

Camera Gives Quick Review Of Scenes As President Kennedy Assassinated

are seen smiling as the cavalcade passed along a Dallas street only moments before the fatal shot was fired. The next picture shows the building from which police believe the fatal shot was fired. The window used is marked by a box. The president was riding in an open-top car in a motorcade that was at approximately the spot marked by the cross when the shots struck him. The third picture from the left shows the as-assin's view of the scene. This picture was made from the window marked in the previous picture. The president's car was approximately at the spot designated by the arrow when the president was hit. Just beyond is a triple underpass leading to a freeway over which the president's car traveled to the hospital where he died. In picture on right an unidentified plain-clothes officer carried rifle which was used by the assassin. Officers described it as a bolt-action, 6.5 mm. weapon, apparently of Italian make, with a telescopic sight. Some reports also said it was of Japanese make. (AP Wire-photo.)

Shock, Sorrow, Sympathy Expressed By Officials

Prince Edward Island citizens are joining with people the world over in mourning for John Fitzgerald Kennedy, 35th president of the United States, slain Friday as he rode in a motorcade in Dallas, Tex.

Lieutenant-Governor W. J. Macdonald last night stated that like everyone else throughout the world, he was profoundly shocked to hear of the death of President Kennedy, but that he prevented him from making a formal statement at this time.

President Kennedy had reached "a pinnacle in world affairs," HON. HENRY WEDGE said. Hon. Henry Wedge said "I feel this is the most shocking thing that ever struck the United States in speaking of President Kennedy he said "he certainly strived for peace and did a lot to straighten out matters in his own country."

In regards to the effect it is would have, Mr. Wedge said "nothing on religion to be the time what after-effects there will be."

MAYOR MORRISON Mayor Morrison also expressed a feeling of shock and said it was "a terrible tragedy—I think was one of the best presidents the U.S. ever had and I feel a bit both the U.S. and Canada will feel the loss of the assassination." He said the town had formulated no definite plans as yet in regards to a memorial service.

Clergymen contacted said that no definite plans had been formulated in regards to memorial services.

MAYOR LEARD ALBERTON—Mayor R. O. Leard of Alberton said, "I consider the death of President Kennedy to be one of the greatest losses to the free world in recent years." He said no plans had been formulated for the town for any special mourning, but flags would doubtless be flown at half-mast.

Special Mass, Prayers Are Scheduled Sunday

A Solemn High Mass of Requiem in memory of the late President John F. Kennedy will be celebrated at St. Dunstan's Basilica Sunday afternoon at 5 p.m.

The mass will be open to a number of civic and provincial government officials.

The vicar-general of the diocese of Charlottetown, Rt. Rev. J. G. Echers, will attend, representing the bishop of Charlottetown, Most Rev. Malcolm A. MacEwen, at present in Rome.

Rev. William Simpson, pastor of St. Dunstan's Parish, will celebrate the mass.

It is expected Lieutenant-Governor W. J. Macdonald, representative of Premier Walter R. Shaw and the Mayor and members of the City Council of Charlottetown will attend, as well as representatives of the various arm and navy.

Hospital attendants were aiding Connolly and Mrs. Connolly.

For an instant it stopped and started in the street. The face down, stretched out at full length lay the president, motionless.

His natty business suit seemed hardly rumpled. But there was blood on the floor. "Is he dead?" I asked a Secret Service man. "I don't know," he said, "but I don't think so."

I ran for a telephone.

A few minutes later I was back for more information.

The president and Connolly had been moved into an emergency operating room. Vice-President Lyndon B. Johnson, Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Kennedy had been escorted into the hospital.

The shiny White House automobile, a manufacturer's stock car.

On the front seat lay the president, face down, stretched out at full length. Beside it in mute comradeship was the side-by-side light-colored Texas-style hat that Connolly wore.

In the wide area between the seats, now cleared of its luggage, three twisted and torn bodies lay in a pool of blood on the floor. Beside them was a littered mess of asters.

It all seemed so unreal.

Instantly, if the thought of the Kennedy in Texas had not been so warm, precautions might have been taken to raise the car's shatter-proof side glasses even though the top of the convertible was down. Such protection might have saved the president.

But Dallas, where the president's policies had raised a storm of conservative protest, had been warm in its welcome to the handsome, bronzed president and his first wife.

The presidential party appeared to be chattering gaily

PEARSON'S LUNCHEON INTERRUPTED BY NEWS

By JAMES NELSON OTTAWA (CP) — Two hours after his well-timed luncheon was interrupted Friday by an urgent telephone call, Prime Minister Pearson paid official condolences to a sorrowing United States ambassador.

Mr. Pearson was lunching with Mrs. Pearson at the prime minister's state residence, 34 Sussex Street, when his executive assistant called from Parliament Hill with news that President Kennedy had been shot.

There, reporters and photographers already were clustered around his door while secretaries frantically tried to piece together the fragments of a message later.

In his office, he met and conferred with Mr. Picherickill and other cabinet members at a routine cabinet meeting scheduled for Friday afternoon was called off.

When the House suspended its sitting a few minutes later, the prime minister's desk. Then he walked out of the chamber with State Secretary Picherickill. He told reporters he would record a message later.

Mr. Pearson's face set a pattern of deep puzzlement, arrived 20 minutes later. He told reporters he would make a statement until the Commons met at 2:30 p.m. EST. At that time it wasn't known definitely whether the president was alive or dead.

The prime minister received definite word of Mr. Kennedy's death while he was in his hotel in the Commons speaking of the assassination attempt. Word came in minutes that a press agency flash handed him by a Liberal backbencher and in a note from the external affairs department.

NEWSMAN

(Continued from page 1) Four men, including the president's limousine, a man in the front seat, for a moment, he turned to a telephone in his hand. He waved to a police cruiser ahead as he stepped out of the car, he leaped ahead and those following it attained breakthrough speed on the overpass and on to a broad freeway, police sirens blaring shrilly. These sirens had been sensed by presidential order throughout the Texas trip.

On the highway we thundered, racing around a turn into the Parkhill Hospital and emergency entrance.

As we piled out of our car, I saw Mrs. Kennedy, weeping, trying to hold up her handkerchief. Mrs. Johnson Connolly was helping hold up the governor.

SPLATTERED WITH BLOOD Connolly's suit front was splattered with blood, his head pitched backward.

By the time I reached the presidential car, I saw Mrs. Kennedy's eyes were wide open.
