ate" that Bermuda's delegates found the ministers deliquent in receiving them.

He continued: "Bermuda is economically and geographically part of the western hemisphere. I submit the time has arrived when we should approach the Canadian Government and on some basis link up with Canada. I believe that is our place under the crown today. I feel that a sensible step would be to make an official approach to Otaawa. Canada is our proper place."

He said the withdrawal of the naval establishment was indicative of the lack of interest in the colony. British military forces were almost non-existent, he said.

Another member of the delegation to London, Capt. N. B. Dill, said he felt the delegation could have met the Premier and cabinet if it had pressed the point. He added, however, that Britain should not have "turned elsewhere" with its defence intsallations, important to Bermuda's economy.

Sir John Cox, the Speaker, said Bermuda, with a few exceptions, had for many years enjoyed the "most cordial and pleasant relations with the mother country," and he regretted remarks made by some members. He suggested the House should await receipt of the entire facts before expressing dissatisfaction.

Capt. Ross Winter said there was no question of disloyalty to the royal family, but affiliation with Canada would be entirely to Bermuda's advantage, particularly by increasing her value to the sterling area's dollar pool.

Quebec Planning Test System For Auto Drivers

By RICHARD DAIGNAULT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC, Nov. 3 — (CP)—Better read this, Quebec car drivers, this one is for you.

The Quebec Government is preparing a law which will make it compulsory for you eventually to undergo a "psycho-physical test" before you get your driving permit.

This measure is the government's answer to a steadily mounting accident rate in this province where accident insurance is the highest in Canada.

What is this test? What do you have to do and say? Will it mean possible cancellation of your permit?

Under a temporary set up, this is how it goes.

A technician takes you into a test room equipped with seven mechanical devices and a soundproof chamber. He tells you not to feel intimidated and not to feel the governments wants to cancel your permit or prevent you from driving.

All the government wants to do, he says, is help you find out what are your driving handicaps, your limitations, and to show you a few things about driving which you may not know.

Your first hurdle is the eye test This is the old-fashioned test. You sit down and read off letter charts.

You move on to a machine designed to test your ability to judge distances It works this way: Three plastic autos are placed side by side on an imaginary highway. The middle car is fixed.

The technician moves the autos to the left and right of the middle car and your job is to put them back side by side. To do this you look through a viewer, which makes the autos appear hundreds of feet away, and you move the autos by turning knobs.

It's probably the toughest test of all and is designed chiefly to impress the applicant with the fact that judging distances is difficult unless eyes are perfect.

Next test checks your reflexes to situations requiring prompt action.

How far can you see at night when auto lights are glaring at you? How far can you see on a dark country road? A mechanical device checks this.

Another machine tests the angle of your vision. Some persons cannot see an object coming at them from right or left.

Your hearing ability is checked in a sound-proof room. Tones of varying volume and pitch are relayed to you through headphones and you indicate by pressing a button when you hear them.

The "steadiness" test consists of slowly bringing down a metal rod in the middle of a narrow slit in a metal plate, without touching either side of the split.

Your last test is taking out a bureau inspector for a drive.

Results of these tests, plus your answers to a long questionnaire. will give you, and the license bureau, a good idea of how fit you are to drive, physically and psychologically.

The government has not yet framed its final draft of the law and some of the tests described above may not be applied generally.

Government spokesmen said the new law will get this test program underway and at first it will be limited to the larger centres and to certain categories of applicants.

However, eventually, the tests will be applied through the province to all applicants.

Rotarians Addressed By Rev. Mr. McLean

Rev. A. Frank MacLean, B.A., of Trinity United Church was guest speaker at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of the Rotary Club, held at the Charlottetown Hotel yesterday. He spoke on "the place of the clergy among the professions", and traced down through the centuries how historically man's approach to God has been to tell Him what we wanted done. "Scores of countries have come and gone and we are just beginning to see that we cannot just address the Almighty in our words, expressing our own desires.

"There are two different personality groups, the optimistic, aggressive go-getter who lives outside himself and the moody, pessimistic melancoly one who lives within himself. The optimistic is great on pace, but not so good on direction. The introvert is a thinker and ponders endlessly. We need both, where are we going to find the blend of these two?

"An engineer, a technician, any highly trained man who knows how to do things can name his own salary. Think of the production of fertilizer which can be made from the same chenicals as are used for the making of gas for warfare. Which is it going to be? Scientists have not answered it. The spirit shall determine how it is to be used. Education itself does not answer our need, no one knows better than our educators our failings and faults.

"We must get out of ourselves for the sake of the Kingdom. Evil is not something just negative, it is positive in itself. A stone in itself is just a stone, but a stone thrown is positive, causing damage and wreckage. Just as a troup of slack wire artists must keep their eyes on a spot at the end of the line, so must men keep their eyes on the focal point. God was manifested in the flesh in human form, he is our focal point and we have taken our eyes off Him. If He is held up. He will draw all men unto Him. Direction, confidence and assurance will not be wanting. Personal power will be forthcoming and we can ride on to the end without crashing," Mr. MacLean concluded.

The speaker, who had been introduced by the chairman, Dr. J. A. Clark, was thanked by the co-chairman, Rotarian George Thompson.

Visiting Rotarians and guests were Mr. Reagh Tinney, Summerside, Jack Lockerby, Rochelle Park, N.J., Harold Gordon, New York, Rev. Walter Cotton, Mirfield, Eng., Rev. Wallace MacPherson, Murray Harbour and Rev. J T. Irwin, city.

Fine Vocal Performance By Miss Moudry

The Community Concert series opened last evening in the auditorium of the Prince of Wales College with a large audience in attendance to hear Miss Janice Moudry, mezzo-soprano (above) who in the past few years has risen rapidly in the field of Music.

Still quite young, Miss Moudry made her New York debut at the Town Hall just over a year ago, and at that time was likened to a young Flagstad. Previous to her New York appearance she had appeared with a number of symphonies, and is constantly in demand as soloist with orchestra.

She opened her program last evening with a group of four well-known old favourites, singing them with an unaffected charm and ready smile which quickly placed her listeners at ease and won their hearts. Throughout the widely varied and taxing program she displayed this charm and love of her music, getting her personality across the footlights with an ease which would be envied by many a far more experienced artist.

Outstanding in the program was the aria, "O don fatale," from Verdi's "Don Carlo" which was rich in expression and feeling, and brought out the singer's beautifully rich and resonant lower tones. As an encore to this aria Miss Moudry offered the exquisitely simple folk song, "Go Way From My Window", as arranged by Miles.

Other Features

Another high spot in the program was reached in the singing of Bizet's rousing "Spanish Serenade" which was offered with a vivacity and fire completely in accordance with the selection.

Opening the program with "The Old Oaken Bucket", "Flow Gently, Sweet Afton", "Beautiful Dreamer", and "Danny Boy", Miss Moudry then continued with two numbers by Schubert and three by Brahms. These were "An die Musik", and "Die Forelle", and "Von Ewiger Liebe", "Wiegenlied" and "Meine Liebe ist Grun'.

Another aria, "Amour, viens aider" from "Samson et Dalila" was Miss Moudry's first selection in the second half of her program, followed by the seventeenth century "Al Amor" and "Del cabello mas sutil" by Obradors, and concluding with the Spanish Gypsy song, "El Mercado de las Esclavas" by Sandoval.

In her last group she included the ever beautiful "Think On Me", by Scott, "Bird's Courting Song" arranged by Hughes, and McDonald's "Daybreak".

In response to loud and lengthy applause, Miss Moudry was very generous with encores and included "Songs My Mother Taught Me" "Loch Lomond", "The Cambric Shirt", and "If I Could Reveal In My Singing."

Piano Solos

The very able and accomplished accompaniment for the soloist was supplied at the grand by Mr. Eugene Rankin who appeared in an all too brief group of piano selections following the intermission.

For his first selection Mr. Rankin played the flowing "Reflections in the Water" by Debussy, followed by the rhythmic "Toccata" by Poulenc. In response to continued applause he returned to the stage with Chopin's "Nocturne in D flat"

Future concerts at the College will be greatly enhanced by the changes in the stage which were viewed last evening for the first time. New footlights have been installed and the dark rose curtains open to display brown velvet wingdrapes and mushroom hued back drapes making a color scheme which is most attractive.

Aitken Exhibit

The grand championship winning exhibit of dark red Pontiac potatoes was a sample of the 20-acre field of this variety which the Aitken's grew for the first time this year, having imported the certified seed from North Dakota. However the Aitken's have grown the light red Pontiac variety for three years. They also grew 10 acres of Irish Comblers this year.

Accompanied by Mrs. Aitken and their 15-year-old son, Everett Mr. Aitken visited the Winter Fair at the weekend where he received the congratulations of several neighbors at least two of whom were former potato kings.

Unfortunately, his 84-year-old father was too busy with the fall work to come to the fair this year and share in the honor.

John Aitken is the third generation on the family farm while his son intends to carry on the family tradition of growing the Island's most noted field crop.

Potato growing runs strongly in this family for Mrs. Aitken's father, James Coffin of Rollo Bay, won the potato championship of P.E.I. at the recent provincial potato show in Charlottetown.

The Aitken's follow a three-year rotation of crops, hay-potatoes-oats, plowing down the second crop of clover in the fall for the potato crop the following year. They apply one ton of 5-10-10-1 fertilizer per acre putting it in the row with a two-row planter along with the sets. The usual spraying program is followed for diseases and insects during the growing season with a top-killer spray applied about two weeks before digging.
