IDA BAILEY ALLEN Air-Condition Apples And They'll Stay Fresh

"The recent discovery that apples can be kept at the peak of perfection until late spring is wonderful," the Chef observed. "I understood it is done by storing them in air-conditioned cold storage. At the proper temperature, apples keep young, full of their natural vim and vigor for months."

"The air-conditioned apples the youngsters ate at the New Jersey school we visited, Chef, certainly looked as though they had just been harvested."

"I was delighted to see the youngsters enjoying them as lunch-come dessert, for there is nothing better to help deter tooth decay than to eat an apple at the end of a meal. It is a natural cleanser of both teeth and gums."

GOOD FOR ADULTS
"To enjoy apples at the close of a meal would be good for adults also, Madame, but a few older persons may find them difficult to digest."

"If necessary, the apples can be peeled and grated. Chef, and eaten with a spoon. All the beneficial qualities are retained. And, by the way, those on reducing diets get along much more comfortably when they have an apple snack each mid-morning and afternoon."

MONDAY DINNER
Soinach cream soup, chopped beef - mushroom bake flaky brown rice, hot whole canned tomatoes, celery - lettuce slaw.

table was centered with a two-tier wedding cake topped by a miniature bride and groom. The toast to the bride was proposed by the best man and responded to by the groom.

Following the reception, the bride and groom left by plane on a honeymoon trip to New Brunswick. For travelling the bride wore a green wool dress and short fur jacket with beige accessories. Her corsage was of yellow roses.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was entertained at several showers where she received many lovely gifts.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Visits Are Cut Short When Storm Threatens

"We can't trust March weather" one stopping by yesterday to visit with us, offered, a flurry of snow against a hillside turning his thoughts suddenly toward home. "And" he smiled "it's no easier to make home in a storm by car than it was when we travelled by horse and sleigh. As a matter of fact it doesn't take much snowfall to stop a car."

"Well" James commented "there's something I won't do: anyone to linger when a snowstorm threatens. Even a few minutes start sometimes makes all the difference between easy and difficult travel."

"This time of year too" our visitor said rising and picking up his hat "I've seen blizzards develop out of only light snowfall. Just let a wind rise" he nodded.

"Aye" James agreed. He chuckled. "I'm always advising the youngsters—if away from home, either to get on the way at the first sign of bad weather, or else remain where they are until it has all blown over. But, shucks young folks these times don't seem to pay much heed to the weather!"

"They haven't seen as many storms as we have" the other smiled. "I mind one afternoon—oh, it's years ago now" James said rising from the old armchair "we were hauling potatoes up to the siding, a number of teams in the company. The sun was shining when we set out, but by the time we had our loads delivered to the car a blizzard was blowing. I never was out in a worse storm. If the horses hadn't been hardened to the work then, it is doubtful whether or not we would have reached home. There was little visibility, and in gusty spells it was actually smothering. As it was, we might have been lost in our own field if the mare ahead hadn't kept to the trail. One experience like that makes a fellow learn to take stock of his weather!"

"It's not too pleasant either to be abroad in a car" our visitor commented. "I've had occasion to be out in snowfall a time or two when the wiper couldn't manage to keep the wind-shield clear and I had to drive watching the road from the open window."

"Now Ellen" James says through a yawn as he moves to the back stairway "you wind the clock and we'll call this a day!" "Until tomorrow—Diary—Good night."

No storm. Only the odd wandering flurry. And this morning we were back to our workaday round. "There aren't many foxes in the neighborhood now, I'd say—no like in other years the younger farmer said returning from an excursion of hauling by field with a trophy of the chase—his first of the year, a sleek red weasel." And it's good to get rid of them. Once the ewes go on pasture, there's always the worry of losing lambs to them."
