OYSTER CULTURE.

P. E. ISLAND OYSTERS are the delight of epicures. Oysters of a finer flavor cannot anywhere be found. There is no question either that oysters will breed and flourish in the bays and rivers of this Province if only permitted to do so. But indiscriminate fishing has resulted in a material reduction of the catch and a considerable loss of income. How to restock the beds that have been depopulated—that is the question. In the near, and still more, in the distant future, a great deal of money may annually be brought into the Province, which will certainly be lost if steps be not taken to replenish our oyster beds. It seems to be clear that these beds must be farmed, and protected as our farms are protected, if they are to be made fully remunerative. The measures hitherto taken by the Government have not met the case. Oysters are now for the most part small and scarce. That this is not wonderful, in view of the nature and treatment of the oyster. With every grown oyster that is eaten out of season there is destroyed 1,000,000 and 2,000,000 young oysters. A patient student of the oyster asserts that he has actually counted the number of the embryos in one oyster at the pre-spawning season in the month of June, and that there were present 1,012,355. So that when the oyster moults its oysters at that season, he delights in the monstrous act of swallowing with every oyster upwards of a million of the young.

Reproduction of oysters is extraordinary. Each oyster of both sexes and produces its eggs within itself. At the spawning season these are discharged in enormous numbers and float away wherever the currents may carry them. If they find something to stick to they speedily grow; but if not, they are devoured by the fishes or they fall into the mud or grass, and so are lost forever. This is the oyster farmer's first opportunity. If alive to his own interests he will provide branches of trees or something to which the young oysters may attach themselves. On the coast of North Carolina the oyster beds are laid out in lots ready for the occupation of the oyster farmers. The right to cultivate oysters upon these lots may be procured from the state at nominal prices, the holders being merely bound to make proper arrangements for oyster production. Stakes, to which are attached bundles of small sticks or brush, called fascines, are driven into the bottom, the fascines being left floating in the water. As the currents flow back and forth the oyster spawn or spat is carried to these bundles, and to these they cling and grow. As they increase in size or the fascines decay they fall to the bottom and so very soon cover the ground. Shells, stones and other things are also provided for the young oysters to "catch on to." The experiment made by Lieut. Winslow, who was watching the beds on behalf of the United States Government, showed that hundreds of the young oysters were collected and sared by mere accidental passage over bundles of brush placed here and there in the water and held by stones to keep them in place. This goes to prove what might be done by proper methodical culture, at a very small expenditure of capital and very little labor. It is quite possible by proper culture to increase the production of oysters fully a thousand times. The importance of oyster culture to this Province can hardly be over estimated.

POLICY OF THE REPUBLICANS.

One of the Republican leaders in Congress said in the course of an address delivered shortly after the recent great victory of the party, "I do not desire to waste your time in exaltation, though I am obeying scriptures when I rejoice with those who do rejoice. Nevertheless, we have got something else to do besides rejoice. Victories bring responsibilities, and as I have pointed out to you our victory is so great that it probably means responsibility for many years. Of those many years I shall not now speak. If we have wisdom for two years we will be trusted for more, and the wisdom for the next two years seems to be easy. We have neither the President nor the Senate, and all we can do is to let the country try the results of the folly of 1892. While in the long run this may be wisest, just now seems a great misfortune. There are compensations, however. We shall have two years to look over the situation so as to do the best we can when our time has fully come. So far we have done all that lay in our power. The bad work cannot go on even if the good work cannot commence. This country is in favor of the doctrine of protection, largely in favor of it. Everything shows this, and no man whose brains are not suffering from the recent concussion from the polls can think otherwise. What we need now is not general belief in our doctrine, we need teaching, which comes from practical results. We need a distribution of the facts. When I say to you that protection will cheapen goods and make better goods, you may yield assent, but it may not be a fighting faith. But when I show by facts and figures that ground glass, for example, though raised 100 per cent by the McKinley tariff, has reached almost the same price as before, and the consumer gets American glass worth 20 per cent more, and every inch of it made by American labor, I show something which is an ever present answer to all the theories of the world."

NEWS NOTES.

Another rebellion has broken out in Brazil. This is the fifth, but not the final round. Mount Tacoma, or Rainier, 14,414 feet high, in Washington state, is in eruption, and the people of Tacoma and Seattle are alarmed. Customs receipts at Washington so far this month amount to $7,480,633; internal revenue, $5,159,046; miscellaneous, $912,338; total, $13,652,017. The expenditure reached $22,169,000, showing a deficit of $8,517,983.

POPES BIOGRAPHY OF SIR JOHN.

The St. John Sun has been favored with an advance copy of the biography of Sir John Macdonald, by Mr. Joseph Pope, and furnishes lengthy and interesting extracts. The introduction by Baroness Macdonald, is as follows:

"During one of those strange and beautiful days following that summer and solemn hour which closed the earthly career of my husband—days when I tried to move forward from the horror of a great darkness into the sad twilight of resignation—on one of those days the necessity forced itself upon me for naming a writer, who, having had a close personal intercourse with Sir John, should, aided by the contents of such papers and letters as he had left, be able to give a more intimate and detailed history of his interesting personality than would be possible for any other biographer, however competent and faithful, not possessed of these special advantages."

Happily my husband anticipated the possibility of this necessity, and, as was his custom in the regulation of my daily life, had given me in a few slight, but the direct, and most precious, the result had been brought under his notice some three or four months before the time of our parting by two letters addressed to me. Both these letters were in the handwriting of the great hero, and each offering his services as Sir John's biographer, one of whom was good enough to ask my assistance in the preparation of his work.

When the second of these letters arrived, though Sir John was apparently as well as usual, deeply engrossed by important business and in the full tide of public affairs, I had already with a sinking heart been visiting him in the hospital, and his gifts as to the state of his health. It was more from his words and ways of late I had learned to fear, for it seemed to me that in some mysterious manner the well-known and great hero was lying for him, and that his tired eyes saw beyond it. In one of his rare intervals of leisure—sadly do I remember how difficult it was to find even a few unoccupied minutes for the purpose—I showed both these letters to Sir John, as I had shown others on the same subject, received at intervals during the last ten years of our married life. I see my husband now as he spoke in answer, weary and thoughtful on his return home at Ottawa from a long cabinet meeting: "They must wait till I am dead," he said slowly, "and then I think I shall speak to any other." "Yes," he repeated, "I will write it; he knows more about me than anyone else; and you, Agnes, shall help him. In accordance with the first part of his desire, so soon as it was possible for me to see him, I sent for Mr. Pope and asked him as a personal favor to undertake the work.

The second, alas, it was impossible to fulfill. Suffering, weakened and unfit, it was then, and it has been ever since, not only impossible for me to add a line or word to them, but even to read Mr. Pope's pages, for which I now in this blind, unusual manner venture to ask public attention. Having consented, not without many tears, to the preparation of these memoirs, Mr. Pope naturally asked for such material as I could furnish. A large collection of letters and papers had been carefully preserved during many years by Sir John with a view, as he more than once told me, to writing some account of his life and times in Canada, when too old for longer devotion to the public service, he should retire altogether from political life and enjoy what he always eagerly looked forward to, a few years of rest and quiet before the end should come. To these letters and papers, except in this way to me, I cannot discover that my husband made any future reference whatever. They remained at my disposal, and, entirely unfit as I was to read or examine or select from their pages I had no choice but to give them unreservedly to Mr. Pope with a request that in making use of their contents he would exercise his best judgment.

That Mr. Pope has done this in all things relating to these memoirs, that he has used his great ability and spared no pains to write honestly, faithfully and usefully, I know full well; and if in his writing and in his introduction there is more that is faulty and ill-judged than is usually the case in memoirs and their prefaces, I hope and believe we shall be forgiven these results of our inexperience, and at least get the credit of having done our best. The Sun remarks that— "Mr. Pope pretends the modest part of furnishing link and explanation, leaving the letters and memoirs of Sir John and his colleagues to speak as far as possible for themselves. The unpretentious manner in which this is done concerns the careless reader the magnitude of the task which the author or editor has performed with rare skill and evidently with many months of weary toil and much research."

PERSONAL.

John P. Sullivan, Esq., St. Peter's Bay, is in the city. F. J. Macdonald, Glenaladale, was registered at the Queen Hotel this forenoon. Lewis Carroll and family will reside in Hampton for the winter.—Moncton Times. Mr. John Hughes, of the Post Office Department, left a few days ago for Detroit, Mich., on an interesting mission. Mr. L. H. Davies, M. P., crossed over to Point du Chene today, en route to Moncton, where he addresses a public meeting this evening. Many persons in Charlottetown will read with regret the announcement of the death of Miss Emma Shenton which appears elsewhere in THE EXAMINER. The young lady was well known here, and was very popular.

The Summerside correspondent of the Guardian reports that Dr. Wall, of Summerside, has so far recovered from his recent stroke of paralysis that he will not only go south for the winter. This will be pleasing news to Dr. Wall's many friends.

THE DRAMA.—The St. Dunstan's College Dramatic Club has been reorganized for 1894-5, with the following officers: President, P. F. Doyle; Vice-President, A. A. McDonald; Secretary, E. G. Gillis; Treasurer, P. R. Walsh; Managing Committee, J. A. Simont, J. A. McDonald and J. M. Bradley; Costume Committee, J. L. Roche, J. A. Ready, and F. G. O'Neill.

OBITUARY.

Died at Summerside, on Saturday, the 24th inst., Anne Jones, beloved wife of John Gaffney, Esq. The deceased was born in Charlottetown, and was second daughter of the late Captain Thos. Jones, who served in the 10th Regiment of Foot and Great Britain, and latterly of Liverpool, England. She was a highly intelligent lady, her good judgment and keen discernment making her a diligent reader of none but the best books. Her ethical standard was of a high order, and she not only lived up to it herself, but had the pleasure of seeing her young family grow up around her, strongly imbued with those basic principles of temperance and morality, which she had so assiduously taught them. In her the poor have lost a kind friend, and the Church a generous contributor. When the erection of the present stately edifice in which the Catholics of Summerside now worship, was under consideration, none was more ardent than she, to see the good work go on, and none labored more zealously in contributing towards its final completion. She has now gone to her reward, and leaves to mourn their great loss a sorrowing husband, five daughters, and two sons, the elder of whom, Wilfred J. Gaffney, has already marked his mark at the Boston Bar, as an active and successful young lawyer. To the bereaved family we tender our heartfelt sympathy in this hour of their affliction.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

DEATH OF DR. ROSSIN.

Sir,—Without any fault of the prosecution, or of the Superior Court, or of the celebrated case of Bradley against Rossin remains as great an enigma as ever. "What is the secret of this man's phenomenal success?" is a question we hear asked every day, and no satisfactory answer has yet been given. In no way can Dr. Rossin's success be attributed to fortuitous circumstances. In fact circumstances may be said to be against him. Although he is not a member of any of our clubs, and has never been accused of improperly granting liquor certificates, his friends freely admit that Dr. Rossin has all, or nearly all, the weaknesses and failings of the average regular practitioner. In almost every respect his professional brethren have an advantage over him. Dr. Rossin is not a prominent member of any influential church. He has no powerful social connection. The numerous secret orders in which he claims membership have all repudiated him. Till the recent trial so lightly was he thought of financially that it is feared he even escaped the all-vigilant income tax collector. Dr. Rossin is yet a stranger to most of our people and a partial stranger to our language and literature.

Notwithstanding all these disadvantages, it is claimed that, at his trial, over one hundred thousand dollars were represented in the persons of his friends and sympathizers. How can this be accounted for? He has made all these friends within the past three years. The foundation of their friendship and the basis of their sympathy are solely Dr. Rossin's record as a healer of the sick. Can it be possible that this man is wholly ignorant of the science of medicine and surgery? Have all the wonderfully successful operations, of which we have heard so much, been performed by a man totally unacquainted with the arrangement of the internal organs of the human body? Do he, or he, in justice be accused of violating any Medical Act. A man who knows nothing of medicine cannot be said to practice medicine. No Medical Act can be said to be violated by a man who knows nothing of the science of medicine and surgery. Have all the wonderfully successful operations, of which we have heard so much, been performed by a man totally unacquainted with the arrangement of the internal organs of the human body? Do he, or he, in justice be accused of violating any Medical Act. A man who knows nothing of medicine cannot be said to practice medicine. No Medical Act can be said to be violated by a man who knows nothing of the science of medicine and surgery.

If on the other hand Dr. Rossin's success is due to his medical and surgical skill and not to empirical means, sorcery or witchcraft, is it not fair to assume that the head and front of his offending is that he will not test his competitors in the field of his art or reveal to them the mysteries of his profession. They seem to want to examine him, not to test his competency, but to enlighten themselves. Rossin objects, and pointing to his patients' claims "these are my diplomas."

No one can blame the Medical Society for their position in this case. They wish to protect their industry. Great Diana Ephesianus is an old cry, and doctors are proverbially well conservative. But it may be asked what special interest had the citizens of Charlottetown in this case that they should lend the services of their policeman to the Medical Board. At the instance of the prosecutor, invalids from New Glasgow to Lot 48 were brought to Charlottetown to tell in court what Dr. Rossin had done for them. The people of Lot 48 at least should be allowed to cling to life and to fight death in their own way without the interference of a city official.

COD LIVER OIL has long been known to the Medical Profession as perhaps the best single remedy for CONSUMPTION and other Wasting Diseases—but most sick or ailing people have an unconquerable aversion to it, in its crude state. The Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda are only second to Cod Liver Oil in their curative effects in the above complaints. In PUTTNER'S EMULSION the Oil, while retaining all its medical virtues, is completely disguised both from eye and palate, so as to be agreeable to the most delicate stomach, while its curative effect is enhanced one hundred per cent. by its scientific association with the salts of Phosphorus. For sale by all Druggists at 50 cents a bottle.
