Scraps of percale, mounted in a patchwork pattern on your linen closet walls, will add a decorator touch of professional caliber.

Much Is Expected From A Branksome Graduate

Miss Jennie E. MacNeill, principal of Branksome Hall school, writes the following message in the Branksome Slogan for the year 1959:
Charles Kingsley once said, "Thank God every morning that you have something to do today, whether you like it or not. Being forced to work, and forced to do your best, will breed in you temperance and self-control, diligence and strength of will, cheerfulness and contentment, and a hundred other virtues that the idle never know." During this year you have had few idle moments between studies and school activities. Some of the virtues enumerated by Kingsley are undoubtedly yours, but we expect more from our Branksome graduates than mental, moral, and social attributes, important as these are. Since the founding of the school in 1903 both Miss Scott and Miss Read have placed the Bible in the centre of our teaching. The lessons learned from it should remain with you always. You will, I know, remember the four cornerstones: truth, honesty, justice and purity, and you will not forget to "Keep Well the Road."
As you look forward to the future remember what another writer, not so well known as Kingsley, has said. After reminding us that we have not been promised "Sixes always blue," she says:
But God hath promised strength for the day, Rest for the labourer, Light on the way; Grace for the trial, Help from above, Unfailing sympathy, Undying love. May courage and strength be yours!

Have A Drink In Brook It's An Elixir To Life

In an outing which proved to be most enjoyable, we came with Granddaughter and Mack in the little truck after supper to more or less visit with James at "the other farm" and the sewing. Our object was actually threefold. We would be of some assistance in reaching the grain and grass seeds for the sower, and so speed the sowing upon which in roundabout ways our livelihood as a farm-family rests. We would again enjoy the loveliness of the old orchard there now in pink and white blossom, and so spend an evening in that reach of the valley which looks out over a wide vista of countryside.
The June fields stretched tidy rows and greens away to the colorful woodlands; herds and flocks pastured along the farms; farm-animals all about were at the cropping; from the farm-houses spiraled up content evening-smokes. And at the end of the road, there was the village, where above the homes a white spire was outlined against the sunny blue.
Soon the sun lowered so smartly time spends itself in the open! — and we were into the dew-fall.
"Tata." Granddaughter proposed to Mack run down to the brook in that pasture for a drink and then well go down the road to visit with Gage.
Ferreche stop an anchor-post not far from us in the field being seeded a robin sang. Out of a grateful heart, it seemed, the theme? There were many. Of love, yes, for that is the integral of living that holds nests, homes, communities, countries, — a whole world together. Love, es-
