Witness Claims Got $1,800 For Acting In Rivard Case

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Guy Masson has testified that he got $1,000 before coming to Ottawa more than a year ago to see Raymond Denis about bail for Lucien Rivard and another $800 to $1,000 after he arrived here.

The burly, 36-year-old Montreal business agent was giving evidence at Denis' preliminary hearing on two charges in connection with the case of Rivard, who has since been convicted in the United States as a key figure in a continental narcotics smuggling ring.

He testified that before coming here June 22, 1964, to see Denis he received $1,000 from Robert Gignac in Montreal. He added that Gignac dropped an envelope containing another $800 to $1,000 on his motel room bureau here after Masson conferred with Denis.

Denis, frmer executive assistant to the federal immigration ministr, is charged with having offered a sum of money to Montreal lawyer Perre Lamontagne to have Mr. Lamontagne drop opposition to bail for Rivard.

He also is charged with wilfully trying to obstruct justice by attempting to dissuade Mr. Lamontagne from opposing bail. Mr. Lamontagne was lawyer for U.S. authorities in legal steps to extradite Rivard to face narcotics charges in Texas.

SEEKS PROTECTION

Mr. Masson gave his testimony under protection of the Canada Evidence Act. This means he cannot be prosecuted on the basis of it except for perjury.

He said that he met Denis in the Fontain - Bleue Motel in neighboring Hull, Que., and informed him "of the possibility of $50,000 to $60,000 for the Liberal treasury should anything be done for Rivard."

He had been told about this possibility en route here by Gignac, scheduled to testify later. Gignac is free on $25,000 bail on a charge of capital murder and faces five perjury charges arising from his appearances earlier this year before the inquiry into the Rivard affair conductd by Chief Justice Frederic Dorion of the Quebec Superior Court.

Mr. Masson said that on the day after meeting Denis he called "Senator Gelinas" to get an appointment to discuss the Rivard affair, intending to tell the senator about money being available for the Liberal party. Senator Gelinas refused to give him an appointment.

He had advised Denis of this, said Mr. Maasson, and Denis told him "he would see about it."

However, he had never got an appointment.

MET MRS. RIVARD

Mr. Masson said that before coming to see Denis, he met Mrs. Marie Rivard and Eddie Lechasseur at Gignac's office. The $1,000 he received was to compensate him for giving up his holidays and for expenses incurred in coming to Ottawa to see Denis about the Rivard case.

He said he asked Denis to find out three things—details of the charges against Rivard, Rivard's chances of bail and Rivard's chances of being extradited.

Denis had told him extradition was not a matter for the immigration department, that it came under he justice department, that he didn't know about the Rivard case and that he would find out about it.

At a later date Denis told him at another meeting here that the Rivard case was serious and hat in narcotics cases it was not usual to grant bail, Mr. Masson continued.

"That answered most of the three questions," Mr. Masson said. Denis had also told him that he had never heard of a justice minister not signing extradition papers once a judge had granted the application.

The hearing continues.

Two Montreal Men Appear In Same Manslaugher Case

MONTREAL (CP)—Two similar-looking men in their 40s appeared in different Montreal courts charged with the same manslaughter Friday. One was released the other pleaded not guilty.

Both had been found criminally responsible by the same coroner's jury—one two weeks ago, and one Thursday. The first verdict was, the coroner said at the second inquest, "an error . . . and we admit it."

Released by Judge John O'Meara when the Crown withdrew the charge was Bernard Chartier, 45, an insurance man. Pleading not guilty at arraignment was Jean-Paul Lariviere, 49, a jeweler. Judge Armand Cloutier granted him $2,000 bail.

The death in question was that of Wilfrid Dumont, like the two other men a resident of the Montreal suburb of St. Lambert. He died in hospital last July after being punched, while he sat in his car, by another driver who said he wasn't keeping to the right.

The second coroner's inquest consisted of the reading of a document by one witness, a policeman.

Coroner Laurent Lapointe banned the publication of the document's contents, but they were sufficient to persuade the jury that they had held the wrong man criminally responsible the first time, and to switch the verdict to Lariviere.

"Justice like everything else is better late than never," said Mr. Lapointe.

Following Mr. Cloutier's liberation Friday, his lawyer said the case was an example of the dangers of carelessness in law enforcement.

"My client always wore glasses," said lawyer Laurent Corriveau. "Yet in the police lineup he was presented without them."

Security Men Seen As Sign Things Not Right In Canada

VANCOUVER (CP) — Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson said here the need for security men with national party leaders is further proof that "things are not right in Canada."

He said that the need is a "sad commentary on the state of democracy" in Canada.

In a speech before about 300 delegates at the annual convention of the B.C. Social Credit League, Mr. Thompson commented on orders that RCMP plain - clothesmen be present when national leaders are speaking in B.C.

The orders were issued Thursday by Attorney-General Robert Bonner following a telephone threat in Ontario against Prime Minister Pearson's life.

Mr. Thompson said he had received no threats and does not think that Social Crediters need protection.

The threats against other leaders may have been from crackpots, he said. But they could have been caused by the fact that crime and espionage have not been dealt with properly in Canada.

He repeated past demands for a thorough investigation of the inroads of international crime syndicates in Canada. He mentioned the case of Hal Banks, arson and bankruptcy investigations in Quebec, the Lucien Rivard affair, and said "people can be forgiven for wondering what is coming up next."

He questioned why the RCMP had not been given authority to publish reports on the state of the nation as their American counter-parts are permitted to do. The RCMP had been brought into disrepute because they could not fulfil their responsibility to the public.

UN Demands Use Of Force In Rhodesia

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United Nations General Assembly, over British objections, has voted overwhelmingly for a demand that Britain use military force if necessary to assure complete political freedom in Rhodesia.

By 82 to 9, with 18 abstentions, it approved its second resolution in three weeks aimed at blocking seizure of independence by Prime Minister Ian Smith's white-minority government.

Britain's minister of state for foreign affairs, Lord Caradon, declared Britain could not conceivably accept the assembly's demand for use of force. Such an action could only introduce "discord and disagreement" at a moment of extreme danger in the self-governing British colony in Central Africa.

The United States supported Britain, although U.S. delegate Mrs Eugenie M. Anderson affirmed her country's support of freedom, justice and self-determination for all Rhodesians.

An American team consisting of George Rapee, John R. Crawford, Sam Stayman, Howard Schenken, and this writer traveled to Naples in 1951 to play the Italian team for the world championship.

The United States team won the match by 10,000 points.

The European Bridge Review had assigned several reporters to cover the event. Frederico Rosa, of Italy, wrote a lengthy and interesting account, a portioon of which is presented here with all its continental falvor retained. It features a hand where the American team gained 720 points.

Said Rosa: "I witnessed many mistakes by the Americans during the tournament. On many boards they pressed the bidding level beyond the possible. They were apt to overrate thir technique, hoping for miracles in the play. But I must state that I have been unable to find a single board among the 320 where their defensive play was not exact, not to say perfect. This is an example of beautiful defense:

"At both tables South played in four hearts. Stayman had no difficulty in making his contract after Forquet had led the seven of diamonds. At the other table, however, Becker (West) led a trump and started a fine defensive play.

"Franco won the opening lead in the closed hand and led a spade to dummy's jack. A low spade to the queen in the closed hand was taken by the ace and a trump returned. Franco again won in the closed hand and led a club to dummy's ace.

"South's club loser disappeared on the king of spades and a low diamond was led from dummy. Crawford cooly played low and it is not to be surprised that Franco contented himself with the eight. Many of us would have done the same. This trick of Crawford's enabled West to make the nine and since Becker had a trump to lead, declarer had to lose two more tricks in diamonds.

"Franco should not be blamed for not putting up the queen of diamonds but the Americans are worth all the praise for their skillful and audacious defense."

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
