thinness

The diseases of thinness are scrofula in children, consumption in grown people, poverty of blood in either. They thrive on leanness. Fat is the best means of overcoming them. Everybody knows cod-liver oil makes the healthiest fat.
In Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil the taste is hidden, the oil is digested, it is ready to make fat.
When you ask for Scott's Emulsion and your druggist gives you a package in a salmon-colored wrapper with the picture of the man and fish on it—you can trust that man!

Comedy and Tragedy.

BY THERESA L. MacQUOID.

CHAPTER III.

Norah made her way upstairs into her bedroom, where, to her surprise, she found her sister fast asleep in an armchair before the fire.

Feeling in no humor for half measures, she took her by the shoulders and shook her with all her force.

"Why Norah, what ever is the matter now?" asked Mabel, yawning and sleepily stretching out her arms.

"Everything," said Norah, tearing off her gloves. "Men were only born to make women miserable, and they play their parts to perfection. Can't we leave this horrible place tomorrow?"

"Have you quite taken leave of your senses?" asked the elder sister. "Consider that we rushed out of here at two days' notice just because you found London horrible. However," she went on in her low, monotonous voice, "you are a little too impetuous sometimes, as I will show you. I have had a letter tonight from Colonel Gerard—a miserable letter, saying you have never answered his. In fact, he is so miserable that he is now on his way out here and will arrive tomorrow. Oh, these lovers!"

And Mabel yawned again.

"But I never got any letter to answer. What do you mean? My head does ache so! Oh, do speak! What does it all mean, Mabel?"

"It's very simple, my dear. You conjured up a situation that never existed between Colonel Gerard and another and rushed away in a fit of jealousy. His letter to you has been forwarded, but aunt forgot all about the letters till tonight. There it is. Well, he will arrive in the flesh tomorrow. What are you going to say?"

"What am I going to say?" repeated Norah in a broken voice, covering her face with her hands. "Why, tell him that I love him—love him—love him, and always have and always shall."

"Very well. Only I wouldn't be in too much of a hurry to say all that. I think I'll go to bed now. Good night."

When the door had closed, Norah went to the window, and drawing up the blind looked at the moon. The voyage from London to Constantinople, with its disastrous ending, was only like a bad dream now. But this man, this valet, the supposed Lord Peter Donald—what was to prevent him joking at her expense among his own set? And Norah drooped her head with shame, and the hot blood rushed to her face as she realized it all and how it had been she herself who had made every advance from the very first.

She paced up and down the room, then suddenly stopped. "I see it all clearly," she cried aloud, "as clearly as if it were written on that wall. I know now what he meant when he said he could keep silence—he will. I believe firmly in that man's face. He will never betray me."

Four months later Colonel Gerard and his wife—a week married—were sitting in a summer house nestling on one of the wooded cliffs that overhang the coast of south Devon. It was a hot afternoon, without a breeze to stir the blue sea that was lazily flowing in over the shining beach below. They had been sitting in silence for some time, but Norah's eyes were wandering restlessly over the sea to the hazy horizon, with her thoughts wandering, too, far away from Devonshire. Presently she arose and leaning in the doorway of the summer house said: "Douglas, there's something I've always wanted to tell you, only I was afraid to before we were married. It's a dreadful confession, and—well, I thought you might somehow not quite understand me."

"DOUGLAS, THERE'S SOMETHING I'VE ALWAYS WANTED TO TELL YOU."

"Well, Norah, tell me now," and he put his hand over hers.

"Shall I give you an opening? Were you ever in love before?"

"That's just it," and she clasped her hands, letting the rose leaves fall to the ground. "No, I have never been in love before, and I shall never, never be in love again. But once—well, once—I had a curious kind of feeling that I can't quite describe for a man. It was just when I was so unhappy about you," and here she lowered her voice. "A feeling of—interest— But here comes the dreadful part. I found out afterward—that—he was—not a gentleman."

"Tell me all about it, dear," said Douglas Gerard gently, and leaning both arms on the little painted table he looked into the girl's pure, earnest face, while she told him, word for word, all that had passed on that journey to Constantinople.

"It was entirely my fault," she concluded, "and now it's all over I can't help laughing. But just think, if the man had not been nice what he could have made of it! Oh, you little knew my relief when I heard that Lord Peter Donald and his valet had left the very day you arrived! It was a regular comedy and no mistake. But you don't seem amused at all."

"Have you ever considered how little it takes to turn a comedy into a tragedy?" said Colonel Gerard after a moment.

"Why, what do you mean? How grave you are! You do not misunderstand me surely."

"No, dear, but look at this letter which I received only last week and totally forgot till this morning. It's from Donald."

"Lord Peter Donald?" cried Norah aghast.

"Yes, it is, and quite a coincidence. Come, sit by me here, and I will show you. Yes, like that," for Norah had sunk on her knees by his side with only a bewildered expression on her face. "No, that's only business. Read from there."

And leaning her head against his shoulder she took the letter.

"My servant, Peters, died last week. He never seemed really well after that time he went out to Constantinople by sea, but nevertheless would come this trip with me. He got fever last week and died in three days. He was always a curious, silent man, but a few hours before his death he asked me to bury a particular picture with him. I found it in his Bible. It was a photograph of himself and some girl playing chess, but the girl's face was entirely obliterated, evidently with intention. I asked if he had a message to send to any one, but he said he had none, so his secret or whatever it was has gone to his grave with him, poor fellow."

And when Norah had read so far the letter dropped from her hands, and sobbing she let her head fall on her husband's knee.

"So you see, my darling," he said as he gently took her in his arms, "what is comedy to one may be a heart breaking tragedy to another."—London Graphic.

Do You Wish to Avoid the Infirmities of Old Age?

Paine's Celery Compound an Invigorator and Life-Giver for the Old.

Old people seem to grow weaker as the months go by. They are troubled with constipation, flatulence, drowsiness, rheumatism, indigestion and neuralgia. They have had one or more of these troubles for years. Their diseases are truly all of nervous origin.

Its regulating influence on the liver, bowels and kidneys removes the disorders that old people suffer from. Pleased With Her First Experience.

A wife and mother living in St. John, N. B., says: "I shall ever pleasantly remember my first experience with Diamond Dyes. My husband had a Sunday coat that was getting to be a dingy and faded shade of brown. He needed a new one very badly, but could not afford it. After a day or two of very serious consideration, I suggested that the coat might be dyed a good black, and stated that I would undertake the work. I had never dyed anything before; but having heard how easy it was to dye with the Diamond Dyes, I bought a package of Fast Diamond Dye Black for wool and proceeded with the operation. I was quite nervous and fearful lest I would completely spoil the coat, but after following closely the directions for dyeing, I was overjoyed with my victory. I was successful beyond all expectations, and my husband was delighted. The coat when dried, pressed and finished looked like a new one from a tailoring establishment. Thanks for your magnificant dyes."

This is to certify that I have suffered from piles for a long time and tried several articles recommended for this complaint, but none of them benefitted me till I tried Chase's Ointment, which has completely cured me.

"My six-year-old daughter, Bella, was afflicted with eczema for 24 months, the principal seat of eruption being behind her ears. I tried almost every remedy I saw advertised, bought innumerable medicines and soaps, and took the child to medical specialists in skin diseases, but without result. Finally, a week ago, I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and the first application showed the curative effect of the Remedy. We have used only one-sixth of the box, but the change is very marked; the eruption has all disappeared, and I can confidently say my child is cured. (Signed) MAXWELL JOHNSTON.

My Lady's Buttons.

Buttons of to-day can scarcely be called buttons, as they much more resemble elaborate brooches, yet withal buttons they are called. Surely they were more suitable for articles of jewelry last season, yet they are still more beautiful for the coming season. In size they vary from the size and shape of single gems worn in the ears to elaborations of jewels and pearls, mosaic or filigree, the size of a silver dollar, but generally the size is that of a half dollar In such sizes are seen large dome centers of pearl, set round with brilliants, rubies, sapphires, emeralds, etc., or encircled with Oriental filigree. Again, a large brilliant has the center set round with eight pearls the size of a small pea, and again outlined in fine filigree in points of gold, green, blue and various tints. The finest circle of filigree the width of the nail outlines a mosiac the size of a dime. Filigree resembling the spokes of a wheel is seen round a large diamond set, within six rubies and sapphires. Many of these new buttons are square in form with a center stone and the square of filigree or a center stone and square of other stones, the four corners being sapphires of rubies and the others brilliants. Again, the center may be mosaic with a painting of some tiny flower, such as a rose, a heartsease, a violet, or a forget-me-not. Such center paintings also appear in the large-sized round buttons. The flowers, although small, are charmingly realistic. Large metal buttons frequently quite gigantic, sport jeweled centers, and celluloid have gold centers. The coloring of the celluloid is specially good and in great variety. Some of the painted centers are of the size of a quarter. Imitation pearl centers are among the features of the hour Small heart shapes of jewels are outlined with filigree and are charmingly effective, and finely wrought buttons are the size of a dime and are pretty. Large jet and cut steel buttons are still to the fore. Although the buttons are round or square, there is immense variety in these shapes, some presenting almost flat surfaces, others raised at the center or at the edge, or intermediately. The sizes and shapes of the various gems also produce many pleasing varieties of tout ensemble. Jewel buttons, although presenting exact representations of those to be seen in the shops of venders of real gems, are inexpensive in the extreme in comparison with the style and effect.—New York Evening Sun.
