Action of Circus Animals Is Dictated By the Kids

By PRESTON GROVER
MOSCOW (AP) - There is an animal circus in this town and the kids run the show.

It is the Durvich circus which has been operating across the years and is still managed by a grandaughter of the founder.

Viadimir Durvich was born in 1853. The kids in the audience left the animals what to do and they do it. It sets the youngsters wild.

"Reach while entertaining," is the motto of the circus, which is housed in a square block of buildings in the centre of town.

The circus includes the usual animals, elephants, seals, horses, bears and dogs, but then goes way beyond to offer trained pigs, raccoons, donkeys and even a badger.

At a tiny theatre seats about 120 children who are kept completely apart from their parents. The tiniest tots are right down in front, almost against the side of the stage.

"When he has turned enough, just about enough," Miss Rosa said. "The kids shouted 'enough' and the animal stopped. Then the animal hung out the laundry to dry.

"You men take dogs hunting?" "Do you think the kids?" "Who helps our border?"

Sheep and lambs 37: Good lambs 27-29 per hundredweight; common and medium 24-25; sheep 4-12.

NUCLEAR FIRST
Krupps's first nuclear-powered freighter, the Otto Hahn, has been completed in West Germany after eight years' work.

At one performance a dog came out and a command picked up first a little toy dog, then an elephant, a hare and a bear.

"Applaud. The animals live and they like you to applaud." So the kids batted their hands. The dog promptly came to the front of the stage, bowed, and he is good for riding.

Now of course the show is owned by the government, but the family and trainers on it as much as it has been run before the revolution. The animals don't seem to mind.
