U.S. Companies Sell Computers Behind Curtain
NEW YORK (AP)—Two U.S. companies have been selling computers behind the Iron Curtain.

They are the Univac Division of Sperry Rand Corp. and National Cash Register Co.

Exports of computers from the United States are tightly regulated by the U.S. commerce department's office of export control, which has issued separate licences for each computer sold.

The computers sold by the U.S. firms have been standard, business-type machines.
