The Floods in the Middle States.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.

The floods in the Middle States are falling. The damage to property in and about Cleveland, Ohio, is estimated at $2,000,000.

(From Exchanges.)

AKRON, Ohio, Feb. 4.

It has rained steadily here since Friday night and this entire region is flooded. Little Cayahoga River rose three feet in a short time, in the sixth ward, Middlebury, making five times the usual volume. Almost all the factories in that section are submerged.

A railway bridge was carried away while a freight train was crossing. Further disasters are reported at several other Ohio points.

The damage by the flood in this city aggregates $50 000, of this the Ohio Canal Co., loses $20,000.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 4.

The great flood reached its height this noon and is now receding. Lumber yards, elevators, iron works, machine shops, flour mills, packing houses, factories of various sorts, and railway freight houses are more or less submerged by the great flood here. Twenty-three million feet of lumber, and from ten to fifteen million of shingles have been washed away. The Valley Railway is under water for miles, and its bridges swept away.

Two freight trains went through a bridge near Mansfield.

At Delaware, Ohio, the freshet is the worst ever known. The suspension bridge has been swept away and two other bridges are expected to go. Families living near the river have been rescued in boats. Acres of meadow land are inundated and houses and thousands of trees are afloat.

BRADFORD, Pa., Feb. 4.

This place was visited on Saturday night by a disastrous flood, which inundated several streets. The lower part of the city was submerged in some places to the depth of ten feet. The flood was caused by the rains of Friday and Saturday, and the melting of snow in the mountains. Five bridges were swept away and several houses along the banks of the creek were badly damaged or totally destroyed. Eighty-five families on flats between here and Parpot, living in one-story houses, had to flee for their lives, when the ice gorge broke, leaving all their effects, and many of the houses were swept away. The waters are now subsiding and all fears of further damage are over.

PITTSBURG, Pa. Feb. 4.

The Allegheny River and its tributaries have overflowed their banks, washing away bridges, houses and barns, and doing damage to property between Pittsburg and Oil City to the extent of several hundred thousand dollars. People living along the river barely escaped with their lives.

Great damage has also been done in Pennsylvania. The business portion of the city of Corry is flooded.

At Franklin, the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio Railway is ten feet under water. Five families were driven from their homes. The water is two feet higher at Meadville than during the big flood of 1875. One-third of the city is submerged. Over three hundred families were rescued in boats. The gas works are under water and the city is in darkness. No railway trains can enter or leave.

The lower portions of Allegheny City and the south side are threatened with inundation. At points above, the damage is estimated at $250,000.

At Parkers', Pa, the river has risen 29 feet and is still rising.

The Queen still declines to open Parliament in person.

The Sun's London cable letter says:—There seems no doubt that the Orleans family will retire to England.

The Prince of Wales' visit to Cannes has occasioned much speculation. His friends say he had no object beyond relaxation.

The prospects of the session are rendered more uncertain by reports regarding Sir Stafford Northcote's health, which is represented as permanently impaired. Lord Churchill possibly will be unable to take an active part in the proceedings.

The Tribune's London cable letter says:—The assertions of London newspapers, that Mr. Gladstone will return before Parliament opens, are premature. Gladstone believes that his health is perfectly restored, but his family hope to delay his departure a week or two.

The alarming reports in regard to the condition of Westminster Abbey are well founded. Large portions of facing stone have been destroyed by the action of the weather. It is stated that the Dean of Westminster contemplates making an appeal to the public for funds to enable him to effect extensive restorations, including numerous architectural changes.

Southport Ferry.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—In looking over the report of the Pownal meeting, I must say that I was disappointed; for in such a large and intelligent meeting I expected to see a thorough discussion of the subject of improved accommodation on the Hillsborough Ferry; and I do not think that either the speeches or the resolutions will convey to the Government the idea of just what we want. Mr. Smith's resolution, which read as follows,—

Therefore Resolved,—That the Wharf on the Southport side should be extended to the Channel, which, in the opinion of this meeting, would enable a proper outfit of boats to maintain a regular ferry till the ice will carry in the fall,—

Is reported as having passed unanimously; but by the speeches made on this resolution, one would be led to suppose that there are just as good reason for not extending the wharf as there is for extending it. Mr. Beer gives us some, but not all, of the difficulties we will have to contend with if the wharf is built out to the channel, and Mr. Duffy tells us that little or nothing, will be gained by extending the wharf, that it will not make much difference in the day's work of the ferry boat; and I notice that the advocates of extension do not tell us that it will make any difference at all in the time of crossing. Now, sir, the very thing we want is to shorten, or do away altogether with the delay in crossing; and how are we to have this accomplished. If the wharf is put out to the channel there will be the same farces and the same difficulties to contend with that there is now. The ice will make in and fill up the docks so that the steamer cannot get to the wharf, which will place us under the necessity of walking out on the ice to meet the steamer; but some will say we have to do that now, well so we have but with this difference, we have not half so far to go, and we have good solid ice under our feet, which is quite different from risking our lives on the thin ice in the channel to meet the boat. Taking all things into consideration, would it not be best to leave the wharf where it is and put on two good and efficient boats, one of them at least built stong enough to break through the ice till it would carrry foot passengers, having them to run market days and every day, which would give us the required accommodation we so much need.

Yours very truly,

Fort Augustus Starch Factory.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—An important meeting of the farmers of Glenfinnan and vicinity was held in Glenfinnan Schoolroom, on Thursday evening the 1st inst. Mr. John Stewart presided and briefly explained the purport of the meeting, the desirability of having a Starch Factory in the neighborhood, and his hearty approval of the undertaking.

Mr. Justin McCarthy, Donagh, was also in full accord with the enterprise, and as he never does things by halves, he had a list of fifty-one acres of potatoes to show he meant what he said.

Mr. James A. McDonald, Johnston's River Point, another thrifty and successful farmer, was in earnest sympathy with the project, and had quite a respectable list to add.

Mr. Philip S. Lane, Glenfinnan, an active and intelligent farmer, handed in a very satisfactory list from his section.

Mr. James E Laverty, of Pond Settlement, showed his usual activity and earnestness, and supplied a very fair list.

No Section made a more ernnest and ready response than Monaghan Road. This action proved the leaders were energetic and all were interested. The number of acres they subscribed was seventy-two. Fort Augustus proper led the van in acres, with a total of one hundred. It has an excellent and progressive Pastor, and a number of good practical, enterprising farmers; all fully alive to the utility and importance of a Starch Factory, on the old Dixon Mill site, at Duffy's Creek, Lot 36.

When all Sections were heard from, an acreage of three hundred was declared.

As the farmers of this locality are ready and willing to act their part in promoting this industry, those who have any idea of investing in such an enterprise could not, I think, do better than confer with Mr. Philip McNally, Fort Augustus; Mr. James Trainor, Monaghan Road, or Mr. Philip S. Lane, Glenfinnan, who were appointed at the several meetings held throughout the district to receive offers from capitalists.

The next general meeting for final arrangements will be held at Fort Augustus schoolhouse on Saturday, the 17th inst., at 4 p. m. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for past favors, and wishing you and THE EXAMINER much success,

I remain,
