

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

FEBRUARY 22, 1889.

Notes and Clippings.

Sir Richard was greatly annoyed because his resolution about commercial treaties was summarily disposed of.

The London Post, commenting upon the "European war cloud," and the visit of the Duke of Cambridge to Spain, dwells upon the necessity of keeping Gibraltar and Malta impregnable, and hints at the sending of heavier and better guns to those strong-holds.

John Bright: "If children at school can be made to understand how it is just and noble to be humane even to what we term inferior animals, it will do much to give them a higher character and tone through life."

Referring to the enormous expenses of the Conference of Premiers held at Quebec, the Montreal Gazette says that "if the visiting premiers and their friends had known how the after effects of the big inter-provincial blowout would annoy their then presumed host, they might have been a little easier on the champagne."

Mr. Herbert Gladstone's defence of his father in the matter of the eviction of his tenants might be sufficient in a court of law; but it will hardly satisfy the public that the "Grand Old Man's" practice is up to the standard of his preaching.

Montreal Gazette: M. Meline has given up the attempt to form a ministry out of the dissolved Republican groups, and the possibility of Boulanger opening the Centennial Exhibition of 1889, as his friends predicted, takes more palpable shape.

Mr. L. H. Davies is still screaming "blue ruin." In the course of his unfortunate speech on Sir Richard's resolution, Mr. Davies is reported to have said: "His hon. friend's motion had been dictated by the serious facts as they existed to-day. Hundreds who had voted in favor of the Conservative party before would vote against them the next time, because they believed in closer trade relations with the United States."

Sir Charles Tupper, in the course of a recent speech in London, defended Canada and the other colonies from the charge of extravagance because of their large public debts. He said the debts were incurred for the arts of peace, not the arts of war, and added to build up the wealth of the colonies; hence Canadian and colonial securities occupied the highest place on the London Stock Exchange.

The following quotation from J. Hober Haslam's lecture on "Success, has the right ring about it:— "There are those who profess to believe that there is no other destiny for us Canadians than to cast in our lot with our American cousins and become part and parcel of a great North American Republic. I would ask those, have we not territory enough to make a nation? Are we lacking in natural resources? Are our fields less fertile? Are our rivers and lakes shorter and smaller, and less suitable to the needs of commerce? Are our mines and forests less productive than those of the great nation to the south of us? No! Most emphatically no. In every natural resource we are splendidly gifted. Then what is the matter? What conditions necessary to the growth of a great nation are not here? If the people themselves, who have been made heirs of this magnificent heritage, are made of the right material, then undoubtedly we have all the essentials of a great future; and let us see to it that we prize our privileges, that even the people of the United States, with all their push and pluck and pride in their matchless progress, and faith in their future, shall not eclipse us. They have got a long start; but by-and-by our time will come, and our prairies equally productive as theirs will be equally populous, and Winnipeg will be another Chicago and Montreal another New York, and the Maritime Provinces, with a mineral and agricultural wealth greater, shall be another New England, and Halifax and St. John will take rank with Boston; and then on the North American continent will be witnessed the grandest spectacle of the ages—the approach of full stature and the dignity of manhood of two great nations, speaking the same language, descended from the same glorious ancestry, and heirs together of the same splendid heritage of freedom, in perfect accord, one with the other, sharing each other's prosperity and supplying each other's needs; consecrated to the blessed arts of peace, peacefully working out their separate destinies. This, to my mind, would be the grandest triumph of peace, and the nearest approach to the "Universal Brotherhood of Man" possible in this wicked world, and would, to the over-burdened masses of the Old World, be such an inspiration and example as could scarce fail to have the most beneficent results on the future of human liberty and happiness."

Victoria Carnival.

The Carnival at Victoria last night was a grand success. At an early hour crowds of people could be seen wending their way towards the rink, and at 8 o'clock, as the band struck up, the large sheet of ice was covered with fancy costumes. All nations were represented. Some of the ladies' costumes were very good. Prominent among them was "Paddle Your Own Canoe," "Old Coni's," "Spanish Senorita," "Fancy Work," and the "Last Rose of Summer." The gentlemen's costumes were also good. The King of Delhi, "Macbeth," "Arab Officer," and "Ballet Dancer." The elephant "Jumbo" afforded much amusement and was well gotten up.

Worth's Band discoursed choice music during the evening, which was much enjoyed. Everybody expressed themselves as more than satisfied, and gave this carnival first place in the carnival list this season.

O. B. Wadman, Esq., provided for the inner man by furnishing a first-class saloon, where refreshments of all kinds were provided. The rink was beautifully decorated, and the managers are to be congratulated on the success. Following is a list of ladies and gentlemen in character:—
