JANUARY 7, 1892.

The West Indian Trade.

It is stated—we hope, with truth—that there is to be no discrimination against Canada or any other British country as a result of the treaties of reciprocity recently concluded between the United States and the British West Indian Islands.

Animals alive, beef and pork preserved in cans, printed matter in all languages, bottles of glass or stoneware, bran, middlings, and shorts, carts, wagons, cars, and barrows, not including vehicles of pleasure, cotton seed and its products, eggs, fertilizers of all kinds, natural and artificial, fish, fresh or on ice, and salmon and oysters in cans; fruits and vegetables, fresh and dried, when not canned, tinned, or bottled; gold and silver coin of the United States, and bullion; hay and straw for forage, ice, india rubber and gutta percha goods; implements, utensils and tools for agriculture; lime of all kinds, all materials and appliances for railways and tramways, paper of all kinds for printing and wrapping, photographic apparatus and chemicals, all accessories for printing, quick-silver, resin, tar, pitch and turpentine, salt, sewing machines, shipbuilding materials, including wire rope; starch of Indian corn or maize, steam and power engines, steam boilers, iron and steel pipes, sulphur, tannin, electrical apparatus and appliances of all kinds for communication or illumination, trees, plants, vines and seeds and grains of all kinds for propagation or cultivation, wire for fences, proprietary medicines.

Jamaica is, in addition to this, "to admit coal free of duty, to reduce by one half the present duty on bacon and bacon hams, bread and biscuit, butter, cheese, lard and its compounds; lumber of pitch pine, in rough or prepared for buildings, to be reduced to nine shillings per 1,000 feet. Jamaica is also to reduce by 25 per cent, the duty on beef, salted or pickled, corn or maize, cornmeal, oil; petroleum and its products, crude or refined; pork, salted or pickled; wheat."

It will readily be seen that discrimination against Canada in respect to all these articles would give the United States such an advantage that our West Indian export trade would speedily be lost. But Great Britain would not, it is said, consent to a treaty which would operate so injuriously in respect to her colonies. And shall we consent to a treaty of Unrestricted Reciprocity between Canada and the United States which would, admittedly, involve a heavy discrimination against the commerce of Great Britain?

Notes and Comments.

The Ottawa Citizen says that the reconstruction of the Dominion Government will take place before Parliament meets in February.

The members unseated as a result of the Mercier-Pacaud campaign of election petitions, number to date: Government, 13; Opposition, 22. The elections so far announced are to be held as follows:

Bellevue, January 14th.
Glengarry, January 14th.
Kent, January 21st.
Richmond, N. S., January 21st.
Victoria, N. S., January 26th.

A few days ago the Guardian contained a statement concerning the Finance Committee of the City Council, which the Finance Committee authorized THE EXAMINER to say was untrue. The Guardian persisting in that its statement was correct and insisting that THE EXAMINER was responsible for accusing it of falsehood, THE EXAMINER at once clearly and emphatically repudiated the idea of editorial responsibility in the matter. This ought to have been a sufficient explanation, and the Guardian ought to have sought satisfaction from the Finance Committee—not from THE EXAMINER. But it seems that the Finance Committee were right in their denial of the Guardian's charge that they had withheld certain accounts of last year and carried them over into this year. Yet the Guardian has not "withdrawn" or "explained;" but it has added to its offence in respect to the Finance Committee, the false accusation of "pervertation" on the part of THE EXAMINER. In addition to this it made an untrue and misleading statement in respect to the costs in the Queen's County election case. This untrue and misleading statement it has not withdrawn and refuses to correct on the ground forth that THE EXAMINER has been "uncharitable and insolent" in respect to it; and now it says that "THE EXAMINER is becoming a most unreliable and misleading paper." The Guardian should not let a bad temper and a false position blur its judgment. THE EXAMINER has neither pervertated in respect to it, nor has it been uncharitable—unless it be uncharitable to correct a few of its faults and blunders; nor has it been unreliable or misleading in respect to any of the points in issue between the two papers. If the Guardian desires to be regarded as a truthful and religious organ, it must not palter with the truth, and it must be ready to correct its mistakes and show a more Christian-like spirit.

The first divorce suit ever tried in which Quakers were the parties came off in Delaware last week. The plaintiff, one Dawson, was sued by his wife for divorce on account of cruelty.

The originator of Estey's Emulsion spent several years of his life in perfecting this preparation. Not a bottle of it was put on the market until he was satisfied that it was the best ever introduced for the cure of coughs, colds, bronchitis and all wasting diseases. Thousands of bottles have been sold, and he has never heard a complaint regarding it.

Sir John Macdonald.

We have received an advance copy of the first and second volumes of the "Life of Sir John Macdonald," by his nephew, Lt.-Colonel J. Pennington Macpherson. Its appearance is very attractive and indicates that no expense has been spared in paper, type or engravings. The frontispiece of the first volume is a beautiful steel engraving of the late Premier as he appeared about thirty-seven years ago. The frontispiece of the second volume is another very fine steel engraving of Sir John near the close of his life. These engravings are without exception the most lifelike and best-executed portraits of Sir John ever published, and add greatly to the value of the work. There are fifty other engravings, representing members of Sir John's family, scenes in his early life, past and present, colleagues, his principal political opponents, the Governors-General, the promoters of the Canadian Pacific Railway, his funeral and his grave. All of these are executed in the highest style of art, and are most valuable from both an intrinsic and historical point of view.

HISTORY OF THE COUNTRY.

The introductory chapters give the history of the country from 1759 to the time when Sir John first appeared upon the scene; an account of the political parties, and at various times controlled its destiny, and the characters of the men who were his contemporaries, the burning questions which had agitated the public mind and furnished the battle cries at the polls, and the great and almost overwhelming difficulties which had to be overcome. The story of his private life, down to his first election to the House of Assembly in 1854, has been largely contributed by the author's mother, who still lives in Kingston, and is first cousin and sister-in-law to the late Premier, and by other relatives; it consists of an account of his birth in Scotland, removal to Canada, his school days, his law studies and practice at the bar, election as alderman, etc. From 1844 the work deals only with his political life, and may be said to be a very thorough and complete history of Canada. It covers every incident of importance, gives an exhaustive account of every prominent question which has occupied public attention in the last forty-seven years, traces to their source the principles which to-day animate the Conservative party, gives the history of Protection, Confederation, and trade relations with the United States, and gives sketches of our leading statesmen and of our Governors-General. With the "Double Shuffler" and the "Pacific Railway Scandal" the author has dealt at length, and his statement of facts, backed by public papers and documents, seem so clear and straightforward that even the most sceptical must be convinced. The whole work is, as might be expected, in accord with the author's announced intention of endeavoring to make clear the wisdom of Sir John's policy and the purity of his motives. But while such justice has been done to the career of the old chief, as could only be done by one in the position of the author, it has been done in such a way that none of his opponents can feel aggrieved. We feel sure that the work will have an immense sale among all loyal followers of Canada's great Premier, and will be read with interest by numbers of his opponents.

MON. GEORGE BROWN.

Considerable space is devoted to an account of the death of the Hon. George Brown and there is given the greater part of the tributes paid by the Hon. Oliver Mowatt and the Hon. G. W. Allan on the occasion of the unveiling of the statue erected to his memory in Queen's Park, Toronto. Mr. Mowatt's speech commended as follows:

Mr. Brown is the first public man in Ontario in whose memory a statue has ever been erected. Of our public men there have passed away, not one had more friends than he had, and I venture to say that not one was more generally lamented. Those who mourned his death as a personal and public calamity were to be found in every part of the Dominion, and amongst Canadians of all classes and all creeds. The place selected for erecting his statue is, with the approval of all parties, the park of the University—an institution in whose efficiency and prosperity he had, all his life, taken a most lively interest. The springs of action which governed his life, are, to a very great extent, to be found in his early training and associations. He received his education in Edinburgh, he left Scotland and came to America with his father and his father's family while yet a youth, and two-thirds of his life were passed here. By parental example and early teaching he was, in religion, a strong Protestant and an earnest Presbyterian, and in politics a Liberal and a Loyalist. (Applause.) The studies and observations of his mature years confirmed in him the principles in which he had been educated; and all his life he stood by those principles.

All his life he loved his Queen and the grand old islands of the sea over which she has reigned so long and so happily. All his life he loved British connection and British institutions; and all his life he did his duty in maintaining like sentiments wherever his influence extended. He was proud of his British nationality, and was in no haste to discover, and had no disposition to assume, that the time was near when the interests of Canada required the severing of our political relations to the old land; but he, at the same time, recognized a supreme duty to be owing to the land of his domicile, and was always zealous in promoting whatever in his judgment was for the true and permanent good of Canada. Nor had any loyal British subject, anywhere, a kinder and more appreciative feeling than he had towards the great American Republic on our borders, or towards its energetic and progressive people.

All his life he was in heart and soul a Liberal, as Liberalism is understood in England, and as Liberalism is understood in Canada. He was always in harmony with the great majority of the Liberal party in the Province, and generally, though not always, with its other leaders. All his life his sympathies were with the masses of the people. He loved freedom with the profoundest love, and sympathized with all oppressed or ill-governed people. Slavery he hated, with intense hatred, whatever its locality was, or whatever the colour of the slave or the master. All his life he was the educator of the people was dear to him. He desired to see the utmost practicable extension of education amongst all classes, and the greatest possible efficiency in our public schools, our high schools, and our colleges. In regard to our public schools he was an earnest advocate for making them free to all, both as a means of increasing their efficiency, and in order to give to the poorest in the land the advantage of the best schools and on the same footing as others. So in respect to every other subject of public interest. Regarding agriculture as the basis of the country's wealth and prosperity, he took a warm and active interest from an early period in all things relating to the calling of the farmer. He saw the enormous difference which skill makes in the productiveness of the soil, and in the profits of the agriculturist.

Death of E. J. Turner.

Died at San Felipe, California, Dec. 4, 1891, of pneumonia, Ephraim J. Turner, a native of D. Rochester, Mass., aged 65 years. Mr. Turner's death was a surprise to all. A few days prior he was in town attending to business as usual and apparently as hale, hearty and vigorous as ever. He was taken with a gripe, which developed into pneumonia. The funeral took place from the family residence at San Felipe, on Tuesday at 12:15 p.m. The remains were interred in the I. O. F. cemetery, a very large number of friends being present. Mr. Turner was one of the most prominent breeders of Percheron horses on this coast and has been a leading citizen of San Benito County for many years. He leaves a wife and six children in comfortable circumstances. His death is a matter of universal regret. Mr. Turner was not a member of any secret organization.—The Free Lance, Hollister, Cal.

[Mr. Turner, mentioned above, was here on the Island about twenty-two years ago when he married Miss Douglas Jenkins, daughter of the late Mr. John J. Jenkins of Albany, Platts, Lot 50. The numerous friends and relatives of Mrs. Turner will no doubt sympathize with her in her sad bereavement.]

News Notes.

A report comes from Philadelphia that the leading lithograph firms of the United States have combined with a capital of $12,000,000.

The aggregate debt of the United States on January 1st was $1,562,125,206 61. Cash balance in the treasury, $134,574,128 30.

The Mexican bandits have become so threatening that ranchers on the Texas side of the line are rounding up their goats and cattle in order to save them.

Two men called at the office of Mr. D. An Sage, the millionaire lumber merchant of Albany, and on Mr. Sage appearing they seized and best him. One of them was arrested.

The new departmental regulations in Ottawa prohibiting civil servants franking any but official correspondence has come into force and will be rigidly enforced.

Personal.

James E. Macdonald, M. P. P., Cardigan, is a guest at the Hotel Davies.

Mr. W. A. Brennan, of the Summerside Journal, was registered at the Hotel Davies last evening.

Queen Victoria has invited the Count and Countess d'Eu, the latter the late Emperor Dom Pedro's daughter, to pay her a visit at Osborne House.

Professor Nothnagel, the American court physician, traces the grip back to the ninth century, and says it recurs with varying intensity for three or four years and then dies out for twenty or more years. He knows no remedy.

We learn with regret that Mr. E. L. Lydiard, for many years customs broker at the port of Charlottetown, died in Boston on Saturday last, after a brief illness. Mr. Lydiard, with his family, removed to Boston about two years ago.

We regret to learn that Mr. W. J. Miller, of the firm of Miller Bros., has not received any benefit from the sanitarium springs at Watkins, N. Y., and intends leaving the country at once for San Diego, Southern California.

The Emperor William sent a very cordial New Year's message to the Pope. In his reply the Pope said he always desired to be on friendly terms with Germany, and wished the Emperor every success in his struggle with socialism, the common enemy of religion and of the Empire.

Mr. Walter P. Taylor, son of Joseph Taylor, Esq., City Surveyor, Charlottetown, was ordained acting pastor of the First Congregational Church, Westinport, Mass., a short time ago. Rev. S. C. Brooks acted as moderator and offered the prayer of ordination; Rev. T. E. Ramsdell was scribe and gave the hand of fellowship. Prof. Hincks, of Andover, gave the sermon on the occasion, and the charge to the pastor was from Rev. C. E. Jefferson. The choir furnished an excellent programme. The congregation was the largest seen in the church for years. Mr. Taylor was formerly a student at Prince of Wales College, but received his seminary training at Boston University and Andover. Church Progress says: He seems to have been early the subject of renewing grace, and early in his preparatory studies he felt a call to the ministry. Along with his harmony with the doctrines held by our churches were a singleness of purpose and concentration of spirit promising a fruitful ministry. The new acting pastor is already getting his work well in hand and promises to be a workman that need not be ashamed.
