MARY HAWORTH

Man Says It Is Impossible To Fall Out Of Real Love

Dear Mary Haworth: Take it from a man who knows, it is impossible to "fall out of love." Who thinks he does never was in love in the first place.

Your correspondent of December 16, who finds she cannot forgive her husband his outrageous affair, is thinking only of herself and her hurt. She says there's no physical attraction left. Indeed, why not?

A human being is not like a prize piece of pottery that can't be made new, once broken. Persons grow by making mistakes and become more precious due to them. And our mistakes can punish us, without another's help.

Each of us was put on earth with a set of problems to solve. These problems are perfectly suited to our soul's needs, so that in victory over them we become better candidates for a higher existence.

BREAKS WITH GOD

None of us has the right to take punishment into our own hands. Our biggest handicap is the inability to sympathize with the other person facing his problems.

Every man who steps out on his wife is facing a problem related to himself, nobody else. He is afraid of something. And fear is a very painful thing. Why are we so ready to sneer at it?

If a man breaks his arm, his wife is so ready to comfort and care for him. Then why such a different attitude, when he breaks the silver cord between himself and God—when after all is what really happened, when he cheated on his wife.

INSIDE VIEW

I would like to write to my former wife: "Darling, nothing can replace you, or the laughs we had together, or the tears we shared. I put many of the lines in your face; they are part of me, and I would give anything to erase them. Time hasn't waited for either of us, and every day of the 10 years we have been apart are lost forever.

"The mistakes I made when we were together are still being made, because I try to recapture what we had together. You could have helped me with those mistakes if you had tried just a little longer—if you could have seen that I was afraid, not hateful; lost, not mean; and hurt more than hurting. I tried to escape from myself, not you." To the wife who thinks she has fallen out of love—it is my experience that two marriages since my first have solved nothing. The philanderer may cheapen himself; but love is just as costly as ever, and worth every penny of it. E. W. SELF-PTY HANDICAP

Dear E. W.: Thanks for your message, which may give pause to married folks trembling on the verge of a break, due to faults and failings and hurt feelings. And now, a few words for you—Present suffering and dear-bought hindsight are implicit in your commentary. But there is little indication that you are rising towards a higher life, or more mature responsiveness.

Not only do you admit being a repeater in the field of error; but also your attitude is tinged with bathos, or self-pity—a neurotic sentiment that seems to be your special handicap. Very likely it was this unrighteous bias towards "bleeding heart" self-justification that was the last straw, exhausting your wife's patience with your problem temperament and symptomatic philandering.

LOOK FOR MOM-LOVE

After some punishment from life, in the trial-and-error school of learning, a man ought to turn a corner, in his experience, away from infantism, and definitely towards the helpee class, in the world of human relations. As of now, you are still looking for mama, or a wet nurse, and crying that your first wife let you down, in not sticking a little longer to the "great mother" role you required her to fill, in relation to you.

People may not "fall out of love," if they've truly loved. But they can outgrow the plane on which that earlier love developed, so that it no longer has the same value to them. It remains in the fabric of feeling, in terms of lasting good will; but other stars are now ascendant in the growing soul's firmament.

At your age, with your history of confusion and helplessness, you need, primarily, the sustenance of religion to build strength and sureness into you. M. H. Mary Haworth columns sent through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of this newspaper.

SPRING HEADLINERS

BY ALICE ALDEN

BLITHE bonnets that just seem to come of spring provide the antidote to late winter blues and arduous weariness. Beguiling and bonnie is this flirtatious profile hat of gold-colored antique Milan straw. Hattie Carnegie decks out the stepped-up crown with an orange poppy and a black velvet band. Shown with a golden wool suit, it would also do right by one in black.

Short Jackets Are Stylish

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP)—The chairman of London's fashion designers opened this capital's spring collection Tuesday with emphasis on the bosom.

"I have trained my floodlight," said Victor Stiebel, "on geographically the front top half of the body—in other words, the bust." As hundreds of women and not a few men looked on, he exclaimed: "Busts—not with great enthusiasm during the daytime, but with fireworks display after dark."

Ronald Patterson introduced what he described as "The rug"—a casual, easy fit.

NEES HIDDEN

He said the right knee length or spring and summer is one that does not show the knee when lady is walking.

Necklines in the showings were set away and sometimes collarless. In his suits, Patterson stressed the short jackets with slightly rounded fronts and gathered waists from the waist at the back. Short evening dresses belted at the back and hugged the figure in front.

There were big romantic evening dresses, some of them just shy showing the ankle.

UITS CASUAL

Sidebel's suits were still casual, at the jackets were an inch or so longer. Fronts were shaped and backs straight. In spite of Paris, the empire line still made its appearance. Sidebel's short party dresses topped a high waist.

The cold shoulder returned to a pund of applause. Most spectacular among this style was a long white chiffon evening dress, with blue embroidery and a blue zigzag around the fitted, strapless top.

Rudolf revealed some spectacular hats, mostly variations of the cloche.

KENSINGTON W.M.S.

The Kensington United Church auxiliary of the WMS held an interesting and informative study at the February meeting on the subject, "Health and Welfare." Mrs. George Brown was in charge of a panel discussion which brought out recurring emphasis on the thought that the health and welfare of a people as been and should be a concern of the Christian church.

Other members of the panel were Mrs. Lloyd Millar, Mrs. George Glover and Mrs. Russell MacKay.

The program committee for the next meeting will be Mrs. George Glover, Mrs. Ernest MacEwen and Mrs. Roscoe Walker. Mrs. Alexander MacKay led the devotional period and Bible study on the theme, "Race Prejudice Exposed," which contained a study of the Book of Ruth, assisting in the worship period were Mrs. George Brookings, Mrs. Harold Laird and Mrs. Robert Carruthers. Mrs. Waldon Davidson led in the Missionary prayer. There were 19 members present.

Mrs. Murdoch MacLeod compiled a list of C.F.C.Y.—T.V. programs of interest to women. Mrs. Ernest MacEwen was appointed to lead in the Missionary prayer at next meeting. Plans were made to provide refreshments for the Mission Band Valentine party, and for each member to bring and 18½ block of cotton for a quilt to next meeting.

Home calls, 7 hospital calls were made, 15 letters, 24 cards, 9 treats and one bouquet sent during the month.

An invitation was extended to members to attend the showing of the film, "The Long Stride."

Plans for the re-adoption of the "G.I.T" members by the WMS were left with the CGIT leaders till next meeting. The meeting closed by repeating the Mizpah benediction.
