Have Dinner & Show At The New Mermaid Theatre
London will open a new theatre-restaurant May 28, only a few yards from the old Mermaid Tavern where Shakespeare and Ben Jonson and their friends gathered. Because of that it's called the Mermaid Theatre, under Blackfriars' Bridge across the river from where Shakespeare's Globe Theatre stood. The Mermaid is the first new theatre in this part of London in 250 years. The Mermaid will be one of the best tourist entertainment bargains in the world, the British Travel Association claims. It will present musicals based on stage classics, new plays and "experimental productions" according to director Bernard Miles. "It is our intention to provide food and entertainment for two people for less than $2.00." The first production will be an 18th-century play called "Lock Up Your Daughters" to music by Lauri Johnson. The play is by Henry Fielding.

Yes, Take A Cottage Move In & Meet British
Britain—attracting more and more overseas visitors every year—is now Europe's top tourist country. As these visitors leave for home, many a cry is heard of: "Oh, how I wish I could have stayed longer." Well, here's an idea for that long stay in Britain which so many people promise themselves: Take a cottage. Rent a car. Meet the people. A cottage in the "home" countries—i.e., those surrounding London—will put you within easy reach of the capital. Drive up to Town to a show, to dine and dance, to go shopping or to watch the colourful ceremonial parades. Drive into the country to visit stately homes or castles, flower shows or horse shows, to go to the races or the coast to join the British on the beaches. The cost? Remarkably little. A cottage or small house accommodating four to six people rents at about $14.00 to $42.00 a week, depending on the time of year. All the big London estate agents have furnished cottages, houses or apartments on their books and every country town has agents who cover wide areas. Hiring a car in Britain is simple and inexpensive, whether you obtain it from a large company or the village garage. And you'll soon get used to driving on the "correct" side of the road. If you don't fancy cooking and doing the chores yourself, you can hire a "Mrs. Mop". These good ladies usually provide light entertainment, too, with their stories of husbands, families and neighbours—usually related over endless cups of tea. Eating at good country hotels and inns is an experience in itself. The food is about the best and most reasonably-priced in the country. You will always find a happy atmosphere in these places. Have you ever thought, when on holiday, how nice it would be to be home? You are missing your home comforts. You'd like to go down to the kitchen, to make yourself some coffee and have your own special type of breakfast and read the papers while still in your dressing-gown. Well, this is the way to do it. With your own house, you are your own agent. You can come and go when you like. And, if you really want to live like the British, you can call daily at your local inn for a pint of beer and a game of darts or shove-ha'penny. The British inn is still the focal point of the village. Even television—which you can hire, if you wish—hasn't dimmed the appeal of the social get-together at the pub. It's nice to air your views and hear the opinions of others, enter friendly arguments, listen to tall stories and, perhaps tell tall tales ones. Shopping in the village is great fun, too. Most British villages have a post-office-cum-general-store that sells everything. And if they haven't got what you want, they'll get it. Spend a month or two in Britain like this. You'll store up enough happy memories to last you a lifetime. Ann of Summerside, are leaving today for Montreal, where they will visit Mrs. Downing's mother, Mrs. A. Gillespie.
