MR. AND MRS. CARLYLE MacEACHERN

Young Couple Pledge Vows In Ceremony At Irishtown

Poinsettas and an arch decorated in the Christmas motif set the color theme in a charming setting for the wedding on Saturday, December 30, 1961, of Beryle Joan, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold MacLeod, Irishtown, and Delmar Carlyle, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer MacEachern, Freetown.

The double ring ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. E. H. Bean, at the home of the bride's grandparents. Mr. and Mrs. Heath MacLeod, Irishtown.

The winsome bride, given in marriage by her father, was becomingly gowned in traditional white. The net bodice featured a scoop neckline and full length sleeves with lily points, and the street length skirt of chiffon was fashioned in flowing lines. A crown of sequins and pearls held her shoulder length veil in place, and she carried a lace covered Bible with a shower bouquet of red roses. Her only ornament, a single strand of pearls was a gift of the groom.

Miss Linda MacLeod attended her sister, gowned in red velvet designed with a scoop neck, three quarter length sleeves, and full skirt worn with a net and velvet headdress. She carried a nosegay of white carnations tinted to match her dress.

Mr. Alan Andrews, friend of the groom, was best man.

Miss Sally Ann Raynor played the nuptial music and accompanied the soloist, Miss Audrey MacEachern, sister of the groom as she sang "The Lord's Prayer," and "O Promise Me."

The bride's mother chose a two - piece dress in brocaded beige with black accessories and a corsage of tangerine carnations. Mrs. MacEachern, mother of the groom, was becomingly attired in a two-piece dress of royal blue wool with white accessories, and wore a corsage of white carnations.

The bride's maternal grandmother, Mrs. William Buchanan wore a dark green dress with black accessories. Her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Heath MacLeod was dressed in blue in two piece effect dress with black accessories, and the groom's paternal grandmother, Mrs. Earl MacEachern, chose navy with matching accessories. All three wore corsages of white carnations.

A reception for sixty guests was held at Svend's Inn, Kensington, where a three tier wedding cake centered the bride's table, and Mrs. Ian MacCoubrey circulated the guest book. A toast to the bride, proposed by the Rev. Mr. Bean, was responded to by the groom. Mr. Bean also proposed a toast to Mr. and Mrs. Heath MacLeod who were celebrating their forty-seventh wedding anniversary. Mr. MacLeod, responded to this toast.

For a honeymoon trip in the Maritimes, the bride donned a lime green wool dress, topped with a black norg coat, a white fur hat and pinned on a corsage of red roses.

Mr. and Mrs. MacEachern are residing in Montreal where the groom is on the staff of a branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, and the bride is on the staff of the Morison School.

Prior to her marriage the bride was tendered a shower at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. MacLeod, when she was the recipient of many lovely gifts. Assisting in presenting the gifts were Mrs. Ian MacCoubrey, Joan Simmons, Mrs. Clayton Lavoie and Sally Ann Raynor. The gifts were carried in by Wendy Campbell and Elizabeth Cousins, and arranged by Julie Campbell and Lois MacLeod. The bride-to-be was attended by Audrey MacEachern, While Mrs. Borden Campbell played the bridal chorus, and little Barbara Hill presented the guest of honor with a corsage. The room was decorated with blue and white streamers with accents of evergreen and tinsel.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Earth's Music In April Is Prelude To A Summer Aria

A new song-yes, a joyous, summery aria, April will bring to us folks of the farm. Its prelude has commenced. We hear it in notes that warm the heart. Earth's music it is. To be played and re-played through long lovely days. . .

Winter days were tuneless. Or were they? We had, we recall, the twitters of the sparrows in the bare shrubs. And the croak of the ravens, odd times above the white fields. And too, the wind's tunes. Wild, rough measures sometimes, though often gentle passing. But solemn days and sad, for the most part, it played.

April will encourage the romantic airs. You will hear these as you tidy, or maybe fulfilling a creative urge, a highly satisfying gesture, redecorated room: hanging new wallpaper, or spreading fresh paint, when, through an opened window, as you work your labor of love, comes the robin's trill from pulling branch or lawn about. You attach words to the run. His, you know, is pure blarney, for there is always sweet beguilement in a lad-of-a-robin's notes. But what charm it has! What cheer and promise! And ever, as you listen closely, you will hear a question. His song falls in a fetching cascade, liquid and sweet in its season.

He sings. And, silly one, you listen. A bit breathlessly, for now true it is that "All the world loves a lover!" And presently you are rewarded by hearing a shy answering run.

"Bettah watch yo'se'f, little Miss Robin-bird, fo' you-all is mos' innocent an' sweet! An' dat han'some lad is after yo' hea't" you think. And smile. . . If romance could go by rote and rule, the thought comes, but you know it as a verity, there is no such orderly pattern to it. For love is an unpredictable element. Its strange ways have confounded philosophers and sages. "Past understanding," it is - the way of a twain. And the sweet notes rise and fall on the wine of the clear air of spring. His. . .hers. And you wish a happy wish for the pair.

"I'd say," Mack offered with a young grin this morning, "your summer - guests have arrived! Look!" he nodded.

And there was Papa Starling smiling down at us from the roof of the garage! And Mama was beside him, all decked in new finery. Her hat, a chic creation of iridescent feathers, was worn at a becoming angle and both appeared well and happy.

"Better not stop to talk to them." Mack chuckled. "Get your wash spread. The sun's bright now, but it may not last. Might come mist or an April shower. Just look at that freshet! I never saw such a flow, did you?" "Not for years," we said.

Though the spillways in the dam were open wide, the area where the millpond of old had been was now, in a rare sight, brimming again. In an unusual happening too, the stream up the valley had risen to flood heights and was pouring madly over the deck of the bridge in the lane. "We're marooned!" Mack said. "We're on a kind of a desert island - all to ourselves. I can't get to school unless I walk a long way round. And there's the Mail, passing! Oh well," he shrugged, "no Funnies today, at least not until the rush of water eases."

It has eased. But still the sound of its flood, gathered from a hundred spring-streamlets, comes up to us from the valley below. And the crash of its falling flow.

But the night is fair and starry, which takes us now to our rest.

Until tomoorow — — Diary Good-night

IODE Meeting Has Bring And Buy Auction Sale

The monthly meeting of the Lucy Maud Montgomery Chapter, IODE held at the home of Mrs. Daniel Tweel, featured a bring and buy sale was auctioneered by Mrs. Arthur Love. It was decided to purchase books for the P. E. I. Hospital and plans were made regarding a visit to Beechgrove on April 16th.

The Convener of Services at Home and Abroad distributed flannelette and wool among the members. She reminded the Chapter that the box for "Save the Children Fund", will be shipped in May and requested that all supplies for this box be brought to the next meeting.

Mrs. Daniel Tweel, National Standard Bearer for the IODE, reported on the arrangements being made for the entertainment of the visiting Standard Bearers who will be attending the National Convention in Charlottetown next month.

MARY HAWORTH

Bachelor Objects When Widow Dates With Others

Dear Mary Haworth: I am a bachelor in my early fifties. Six month's ago I fell genuinely in love with a neighbor, a widow in her early forties.

She began inviting me in for drinks barely two months after her husband died following a long illness. We have been seeing each other practically every spare minute in the last six months; and seemingly the love is mutual.

However, after our first argument some months ago, she decided she should go out with other men occasionally, to which I adjusted reluctantly. We had an affair for a short time, but dropped it after a scarce. . .

I have finally reached the conclusion that she shouldn't see other men, considering our close relanship. Only last night she told me she loves me; yet tomorrow night she is seeing another man. Any night I don't see her, due to an argument or other reason, she manages to have a date.

I am so much in love it is killing my feelings to have her out with other men, though I am sure they are platonic, as she says. Most are friends of her late husband, and only once or twice has she let a caller come into the house.

We have discussed money, slightly. I have none to speak of, as I told her honestly; and she has a fair amount, apparently, but is used to a rather extravagant life. Her two teen-age children have trust funds.

I think her adjustment period should be over by now and that I should give her up if she dates other men. But I find that I still want to see her after each of her other dates. I am sure I could support her, though perhaps not quite in the style she would like. What do you recommend that I do?—R.R.

Dear R.R.: In the words of Sherlock Holmes, it seems elementary, my dear Watson, as to what you should do. Namely, either propose marriage to the fascinating creature, or bow out of the picture, in self-respect and decency.

As of now you are being the expedient opportunist, more or less preying upon the widow's heart hunger, without committing yourself to permanent, reliable, whole-souled interest in her happiness and well being.

That being so, indirectly you are driving her into the arms of other men. She feels obliged to stay in circulation, socially, to maintain some measure of self-protective emotional ballast in relation to you.

As the poet said: "He either fears his fate too much, or his desserts are small, who dares not put it to the touch, to win or lose it all." Which, freely translated, also means: "Faint heart ne'er won fair lady."— M.H.

Dear Mary Haworth: Will you kindly provide the name of a book concerning the conduct expected of young couples on a first date, who haven't known each other very long— and how to ward off unwanted advances without offending the other person. Thanking you, I am yours faithfully,— C.S.

Dear C.S.: Try Evelyn Millis Duvall's book "Facts of Life and Love for Teen-agers," published in hardback cover by the Association Press (an affiliate of the YMCA). It is also distributed in paperbacks (at 35 cents) by arrangement with Popular Library Inc., 10 East 40th Street New York 16, N.Y. Your library or bookstores doubtless have copies of each in stock.— M.H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Guardian.

St. Peters Women's Auxiliary Groups Hold Final Meeting

The afternoon and evening branches of St. Peters Cathedral Woman's Auxiliary held a joint closing meeting in the Church Hall on Monday April 2 with Mrs. G. Rogers (Sr) presiding.

Canon E. M. Malone led members in opening prayers and Mrs. Rogers, president of the afternoon branch, welcomed all members especially those from St. Paul's Church including, Mrs. G. Wood, diocesan president, Mrs. F. Nash, vice president of St. Paul's WA, Mrs. Hillon, Miss Beer, and others all from W.A's. of St. Pauls.

Mrs. L. Davison supplied music for the hymn.

Canon E. M. Malone, guest speaker, spoke on the first Indian missionaries in Canada, Henry Budd was the first full blooded Indian to be ordained in 1850 and chose young Indians of promise to train for the Church. John West, a great and well known Missionary went to the Red River area in 1820 and with Henry Budd did much to further the work of the church. This was over 100 years ago, noted the Canon, and since then there have been many changes at home and abroad and the Indians are gradually being assimilated into the Canadian way of life.

Canon Malone concluded his talk by wishing the WA continued success in all its work. Mrs. Rogers thanked the Canon Malone and she commented on the lovely display of work saying that members could again take pride in the amount of work accomplished.

Mrs. Wood, spoke briefly and said that last year she had visited the Gordon School at Punichy where many of our articles are sent, and met the principal, Rev. Dr. Johnstone who was interested in maintaining the traditions of the Indians attending the school. She also noted that an electric organ was in use that had been presented by Women's Auxiliary. Mrs. Wood in closing said that the work and needs of the W.A. is obviously changing and that we must be prepared to change with it.

Mrs. E. Callaghan, president of the evening branch thanked the afternoon branch for their help during the year and said how nice it was to see so many members and guests present. Mrs. MacPherson reporting for the GA said that there were now 10 members in the group, two had attended camp and all had been very active in junior work of the WA. Gifts had been sent to a boy refugee in Germany. Attention was called to the GA Festival on May 5th and members invited to attend.

Mrs. L. Davison referred to the adopted refugee, Olga, also in Germany, and noted that many parcels and gifts of money had been sent.

The illness of Mrs. A. Cosh was regretted and she was greatly missed from the meeting.

A pleasant social hour with refreshments being served concluded the meeting.

SPRING FASHION IN MOTION

"Fashion in Motion"—suits, coats, and ensembles designed for this spring of 1962, styled for young and not so young in colors to delight everyone, lemon yellows and lime greens, toned down to oh so soft shades," navy nautical, and delightfully pale blues, the neutral whites, bones, and beiges, and of course, black. Miss Roberta MacPhee (left) wears a red, french suede coat, featuring the "A" line, with its narrow shoulders and wider hemline. The coat has the seasons most popular ¾ sleeve, just made to wear with the longer glove. With her coat Miss MacPhee wears a black and white hat. Mrs. David Boswell (right) has chosen a suit in a "red-fee with cream" shade of beige. The suit has a walking pleated skirt; and the semi-fitted jacket features a peter pan collar and ¾ length sleeves. Mrs. Boswell is wearing a beige and black straw hat and beige shoes to complete her ensemble. These are just two of the many outfits that will be shown at the "1962 Parade of Spring Fashion, being held at the Charlottetown Hotel this evening. The show, an annual affair, is sponsored by the Junior Ladies Aid of the Prince Edward Island Hospital.
