THE CHRONICLES OF MARTIN HEWITT

By Arthur Morrison

THE CASE OF THE MISSING HAND

CHAPTER II.

Hewitt and I had of course at this time never heard of Mr. Sneathy, and the colonel told us what little he knew. He had never spoken to the man, he said—indeed nobody in the place outside Ranworth would have anything to do with him. "He's certainly been an unholy scoundrel over those poor people's banks," said my uncle, "and if what they say's true he's been about as bad as possible to his wretched wife. He must have been pretty miserable, too, with all his scoundrelism, for he was a completely ruined man, without a chance of retrieving his position, and detested by everybody. Indeed, some of his recent doings, if what I have heard is to be relied on, have been very much those of a madman. So that on the whole I'm not much surprised. Suicide's about the only crime I suppose that he never experimented with till now, and, indeed, its rather a service to the world at large—his only service, I expect."

The colonel sent a man to make further inquiries, and presently this man returned with the news that now it was said that Mr. Sneathy had not committed suicide, but had been murdered. And hard on the man's heels came Mr. Hardwick, a neighbor of my uncle's and a fellow J. P. He had had the case reported to him, it seemed, as soon as the body had been found and had at once gone to the spot. He found the body hanging—and with the right hand off.

"It's a murder, Brett," he said. "without doubt a most horrible case of murder and mutilation. The hand is cut off and taken away, but whether the atrocity was committed before or after the hanging, of course, I can't say. But the missing hand makes it plainly a case of murder, and not suicide. I've come to consult you about a warrant, for I think there's no doubt as the identity of the murderer."

"That's a good job," said the colonel, "else we should have had some work for Mr. Martin Hewitt here, which wouldn't be fair, as he's taking a rest. Who do you think of having arrested?"

"The two young Fosters. It's as plain as it can be—and a most revolting crime, too, had as Sneathy may have been. They came down from London to-day and went out deliberately to do it, that's clear. They were heard talking of it, asked as to the direction in which he had gone and followed him—and with a rope."

"Isn't that rather an unusual form of murder—hanging?" Hewitt remarked.

"Perhaps it is," Mr. Hardwick replied "but it's the case here, plain enough. It seems, in fact, that they had a way of threatening to hang him and even to cut off his hand if he used it to strike their mother. So that they appear to have carried out what might have seemed mere idle threats in a diabolically savage way. Of course they may have strangled him first and hanged him afterward, by way of carrying out their threat and venting their spite on the mutilated body. But that they did it is plain enough to me. I've spent an hour or two over it and I feel I am certainly more than justified in ordering their apprehension. Indeed they were with him at the time, as I've found by their tracks on the footpath through the wood."

The colonel turned to Martin Hewitt. "Mr. Hardwick, you must know," he said, "is by way of being an amateur in your particular line—and a very good amateur, too, I should say, judging by a case or two I have known of in this county."

Hewitt bowed and laughingly expressed a fear lest Mr. Hardwick should come to London and supplant him altogether. "This seems a curious case," he added. "If you don't mind I think I should like to take a glance at the tracks and whatever other traces there may be, just by way of keeping my hand in."

"Certainly," Mr. Hardwick replied, brightening. "I should of all things like to have Mr. Hewitt's opinion on the observations I have made—just for my own gratification. As to his opinion there can be no room for doubt. The thing is plain."

With many promises not to be late for dinner we left my uncle and walked with Mr. Hardwick in the direction of Ratherby wood. It was an unfrequented part, he told us, and by particular care he had managed, he hoped, to prevent the rumor spreading to the village yet, so that we might hope to find the tracks not yet overlaid. It was a man of his own, he said, who, making a short cut through the wood, had come upon the body hanging, and had run immediately to inform him. With this man he had gone back cut down the body and made his observations. He had followed the trail back wards to Ranworth and there had found the new coachman, who had once been in his own service. From him he had learned the doings of the brothers Foster as they left the place, and from him he had ascertained that they had not yet returned. Then leaving his man by the body he had come straight to my uncle's.

Presently we came on the footpath leading from Ranworth across the fields to Ratherby wood. It was a mere trail of bare earth worn by successive feet amid the grass. It was damp, and we all stooped and examined the footmarks that were to be seen on it. They all pointed one way—toward the wood in the distance.

"Fortunately it's not a greatly frequented path," Mr. Hardwick said. "You see, there are the marks of three pairs of feet only, and as first Sneathy and then both of the brothers came this way the footmarks must be theirs. Which are Sneathy's is plain—they are these large, flat ones. If you notice, they are all distinctly visible in the centre of the track, showing plainly that they belong to the man who walked alone, which was Sneathy. Of course the others, the marks of the outside feet—the left on the left side and the right on the right—are often not visible. Clearly they belong to the two men walking side by side and, more often than not, treading with their outer feet on the grass at the other side. And when these happen to drop on the same spot as the marks in the middle, they cover them. Plainly they are the footmarks of Henry and Robert Foster, made as they followed Sneathy. Don't you agree with me, Mr. Hewitt?"

"Oh, yes, that's very plain. You have a better pair of eyes than most people, Mr. Hardwick, and a good idea of using them too. We will go on to the wood now. As a matter of fact, I can pretty clearly distinguish most of the other footmarks—those on the grass, but that's a matter of much training."

We followed the footpath, keeping on the grass at its side, in case it should be desirable to refer again to the footprints. For some little distance into the wood the tracks continued as before, those of the brothers overlaying those of Sneathy. The path here was broader, and muddy, because of the proximity of trees, and suddenly the outer footprints separated, and no more overlay the longer ones in the centre, but proceeded at an equal distance on either side of them.

"See there" cried Mr. Hardwick, pointing triumphantly to the spot, "this is where they overtook him, and walked on either side. The body was found only a little further on—you could see the place now if the path didn't zigzag about so."

Hewitt said nothing, but stooped and examined the tracks with great care and evident thought, spanning the distances between them comparatively with his arms. Then he rose and stepped lightly from one mark to another, taking care not to tread on the mark itself. "Very good," he said, shortly, on finishing his examination, "We'll go on."

We went on, and presently came to the place where the body lay. Here the ground sloped from the left down toward the right and a tiny streamlet, a mere trickle of a foot or two wide, ran across the path. In rainy seasons it was probably wider, for all the earth and clay had been washed away for some feet on each side, leaving flat, bare and very coarse gravel, on which the trail was lost. Just beyond this, and to the left, the body lay on a grass knoll under the limb of a tree from which still depended a part of the cut rope. It was not a pleasant sight. The man was a soft, fleshy creature probably rather under than over the medium height, and he lay there, with his stretched neck and protruding tongue, a revolting object. His right arm lay by his side, and the stump of the wrist was clotted with black blood. Hardwick's man was still in charge seemingly little pleased with his job., and a few yards off stood a couple of countrymen, looking on.

Hewitt asked from which direction these men had come, and, having ascertained and noted their footmarks, he asked them to stay exactly where they were to avoid confusing such other tracks as might be seen. Then he addressed himself to his examination. "First," he said, glancing up at the branch that was scarce a yard above his head, "this rope has been here for some time."

"Yes," Mr. Hardwick replied, "it's an old swing rope. Some children used it in the summer, but it got partly cut away, and the odd couple of yards has been hanging since."

"Ah!" said Hewitt, "then if the Fosters did this they were saved some trouble by the chance and were able to take their halter back with them—and so avoid one chance of detection." He very closely scrutinized the top of a tree stump, probably the relic of a tree that had been cut down long before, and then addressed himself to the body.

"When you cut it down," he said, "did it fall in a heap?"

"No, my man eased it down to some extent."

"Not on to its face?"

"Oh, no. On to its back, just as it is now." Mr. Hardwick saw that Hewitt was looking at muddy marks on each of the corpse's knees, to one of which a small leaf clung, and at one or two other marks of the same sort on the fore part of the dress. "That seems to show pretty plainly," he said, "that he must have struggled with them and was thrown forward, doesn't it?"

Hewitt did not reply, but gingerly lifted the right arm by its sleeve. "Is either of the brothers Foster left-handed?" he asked.

"No, I think not. Here, Barrett, you have seen plenty of their doings—cricket, shooting and so on—do you remember if either is left-handed?"

"Nayther, sir," Mr. Hardwick's man answered. "Both on em's right-handed."

Hewitt lifted the lapel of the coat and attentively regarded a small rent in it. The dead man's hat lay near, and after a few glances at that Hewitt dropped it and turned his attention to the hair. This was coarse and dark and long, and brushed straight back with no parting.

"This doesn't look very symmetrical, does it?" Hewitt remarked, pointing to the locks over the right ear. They were shorter just there than on the other side, and apparently very clumsily cut, whereas in every other part the hair appeared to be rather well and carefully trimmed. Mr. Hardwick said nothing, but fidgeted a little as though he considered that valuable time was being wasted over irrelevant trivialities.

Presently, however, he spoke. "There is very little to be learned from the body, is there?" he said. "I think I'm quite justified in ordering their arrest, eh? Indeed I've wasted too much time already."

Hewitt was groping among some bushes behind the tree from which the corpse had been taken, when he answered he said: "I don't think I should do anything of the sort just now, Mr. Hardwick. As a matter of fact, I fancy,"—this word with an emphasis—"that the brothers Foster may not have seen this man Sneathy at all to-day."

SAVED HIS LIFE.

"I now weigh nearly 200 pounds," said a fine robust looking man the other day, and yet this same man was given up to die of consumption less than two years ago. What cured him? Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil did. He took it when at a low ebb, when his weight was less than 100 pounds. It created new blood for him and that combined with his will power raised him up to a life of fullness and happiness. If you are threatened with consumption or any other lung trouble try Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and all Lung affections. In big bottles, 50c. and $1, at all drug stores.

It is announced that Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria will shortly visit Berlin as the guest of the Emperor.

FOR TIRED FEELING

Exhaustion is Waste—Overwork means Shorter Life—Dodd's Kidney Pills Means rest for the Kidneys.

Overwork is what you do after common sense asks you to quit.

Overwork of any kind does more than tire, it exhausts you.

Just a little more after you ought to quit is the "too much" that uses you up.

The blood goes out to all parts faster than usual when you overwork.

If the kidneys are not in perfect filtering order more poison is injected through them to all parts of the body than usual and then work, to say nothing of overwork, is harmful.

As soon as your kidneys commence doing good work there is less and less poison in the blood every minute.

This explains why Dodd's Kidney Pills cure so promptly and permanently.

Mr. James Payn, the novelist, has retired from the editorship of the famous Cornhill Magazine.

Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Chase's Pills have gained popularity because they are a specific for the uric condition, prevents disease, cure Rheumatism and all catarrhal conditions of the Kidneys and Bladder. They do this because they possess remarkable alterative, tonic and diuretic properties, exerting a wonderful soothing influence on irritated or inflamed mucous membranes of the kidneys or bladder. One pill a dose. 25c. a box. The cheapest medicine in the world.

A large majority of the Volksraad will oppose the visit of President Kruger of the Transvaal to London.

It Saved Our Child

"My little daughter, three and a half years old, suffered three years with Eczema. Her little body was covered with the itching rash, and doctors did no good. Four boxes of Chase's Ointment have entirely cured and saved our child. Her skin is clear and not a sign of rash is to be seen." Andrew Aiton, Hartland, N. B., Mr. Aiton is one of thousands benefitted by this unfailing cure for piles and skin diseases.

Every American who has visited London has assuredly examined the priceless contents of the world famed British museum, the grandest institution of the kind in the universe. There must be many people, therefore, in this country who will learn with regret of the retirement from the direction of the institution of Sir Augustus Wollaston Franks, the celebrated antiquary.

Experience Has Proved It

A triumph in medicine was attained when experience proved that Scott's Emulsion would not only stop the progress of Pulmonary Consumption, but by its continued use health and vigor could be fully retored.

Out of respect for the memory of Lord Leighton, the council of the Royal Academy has decided not to have a banquet this year,

Mr. C. Donnelly, wholesale liquor dealer, Alliston, Ont., was troubled for years with Itching Piles. He was persuaded Jas. McGravey, Alliston, livery man, to use Chase's Ointment, which he did, was cured, has had no return of them and highly recommends the Ointment as a sovereign cure for Piles.

It is proposed in London to erect a monument to the memory of G. A. Sala, and to make a pecuniary provision for his widow.

—The Toronto Week and some other Ontario papers are laying down the doctrine that there is too much public school education in the province, and that farmers' sons and other are being educated into a distaste for their fathers' honorable occupations. There would seem to be those in England, also, who think with the Week. London Truth reproduces the following advertisement from another paper:

WANTED. — A thoroughly capable, energetic, all-round gardener; small vinery and greenhouse, cows, pigs and poultry, boy kept; a man who cannot read or write preferred; age about 30; must have first-rate character; wages, £1 a week and small cottage. Apply, stating all particulars, to Mrs. Giradot, Rosehill, Ruabon.

—Referring to the multi-murderer whose confession, recently published, has horrified the world, the Mail and Empire says: "Holmes is well educated in secular knowledge, but like many another clever and ambitious young man, he wanted to get money without working for it. The tendency of this principle, when admitted to a man's mind, is to make him more or less unscrupulous, though we may be thankful that in but a few instances does the passion for money without work lead to such extremes of guilt. It is, however, a potential, mischief which may be well pondered over by those who are anxious to secure the sweets of life, without putting their necks to the yoke of honest labor.

Seeding operations have been started in Manitoba.

The effigy of Gen. Weyler, wrapped in a Spanish flag, was burned in Key West, Fla., a few nights ago. The incident will be laid before United States Secretary Olney.

THE STRENGTH OF ICE.

The army rules are that 2 inch ice will sustain a man or properly spaced infantry; 4 inch ice will carry a man on horseback, or cavalry, or light guns; 6 inch ice, heavy field guns, such as 80 pounders; 8 inch ice, a battery of artillery, with carriages and horses, but not over 1,000 pounds per square foot on sledges; and 10 inch ice sustains an army or an innumerable multitude. On 15 inch ice railroad tracks are often laid and operated for months and 2 foot thick ice withstood the impact of a loaded passenger car, after a 60 foot fall (or, perhaps, 1,500 foot tons), but broke under that of the locomotive and tender (or, perhaps, 3,000 foot tons) Trantwine gives the crushing strength of firm ice as 167 to 250 pounds per square inch. Col. Ludlow in his experiments in 1881, on 6 to 12 inch cubes, found 292 to 889 for pure hard ice, and 222 to 820 pounds for inferior grades, and on the Delaware river, 700 pounds for clear ice and 400 pounds or less for the ice near the mouth, where it is more or less disintegrated by the action of salt water, etc. Experiments of Gzowski gave 208 pounds; those of others 310 to 320 pounds. The tensile strength was found by German experiments to be 142 to 223 pounds per square inch. The shearing strength has been given as 75 to 119 pounds per square inch. The average specific gravity of ice is 0.92. In freezing, water increases in volume from 1-9 to 1-19, or an average of 1-11; when floating, 11-12 is immersed.—Engineering Mechanics.

Get the Best.

The public are too intelligent to purchase a worthless article a second time, on the contrary they want the best. Physicians are virtually unanimous in saying Scott's Emulsion is the best form of cod liver oil.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ar

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
