Cook Is King In Arctic Weather Observation Station

By ARCH MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ISACHSEN, N.W.T. (CP)—The cook is king in this tiny outpost on the lip of the Arctic ocean. The work is cool but profitable.

Isachsen is a satellite weather station, one of five operated jointly by the Canadian and United States governments in the Arctic Islands.

Its eight-man staff—half Canadian with a Canadian in charge—feeds weather observations daily by radio to Resolute Bay, 315 miles to the southwest and 1,780 miles north of Winnipeg.

WIDE DISTRIBUTION

That information, plus that from such northern points as Cambridge Bay, Frobisher Bay, Yellowknife and more remote stations, is passed on to Canada and the United States and many other countries including Russia.

Isachsen consists of about seven main prefabricated structures. Its busiest event of the year is the annual resupply airlift which has been conducted by 436 transport squadron from Toronto. More than 1,000,000 pounds of materials to last the next 12 months have been toted to four satellites.

Bob Frank of Bridgewater, N.S., in his 20s like many of the satellite personnel, is the man in charge. He explained some of the events in the daily rounds while a stiff breeze intensified a 0-degree - below - zero temperature outside the cosy kitchen-living room to the point where 15 minutes in the open was hard to take.

Staff is broken down into four upper air men, two radio operators, cook and mechanic and shifts operate 12 hours.

The Canadians are assigned for two years, mostly on a contract basis which provides about $7,000 gross annually. That's the attraction for most men, particularly married ones, although some like the life.

BUSY WITH CHORES

A host of housekeeping chores are required to keep alive in a country where working efficiency is curtailed by the cold and the bulky clothes it dictates. An air strip must be kept open in winter by tractors which run 24 hours a day to avoid starting trouble.

Hydrogen or helium weather balloons released twice daily radio back information on temperature, humidity, pressure and winds at a height as far as 12 miles. Surface records are kept.

Isachsen receives about one inch of rain during the summer and a scant eight inches of snow annually, but winds pile up drifts against any obstruction.

Red-bearded Clarence Swasey of Minneapolis, a gaunt, drawling cook, serves up both sustenance and recreation in the form of food. Weather office officials say flatly the cook is the important man on the satellite.

Mr. Swasey gets supplies in the spring, some in a smaller fall airlift and from a Christmas drop. He has fresh fruit and vegetables four months a year, fresh meat kept in a permafrost frigidaire all the year round, fresh butter varieties of canned foods and jams and sauces.

JUST LIKE HOME

He serves steaks, roasts, chicken, ham and bacon, homemade bread and ice-cream, apple pie and steaming coffee by the big potful for chilled workers.

Each station receives mail periodically, has a hi-fi set with records, a library and an opportunity to chat periodically via ham radio with the folks back home.

There is no beer or liquor kept on the satellite although it isn't banned. The men sleep in small, separate cubicles.

Canadians with Mr. Frank include Dave Wright of Toronto, who will relieve him shortly, Doug Christian, Toronto and Ken MacTaggart, Vancouver, Frank Pender, radio ham, is from Dublin.

Arctic weather men say that Russia has at least as many polar weather stations—and has had for some time—as Canada has in its most populated regions.

Isachsen was built in 1947 when the joint Canadian-U.S. system was started in the eastern Arctic. By next year a new camp is scheduled for the same site.

IN MEMORIAM

DANIEL N. TAYLOR

The death occurred in the Prince Edward Island Hospital on the night of February 5th, 1957 of Daniel N. Taylor in his seventy-ninth year.

For some time he had not been enjoying his usual good health, and four days previous to his passing on the advice of his personal physician, he entered the hospital for observation. However it was not thought his condition was serious, so his unexpected death was a great shock, not only to his immediate family, but to his many friends throughout the Province.

He was born at St. Peters Island and in his youth in the days of the sail boat he was a successful fisherman. Later he brought the farm on which he resided and its venture proved equally successful.

He was a man of many interrace horses. He was also a keen sportsman and in his younger days would spend many hours in a "blind" on the bar awaiting a shot. For some years he was fish warden.

He was aman of many interests whether of church or state. When a call came for volunteers for any worthy cause he responded with a joke and a smile.

In 1955 he had the misfortune of having his dwelling house burned. He felt the loss keenly and this may have been a contibuting factor in shorting his days.

He was a valued and loyal member of the New Dominion United Church. For 32 years he held the highest office of a layman—elder, as office which he filled with dignity and honor.

He will be missed but especially in the home, by those near and dear to him and his many kindnesses will ever be remembered. He was a faithful husband, good father, kind friend and neighbour.

He is survived by his widow, (nee Emma Gorvett) who was his helpmate for 53 years, three sons Lauriner E., Providence R. I., Lee, Nine Mile Creek, Winston on the homestead, also seven grandchildren, Another son, Newton, Rocky Point, was killed in a farm tractor accident in 1954.

The esteem in which he was held was evidenced by the concourse which followed his remains to their last resting place in New Dominion Cemetry. The funeral service was held in the church, where he worshipped and was conducted by his pastor, Rev. R. A. Patterson, assisted by Rev. Donald Nicholson who spoke feelingly of the deceased and comforting words to the bereaved.

The hymns were—"The Lords My Shepherd" and "Abide With Me". The Pallbearers were Messrs Bruce MacLean, Hector Campbell, Wilbert Currie, Norman MacDonald, William MacEachern and Ray Taylor.

The silent tokens of sympathy were many and beautiful a tribute to the memory of the deceased.
