'KEEP AWAY FROM MY YOUNGSTERS'

A sanitary Caracal mother eat zealously guards her twin youngsters, believed to be the first in the world to be born in captivity. The pair, born at the Cincinnati Zoo Oct. 16, measure about nine inches in length and, like mom, are extremely agile. Caracal cats, found in South African desert areas, have long ears which provide a form of radar, according to Zoo director William Hoff. Proud as mom is, you can tell at a glance it's too early for autographed photos. (AP Wirephoto).

Probe May Be Launched On Candidate Spending

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—The agitation in favor of a firm check on campaign spending by candidates for Parliament may flower into a full-scale inquiry early next year.

There are indications that the Commons elections committee may be asked at the next session to study the problem and recommended whether expense limits are desirable and whether the public should pay part or all of election expenses of all candidates.

For years neither the candidates nor the general public seemed to care about the sometimes - sizable sums spent on election campaigns.

But the experience of four federal elections in six years—the last two only 10 months apart — gave candidates and elected members little time to pay off election expenses which sometimes run into five figures.

Consequently a lot more is being heard here about limiting expenses—as in Britain and in Quebec provincial elections — and about payment of election expenses from the public purse as an effective check on election costs.

WANT VIEWS

The matter was touched on last week by the elections committee when by a one-vote margin the committee voted to invite Prime Minister Pearson, or someone nominated by him, to give the government's views on providing public funds for election expenses of candidates.

The opposition to this proposal wasn't based entirely on objections to the idea of the public paying part or all of the cost. Several members felt the proposal to call Mr. Pearson was premature.

They argue privately that the committee has enough to do now with the regular post-election review of the Election Act to devote enough time to the expenses question. They want to see changes in the act recommended to Parliament and passed by Commons and Senate before the end of the session, about Dec. 20.

Informal discussions have been going on among government supporters aimed at giving the elections committee the task next session of digging into the whole subject of election expenses.

Some of the preparatory material has been assembled already. Copies of the British and Quebec legislation on expense limits have been deposited with the elections committee.

The Quebec law has attracted attention of the committee since it also provides for payments from public funds for election expenses.

SET LIMIT

In Quebec general elections, political parties are limited to a maximum of 25 cents an elector in ridings where they have candidates. Candidates themselves face limits of 60 cents an elector up to 10,000, plus 50 cents for the second 10,000 plus 40 cents for all over 20,000.

Machinery is provided for the candidates' agents to recover about one-quarter of these sums from the public purse.

Present federal legislation requires candidates to report all their election expenses but some MPs say frankly it isn't always done.

Some political sources say the reason is that the teeth in the law have about as much bite as rubber dentures. There are ways to unseat an MP who has filed a false report of his expenses but, it is so easy to tie up such an attempt in the courts that the effort is hardly ever made.

Famous Veteran Bush Pilot Participates In New Rescue

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP)—A northern bush pilot who figured in the dramatic rescue of two persons missing for 49 days in the Yukon last March was participated in another rescue from the same area.

Charles Hamilton spotted an S O S stamped in the snow 90 miles southeast of Watson Lake last Thursday and flew a team to the area to rescue a pregnant woman and two children who were suffering from malnutrition. A third child died of pneumonia before the family was rescued.

Hamilton said he spotted the S O S and an arrow pointing to Porter Lake at the mouth of the Keshica and Turnitson rivers. Following the direction of the orrow, he saw two men with dog teams working their trap lines.

With the trappers — Louis Boya and Howard Gadel—was Boya's daughter Annie and her three children.

Later, police and Hamilton returned to the area and airlifted the woman and her family to hospital at Watson Lake. An autopsy revealed the four-month old baby had died of pneumonia. Hamilton was the pilot who spotted Helen Klaben of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Ralph Flores of San Bruno, Calif., in the same area in March. The two had been stranded for 49 days after their light plane crashed.
