Baratier was good as well as clever.—Stanford

The Monkey and the Sugar

On one occasion a monkey was given a lump of sugar in a corked glass bottle. The monkey was fond of sugar, and the sight of this lump excited him. He tried every way that he could to get at it, twisting himself around the bottle, watching it slyly for a long time, then jumping on it suddenly, as if he thought he could catch it unawares snapping at it through the glass as if he must reach it, but all to no purpose. He would sit and look at it for hours at a time, as if he were trying to think of some way to reach it, and at such times his face would express the greatest sadness, as if there was no use trying to be happy as long as that lump of sugar couldn't be had. Sometimes he would tilt the bottle up to drink out the sugar, and then make a quick spring to catch it as it fell back to the bottom. But he couldn't get it till one day a jar of bananas that stood on the table was knocked over and broken, the fruit rolling in all directions. This seemed to be a sufficient hint, for almost at once he seized the teasing bottle lifted it high, and threw it to the floor with great force. Of course it broke, and of course the monkey seized the lump and munched it with great satisfaction.—Exchange.

Logic.

An Irish magistrate, censuring some boys for loitering in the streets, argued, "If everybody were to stand in the street, how could anybody get by?"

CHRISTMAS MAGAZINES.

LIPPINCOTT'S.

The complete novel in the December issue of Lippincott's is by Annie Eliza Brand, and has its action mainly in London. "Mrs Russell's Sister" is a young, well-to-do, and attractive widow, who takes a small house in a back street with a view to benefiting her humbler neighbors; but her philanthropic efforts are apt to require masculine assistance, and all her fortitude cannot keep her lovers at a distance. "Lincoln of Coyote," by James T McKay, is a plain Western tale of a weak and alcoholic husband, a wife whose patience is worn out, a dubious friend, and a faithful one who does what he can to mitigate the tragedy and acts as a sort of presiding genius. "Nobody's Fool," as described by L S Bernard, was an unpretentious person who knew how to turn the tables on a worthless wife. Charlotte Adams, in "Six Weeks on the Stage," gives an account of a brief and unprofitable theatrical experience. Kate Mason Rowland sketches "Philadelphia a Century Ago," chiefly through letters of Mrs Stoddard, wife of our first Secretary of the Navy, when the city of Penn was the national capital. "Babylon the Great," is reconstructed from its ruins by Austin Bierbower, who makes that mighty city of the remote past live again before us. Some account of "Verona" is by the late Bishop William Stevens Peary of Iowa. "Rudolf's Decision," in Anthony Hope's last romance, is discussed by Frederic M. Bird, who aims to show that the case was clear, not open, as some have supposed. Alfred Balch takes ground for "Signature in Newspapers,"—i.e., that printers and others should bear the responsibility and get the credit for what they write. The poetry of this number is by Mary E Stickney, Carrie Blake Morgan, Grace F Pennypacker, and Francis Sterne Palmer altogether Lippincott's maintain its promise of a magazine of its class.

Women are not the only ones who are sensitive about their ages. A man doesn't like to be told that he is getting old. Health keeps a man young. It doesn't make any difference if he has lived eighty years. If they have been healthy years, he will be hale and hearty and won't look thin twenty years as old as he is. Good digestion and rich, red blood make people look youthful. Dr Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes rich, red blood. It makes health in the right way. It works according to the right theory—is absolutely correct. It begins at the beginning—begins by putting the stomach, liver and bowels into perfect order, but it begins its good work on the blood before it finishes with the digestive system. It searches out disease germs wherever they may be, and forces them out of the body. All druggists keep the "Discovery."
