Says Program Gets Pushed To Boost Personal Image

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Vice-Marshal Max Hendrick, who retired last year, said recently that Defence Minister Paul Hellyer's move to integrate the armed forces "is being pushed through to enhance Mr. Hellyer's personal image and for no other reason."

The reduction of armed services personnel has been far greater than predicted with no corresponding reduction of costs, he said in an interview.

The former officer commanding the Air Defence Command said several senior officers have hesitated to speak out publicly for fear of being classed as "sort of a Col. Blimp—out of touch and against change."

"I think it's time the public knew that the feeling is not confined to one service," he said, referring to the recent outburst of criticism by senior Royal Canadian Navy officers.

"It was proposed to cut the forces by 10,000 men and save $1,000,000. Well, we've since lost 17,000 men and the last two budgets show no sign of saving. So where's the economy?"

No one could argue against the original plan—integration of headquarters, reduction of brass — but a single fighting force was ridiculous.

TERMED IMPOSSIBLE

Air Marshal Clare Annis, closely involved in the preliminservices until his retirement two months ago, said the defence minister has set himself an impossible task.

"It seems that having struck an attitude, he (Mr. Hellyer) now finds himself frozen in it," the former chief of technical services said on a separate interview.

"Integration cannot be achieved in 12 to 14 months as predicted by the defence minister, he said. It could be done in four to five years.

The retired air force officer said he personally is in favor of integration, but important questions such as training and promotion must first be worked out.

"This is the great uncertainty. Nobody knows where he is going or how fast, or, in general, what his personal prospects are."

Air Marshal Annis said he tried to impress his viewpoint on the defence minister, but was a victim of frustration and retired May 28 at the age of 54.

African Leaders Dream Of Unified Black Army

By DENNIS LEE ROYLE

JOHANNESBURG (AP)—African leaders dream of the day when a unified black army marches against the white south, wiping out the governments of Rhodesia, Angola and Mozambique, and finally coming to grips with the most hated of all white spots, South Africa.

It's now only a pipe-dream and likely to remain so for many years to come.

African leaders are beginning to discover the blunt fact that untrained, undisciplined armies of the black north are no match against the white south.

But the whites realize that one day, maybe in 20 years, these squabbling black nations may put aside their personal differences and combine against the common enemy. And the whites are busily arming themselves with a wary eye to the future.

As a succession of army coups topples the governments of The Congo, Ghana and Nigeria, and tribal strife ravages central and eastern Africa, the four white-ruled states of southern Africa draw into closer union behind a wall of armor.

FLANKS PROTECTED

Geographically, South Africa is well buffered from any direct black military threat. She is protected on her flanks by the Portuguese possessions of Angola and Mozambique, and in central Africa by white-ruled Rhodesia, riding out a war of sanctions and threats of armed intervention.

By far the most heavily defended territory south of the Sahara, South Africa publicly displayed her military might during the republic's fifth anniversary.

More than 18,000 precision-trained white troops, backed by heavy armor, jet fighters, bombers and artillery, sounded a warning to any would-be liberation army intent on crushing the white man's domain in southern Africa.

"We will rise as one man to deter any enemy who dares intrude into this bastion of the south," said Defence Chief Commandant Gen. R. C. Hiemstra.

To ensure the survival of South Africa's 3,500,000 whites and deter African extremist threats to one day liberate this country's 12,000,000 blacks is costing the republic plenty.

Budget estimates on defence alone since 1961 total over £400,000,000 ($1,120,000,000).

STRENGTHEN DEFENCE

Angola and Mozambique deploy more than 8,000 troops, staving off sporadic attacks by African freedom fighters, and the tough, British-trained Rhodesian army of nearly 5,000 men patrols the border with black-ruled Zambia. And South Africa is wasting no time strengthening her defences.

"South Africa belongs to the white man and will resist with all its might any attempt at aggression," said Prime Minstier Hendrik Verwoerd. "To those who cannot accept South Africa as it is but seek to change it into something new, or regard only a black or multi-racial country as acceptable, I have nothing to say. I have no patience with them."

Most white South Africans, inextricably involved in this country's complex racial problem, see the republic's massive military build-up as the only sure safeguard for the continuance of white supremacy.

Some view the country's long-term future with uncertainty. They fear the day when the black continent finds unity of purpose and thought and the necessary resources to build a black army.

There are whites in southern Africa who believe that someday the troubled, unsettled African states may become stabilized, that today's fiery black politicians may be replaced by shrewder, saner-thinking men.

Some fear the growing number of black military leaders, trained in Western or Communist countries and well-qualified in modern warfare.

For these whites in southern Africa, the decades ahead are filled with uncertainty and for some fear—fear that southern Africa's small white minority can do little to stem the turbulent tide of Africa's black mass.

British Aircraft Has Emergency

GANDER, Nfld. (CP) — A British Eagle airways turboprop aircraft made an emergency landing here Monday night, shortly after taking off for the United Kingdom, when a hydraulic system failed.

The four-engine Bristol Britannia, carrying 71 persons including the crew, coasted to a safe stop 35 minutes after it took off following refuelling on a flight to Manchester from Toronto.

The pilot noticed shortly after takeoff at 7:10 p.m. NDT, that the aircraft's landing gear remained down.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y - D L B A A X B
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Opening lead — king of diamonds.

The problem of entries is critical in many deals, and declarer must frequently exercise maximum care to maintain communication between his own hand and dummy.

Take this case, where South is in five clubs. He wins the diamond lead with the ace and plays the king of clubs. West takes the club with the ace, cashes the queen of diamonds, and continues with the jack.

South is of course careful to ruff with the eight of trumps, not the four, because his only certain entry to dummy lies in clubs. He then cashes the queen of clubs and crosses to dummy by playing the four to the six.

Now that South is in dummy he must be extremely careful of what he does next if he is to make the contract. He must try to arrange successful finesses in both spades and hearts in the course of his visit to dummy.

Obviously, he cannot take the heart finesse first, because he would wind up in the wrong hand even if the finesse succeeded. He therefore takes the spade finesse first.

But in doing so he must be sure to lead the queen of spades from dummy, not the nine or ten. If East makes the best defensive play of ducking the queen, South plays his jack on it. South then continues with the ten, playing low if East plays low, and is then in a position to abandon the suit and take a heart finesse, which luckily succeeds.

Note that if East covers the queen or ten of spades when they are led, South is able to return to dummy with a spade and then attempt the heart finesse. In effect, even though South has only one entry to dummy, he is able to arrange his play so that he can, if necessary, lead three times from dummy.
