MR. AND MRS. JOHN W. HEFFEL

Potted Easter lillies made a gracious setting for the pretty wedding at Kensington United Church of Marilyn Joan, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Bryanton, to John William, only son of Mr. and Mrs. William Heffel, all of Kensington.

The solemn nuptial vows were spoken before the Rev. L. M. Murray on Saturday, April 28, at two o'clock in the afternoon.

The youthful bride, given in marriage by her father, was gowned in nylon net and lace over taffeta in traditional white, fashioned with a fitted bodice of lace with high neckline edged with pearls, and fitted sleeves of lace tapering to lily points over the hands. The flowing full length skirt of nylon net was enhanced with lace in a draped panel effect. Her shoulder length veil misted from a headdress of simulated pearls, and she carried a cascade bouquet of red sweetheart roses.

Her only attendant was Miss Joyce Harrington, becomingly dressed in coral silk organza over taffeta designed with fitted bodice, sweetheart neckline and full skirt. Accessories in white including a floral headdress, three quarter length gloves and a nosegay of carnations.

The best man was Franklin Bowness, friend of the groom.

Billy Bryanton, brother of the bride, and Stirling Bowness ushered the guests to the pews marked with lily-of-the-valley tied with bows of white ribbon.

A reception for sixty - five guests was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the bride's table featured a three tier wedding cake wreathed with lily-of-the-valley, and tall lighted tapers.

ELLEN'S DIARY

"Curiosity Cat" Is Friend, Playmate To Lad Past One

At what tender age can a lad first gather for himself the clinging scraps of sweet left in a cook's mixing-bowl? That mixture of sugar and shortening and eggs and spices which are deemed in the raw "not too good for them" but which, even to those well on into the teens, holds a decided charm. Quite young in years, as we found out this morning, when the Peterchap, youngest son of the house across the lane, was our guest.

He is a knowing fellow, one year in November past, and is quick and most likeable. We talked as we visited and worked together, and it interested me the conversation one may carry on with this child, whose vocabulary is, as yet, limited to words of one syllable, but who nevertheless can make his wants known. We talked of the cats on the verandah, and followed in the golden "curiosity cat" to be his company. We spoke of the lambs in the front meadow, of the piglets and fowls, and the cows, and of like subjects he knows.

Due to the insistance of the kitchen - decorating of late, the cookie tins had gaped emptily, when James and Alex went in search of food to lunch on last night. It had kept us more or less absorbed, as we sought to have it done, and all left tidy as soon as possible in respect to James' wishes, who finds it trying to have the indoors upset, when the pace of the farming quickens outdoors.

So we continue to hang paper on the kitchen walls. . . "Wall-paper!" the saleslady had echoed, when we stopped for it the other afternoon, mentioning the number of rolls we required. She stopped a moment and eyed us.

"What kind of a kitchen have you?" she inquired curiously.

"Just an old-fashioned one, with a pantry adjoining it," we said.

"An old-fashioned one!" she smiled wistfully. "Does it have room for a rocking chair? And a couch?"

"It does-and an old armchair, an old clock on a shelf, and a wood-stove," we chuckled.

"Oh lovely. . .lovely!" she beamed.

" 'Now who, said the little red hen' will lick this bowl?" we queried of Peter this morning, after we dropped the last cookie to the bake-pan.

"Me!" he smiled, lending off from the pantry to the kitchen where he seated himself expectantly between two pools of sunlight on the floor.

We set down the bowl and a quaint silver spoon of the house, one of the number of unfailing interest to Alex, in that they are decorated with etched likenesses of a pair of warriors of the Boer-war years. . .Not too many remain now to remember the veneration accorded the two then, we suspect. Students, doubtless pass the names over lightly, as they learn history. But to the children of those bygone days, the names of Earls Robert and Kitchner, the gallant British Field Marshal and General, remain warmly in mind. For these, then, were household words, their faces as familiar to us, as that of the reigning Queen Victoria whose picture was a pride of Island homes.

"Now which would you rather have at your plate - a Kitchener spoon or a Roberts?" Alex will stop to ask. But. . .

"Bed, Ellen!" James says just like that, in this the now's parting day.

Until tomorrow — — Diary-Good-night. . . .

NEW DEMOCRATS SPEAK

Arnold Wood
Prince

The Saskatchewan Story:

The value of construction in Saskatchewan has increased by more than 2000 per cent in the past 16 years, from 12 million in 1944 to 382 million in 1961.

Because Saskatchewan's largest economic activity is agriculture, she employs less people in industry than Manitoba or Alberta. However, Saskatchewan's industrial employment has grown faster than industrial employment in Canada as a whole. This proves that with some assistance and help from Government even on a provincial scale Industry can be developed in the non-industrial areas of Canada.

SOUTH SASKATCHEWAN RIVER PROJECT

One of the most outstanding development projects undertaken by the Douglas government was the South Saskatchewan River Project.

For years Saskatchewan residents have dreamed of a huge dam across the valley of the South Saskatchewan, a dam which would back up the swift flowing river and provide water and power resources for the continued economic development of the province. The dream is now becoming a reality.

This project will change the face of Saskatchewan. The dam will bring irrigation to 500,000 acres of land which is now unusable or not fully productive. Agricultural production per acre is expected to double and may even triple.

The South Saskatchewan River Project also offers great potential for power development. About 475 million kwh of power can be generated annually at the site. In addition, the control of the river flow provided by the dam will double the value of downstream power sites east of Prince Albert. Cheap and abundant power will attract new industry and stimulate industrial growth.

The total cost of the project — including construction of two dams, reservoir, irrigation works and power installation — is an estimated $192 million. The Saskatchewan government will pay 62 per cent and the federal government 38 per cent of the cost. The Liberal party, both Provincially and Federally, ignored the potential and refused to promote the project.
