old man on Thursday night. On Friday morning one of the Woodruffs was walking down on the river bank...

Through many a night of want and we,
His remnant spirit wandered wild—
Till kind disaster laid him low.

Through many a year his fame has grown,
Like midnight fire, like starlight white,
Till now his genius fills a throne.

One deed of justice, long delayed,
One crowning grace his virtues gave—
Ah, love, thou great and injured slave,

God's mercy guard, in peaceful sleep,
The sacred dust that slumbers here,
And while around that tomb we meet,

Her young man went West some months ago, and is diligently engaged in growing up with the country.
