Resume UN Meetings On Disarmament In London

By JOHN EARLE LONDON (Reuters)—The five-power United Nations sub-committee on disarmament resumed its meetings here today after consultations by heads of the American and Russian delegations with their governments. The chief American delegate, Harold Stassen, was due back at the conference table during the day after talks with President Eisenhower. His Russian counterpart, Valerian Zorin, arrived back Tuesday from Moscow. The sub-committee, which will report back to the UN by Aug. 1, is composed of representatives of the United States, Russia, Britain, France and Canada. American officials have voiced cautious optimism about the chances of the conference, which in five weeks has discussed informally four out of seven points on its agenda, including nuclear and conventional disarmament and international control and inspection systems. But British and Russian sources here are more guarded in their forecasts. SEES NO AGREEMENT A British source said no concrete agreement on any aspect of disarmament is yet on the horizon. He said the Russians are seeking out areas of disagreement in discussion, rather than trying to reach points of possible agreement. The Russians seem to be feeling out the Western position on all seven agenda points before disclosing their own detailed stand in perhaps a second "run-through" of the agenda, the British source said. The Russian source also said there has been no sign of any concrete agreement. Though the atmosphere was one of goodwill, more than goodwill alone was required to reach a settlement. This source discounted as "improbable" a British press report that the Soviet Union might unilaterally announce abandonment of nuclear tests for a limited period. STASSEN'S PROPOSALS Stassen has made a number of proposals to which, according to Western conference sources, the Russians have failed to give a detailed reply. They include: 1. Scientists from East and West should meet to study whether all nuclear tests really can or cannot be detected throughout the world. 2. Powers should make percentage reductions in their conventional armaments and military expenditure on the basis of a 25 per cent cut over two years. 3. Technicians should meet Sept. 1 to prepare the establishment of an international control system next spring. Under this control mechanism, nuclear powers could begin switching from military to non-military production. It was noted, however, that Russia still stands for a complete ban on nuclear weapons and tests, while the American proposal would allow limited tests to go on and nuclear weapon stockpiles to be retained for the time being. Stresses National (Continued from Page One) Forty years ago, the U.S.S.R. was primarily a nation of illiterates, but by 1950 expects to have completed its basic ten-year school system. Miss Robins stated, remarking that she had mentioned the figures not with the idea of emulating the Russians, but rather for the sake of comparison. "Education is our front line of defence, composed of thousands of schools across the country - it is a defence not only against military aggression but also against modern ideologies," she said. In conclusion, the National President noted that Harry Truman, ex-President of the U.S.A. had stated that the hope of the world was in education and the late Albert Einstein, when asked his opinion on a solution to the world's problems, said "produce better people to build a better world." "The people of tomorrow are in the classrooms of to-day—we have hard work to do," she said. Prior to the dinner, Grace was asked by Rev. Father Sullivan, of St. Dunstan's University, and Miss Matheson proposed a toast to the Queen. The delegates stood and sang "Happy Birthday" following the announcement that Dr. Frank MacKinnon, Principal of Prince of Wales College, was receiving congratulations on the anniversary of his birth. The meeting closed with "The Queen".

Dancing Classes (Continued from Page One) duties of Platform Secretary. Last night at the P.W.C. Auditorium, three dancing classes were adjudicated with Mrs. Leonard MacDonald as Presiding Officer, and Mrs. Reginald Kemp, Platform Secretary. In the first contest, Class 252, Scottish Reels, (9 years and under), Miss Ross' Charlottetown group was awarded first place with a mark of 72, followed by two other city groups, the Glangarry Dancers, Group F, and Glangarry Dancers, Group E, with marks of 68 and 65 respectively. This class was also adjudicated by Mrs. MacNeil, who stated that she was pleased with performances of all groups. Class 259, Solo Tap, (10, 11, and 12 years) was the second class adjudicated last evening at the College auditorium. The top rated three of the 15 boys and girls who displayed their talents in this contest were: 1. Florence MacDonald, Montague, 88; Tommy Burke, Charlottetown, 85; and Linda Walsh, Charlottetown, 85. In her remarks on Class 250, the adjudicator, Mrs. MacNeil, stressed the difference between the tap dance and the Highland dance; the former allowing the performer a greater freedom to express themselves than the latter which is standard. The adjudicator warned the contestants that they should not stop their dance before the music was completed. The final class which performed at last night's session was Class 238 (B), Solo National Dance, (13 to 16 years), "Owa Selection". In this class there were eight contestants, and the winners placed as follows: 1. Dorothy Sherris and Judy Dewar, Charlottetown, (tie) 76; Sheila Johnston, Central Royalty, 75; and Andrea Duvar, Charlottetown, 74. Mrs. Buchta, who adjudicated this class, told the performers that, to dance well, they must dance "with feeling". "Forget the audience" she said, "Just listen to the music and do their best in the rest". A special treat for last night's audience was an exhibition of ballroom dancing by Ivan Beirigan and his Community Center group who were seen in the Capistrano Waltz, and the Irish Waltz. These numbers were an added feature of the program and were not adjudicated. Assisting with the afternoon and evening performances were pipers Bruce MacLaren, Wilfred Burke, and Harold Sutherland, and pianist A. MacLennan.

St. Paul's Junior Auxiliary Meets The closing meeting of the Junior Auxiliary of St. Paul's Anglican Church was held on April 17. Special guests were the Rector, Canon J.T. Ibbott, Mrs. Ibbott, Mrs. W.E. Champion, Diocesan President of the Woman's Auxiliary, Mrs. F.W. Jelks, Diocesan Secretary-Treasurer and the mothers of the members. The President, Pamela Aitken, conducted the J.A. Worship Service and welcomed the guests. The scripture lesson was read by Jean MacInnis with special prayers by Bernice Doiron, Carol MacMillan and Diane Newell. The Banner Bearer was Jane Johnston. Following the reading of the minutes by the secretary, Katherine Kemp, the story of the Woman's Auxiliary was read by Marilyn Roper. Canon Ibbott gave a pleasing and instructive talk on Junior Auxiliary using as an illustration the letters "J.A." as meaning "Jesus' Assistants". Membership cards were presented by the secretary, Katherine Kemp, to new members, Lona Dykens and Ruth Pollard. Canon Ibbott presented the J.A. ties and gold stripes to the girls completing the requirements in their particular class. Missionary Badges were received by Pamela Aitken and Jean MacInnis and J.A. pins were presented by the leader, Mrs. J. E. Shephard, to Bernice Doiron, Diane Newell, Joan Lord and Jean MacInnis. Special awards for activity books and general interest went to Lois Carr, Katherine Kemp and Pamela Aitken. Handwork done by the branch during the year was on display as well as gifts to be sent to the Anglican Mission Schools in Canada. Mrs. Jelks announced that the Junior Auxiliary Camp and Festival was planned for July at Camp Kingston. The meeting closed with the Friendship Circle and closing song and the benediction by Canon Ibbott.

New Constitution, Name, For Catholic Social Welfare B.

Fred L. MacMillan was elected President of the Catholic Social Welfare Bureau at the annual meeting of the Bureau last night in the Community Centre. He succeeds the retiring President, Robert MacDonald. Other officers elected were Dr. A. MacIsaac, Vice President, Desmond Burge, secretary and D. J. McCormack, treasurer. A dramatic increase in the percentage of the money spent in food, fuel and clothing was noted by the treasurer, D. McCormack. He showed that during the past year over 50 percent of the total amount of money used by the Bureau was spent for food, fuel and clothing in comparison to only 20 percent in 1953. The financial report presented by Mr. McCormack showed that the 15 month period from January 1, 1956 to March 31, 1957 each amounted to $28,783.80. The main expenditures were $10,623.72 for child maintenance; $5,397.63 for food; $2,864.46 for fuel; and $2,032.71 for clothing. Unpaid bills amounted to $3,388.65 including $1,123.27 for food; $1,622.87 for fuel and $642.51 for clothing. Mr. McCormack also noted that the receipts from the annual drive and tag day were lower in 1957 than they were in 1955 even though the Bureau had much higher expenditures during the past year. Henceforth the Bureau will be known as the Catholic Family Centre. The new name was adopted in a new constitution prepared by Dr. Brenton O'Grady and presented to the meeting last night. The Board of Directors has been increased to 21 with seven members being added from St. Pius X Parish. The new directors were: Dr. A. L. MacIsaac, Albert Murphy, Jerome O'Brien, Peter Doyle, Reg MacCarville and Richard Brown. Right Reverend R. V. McKenzie Pastor of St. Pius X Parish is an ex officio member of the Board. Through the directors were appointed. They were: Frank Strain, Elmer Blanchard and Louis Butler. Sister Mary Henry, Executive Director, in presenting her report, asked the meeting to do everything possible to tell people about the pressing needs of the Welfare Bureau. She pointed out the many problems facing the needy in the City (high rents and poor quarters) alcoholism and child welfare. SELF HELP Sister Mary Henry noted from her files that some families had been receiving Bureau help for 25 years. "We have neither the time for the money to do welfare work for many of these people. These people need welfare assistance. They must be rehabilitated so that they can work for themselves. Some day, someone will have to work out the basic problems of rehabilitating them," she stated. In referring to the serious problem concerning jail prisoners she suggested that productive confinement such as operation of a farm would be a more desired method of holding prisoners. She spoke of the extensive work being done in adoption service and by unmarried mothers and concluded by thanking the many people who had assisted the Bureau staff during the year. Among those who spoke briefly were Rev. C. Moreau, C.S.S.R., Right Rev. R.V. MacKenzie, Brigadier W. Reid, Deputy Minister of Welfare and Frank O'Neill. In delivering the President's report Mr. Robert MacDonald stated "I wish it were possible to tell you about all the good work our Bureau does for the needy and unfortunate people in this area. But since that is not possible, I wish that you, the members, would visit the office more often, talk with the directors and staff more often, share in the hundreds of volunteer jobs that need to be done by the Bureau and I know that you will have the same feeling we have; that the Catholic Social Welfare Bureau is a good, and necessary, and useful institution. It is certainly an organization through which we can all discharge part of our duty to the poor in a way we know pleasing to God." The dinner discussion on "The Deserted Family" was postponed for another special meeting. Members of the panel were Dr. Brenton O'Grady, chairman and Mr. Walter Baker, M.A. Farmer, J. E. Green and Dr. John Maloney.

Institute For Nurses Continues

On Wednesday, the second day of a three-day Institute for Nurses, an interesting discussion was presented by dietitians and nurses from the Charlottetown and Prince Edward Island Hospitals. New trends in assisting diabetic patients with meal planning was a highlight of the discussion. Emphasis was also placed on the dietary needs of geriatric patients and ways and means of meeting these needs in a practical manner. The importance of proper psychological handling of these patients was stressed. "The differences in the caloric intake of a 'motor' driven, 'TV-watching' population as compared with the caloric intake of peoples who are physically more active was discussed. It was forcefully brought to the attention of all that because we use up less energy than our grandmothers did, we are becoming a generation of women who are overweight. It was a sobering fact to learn that life insurance statistics evince shorter life lines for the obese. Participating in this highly enlightening discussion were Miss Dorothy Baxter, B.Sc., Sister Joan Mary, B.Sc., Miss Edith Home, R.N., Miss Mary Maddigan, R.N. Following the presentation of "newer trends in nutrition," a most informative lecturer was given by Dr. L.S. Cox on the treatment of burns. Dr. Cox illustrated his lecture with colored slides on "burns treatment." He outlined steps in the nursing care of these patients, pointing out the initial importance of accurate recording of fluid intake and output. He stressed the absolute necessity for early treatment of burn patients to prevent severe shock and infection. Dr. Cox said, "I cannot stress too much that the best first aid for these patients is to bring them to hospital as quickly as possible. Do not put any medication on the wound at home, valuable time will be wasted at the hospital removing pastes and ointments before proper dressings can be applied." The patient should be kept warm en route to hospital to prevent further shock. A good portion of the lecture was concerned with discussion of the relatively new feature of careful and accurate measurement of intake and electrolyte balance which has been a life-saving measure in cases of severe burns. At the morning session Miss Frances MacMillan, R.N., instructor at the Prince Edward Island Hospital, acted as chairman and at the evening session Miss Genevieve MacDonald, R.N., supervisor at the Charlottetown Hospital, chaired the meeting.
