Egyptian War Notes.

there are enough and to spare. One of the correspondents of the Daily Telegraph has already been convicted of gross lying with respect to acts of insubordination, robbery, and violence among our men, and it is feared that he has not sent home true accounts as to our operations here. He has received a caution from both Admiral Seymour and General Alison, that he cannot do better. It is said he has been sending despatches to and receiving them from Arabi Pasha, not, of course, in such a way as to betray any of our plans to him, but simply for the purpose of gaining information for home use. This has been sternly forbidden.

A SHELL.
An unexploded shell weighing seven hundred pounds is not the kind of parlor ornament that any ordinary person would be likely to desire, and this seems to have been the opinion of a gentleman of Alexandria, who, after the bombardment, wrote a note to Admiral Seymour stating that a shell belonging to the inflexible was in the drawing-room of his house and requesting its removal. The captain of the inflexible found that the shell had not exploded and he instructed half a dozen seamen to remove it. The seamen placed the shell in a feather bed, rolled it down stairs and conveyed it back to the ship.

THE MOLES AT PORT SAID.
The northern harbor of the Suez Canal is formed by two mighty artificial moles or dums reaching 5,130 and 700 feet into the blue waters of the historic Mediterranean Sea. These moles are made from the "rocks of the desert," mixed with quicksand and lime, and after being cut into blocks of thirty-two cubic feet dimensions and dried, were sunk to their places. A peculiarity of these moles is that they act like a sieve through which the waters can penetrate, yet at the same time the power of the surging waves is broken upon them. The current of the sea flowing from the mouths of the river Nile in an easterly direction along the Egyptian coast, and carrying the ejected studs and mud of the aforesaid against the west end of the moles at Port Said, was the means of forming what now is known as Quai Eugene. Facing this quay, northward, are long rows of houses—Port Said. The lighthouse is at the mouth of the Suez Canal.

FACE TO FACE IN THE CAMPS.
Face to face are the armies of the Egyptians and the British, and an action is pending. The Egyptians, should they be defeated, have Cairo and the Libyan Desert to fly to; the British, with Alexandria at their backs—and an Alexandria, moreover, which is covered by the guns of one of the strongest fleets that ever went forth to do battle with an antagonist—have a tolerably secure place of retreat in the event of any disaster befalling their arms. The routine of the British soldier's life in the time of warfare is similar to that of the American. In the morning he must fall into the ranks at bugle call, and answer to his name; later he has to take his turn at guard or picket duty; he may have to fall into a patrolling party or take part in a reconnaissance; then, when he has nothing more to do, he may lounge about among the tents, smoking his clay pipe or chatting with a comrade. The scene differs strangely in the camp of the Egyptians. There the majority of the soldiers are dressed in a mongrel European fashion, with the tarboosh or fez as the most conspicuous national characteristic of their uniform; but there is a minority whose picturesque costumes are distinctly Oriental. The Bedouin, with his gaudily coloured kerchief wrapped about his head, leaving ends that float upon his shoulders, his long white, mantle-like garments, and his sandalled feet; the Soudanese, with white turbans, flowing raiment, and baggy trousers; the Abyssinian adventurer, who dresses as he pleases, much as his brother the Nubian does—all form a singular contrast with the quietly uniformed soldiers of the "regular" force. On the eve of battle these soldiers show a different scene in camp from that which their antagonists present. Sitting cross-legged in front of their tents, which are but pieces of thin canvas stretched on cross-sticks, and are so low that their occupants have to enter them by crawling, they assemble in groups and pass around the chibouque or marghibeh, the bubbling sound of which as the smoke passes through the water is almost the only sound that is heard except the neighing or the stamping of horses that are picketed by the heels behind the camp's regular lines.

On the night previous to the unfortunate boating accident, whereby constable McGhee lost his life, he dreamed that he and his wife were out boating on the Little Lake, N. B. He felt uneasy as to their safety, and before they had been long on the water the boat capsized and the occupants were precipitated into the stream. This is, indeed, an actual verification of a dream that alas prove too true.

Mill View Notes.

Mill View is a pretty little village, distant from Charlottetown about 12 miles, and received its name about sixty years ago on account of the Grist and Carding Mills erected there by J. R. Bourke, Esq., Sr. The Carding Mill is still kept running day and night by Peter Bourke, Esq., and where the Grist Mill once stood, the new Cheese Factory, owned by the Mill View Creamery Co., and superintended by Mr. Wire, now rears its form, as an immediate result of Sir John's glorious N. P.

At a short distance from the Mill and Cheese Factory, stands the Village Smithy, where Mr. Donald McEachern fulfils the Scriptural injunction and "earns his bread by the sweat of his face." Mr. McEachern, for workmanship, may be classed A 1 at Lloyds, as is shown by the liberal patronage he receives from the public. Not far from here may be seen the handsome new residence of Edward Grant, Esq., J. P., which is quite an ornament to the village.

At the corner, where the Vernon River and Georgetown roads meet, Mr. J. R. Bourke, Jr., of the Charlottetown City Hardware Store, has just erected a fine commodious building, in which he intends to carry on a general dry goods and grocery business, and in a short time will have it filled with everything needful to supply the wants of the farmer. The numerous customers who patronize him in the old stand will receive the utmost satisfaction from the hands of Mr. W. G. McDonald, the obliging manager. Mr. Bourke is a young man who is well known and highly respected, and we wish him much success. In connection with the above building, we may add that the painting done in the interior was executed by Mr. Cephas Ross, of Vernon River, whose reputation as an artist is now widespread. Mr. Ross is a first-class workman, the many houses in this section of the country, which have been beautified by the touch of his brush, bearing sufficient evidence of his popularity.

About four hundred yards from Mr. Bourke's new store is the factory of Mr. A. C. Smith & Son, carriage builders. This firm have the reputation of turning out carriages (including single and double-seated wagons and buggies) which are second to none on P. E. Island, either for style or durability. The other morning the writer saw a Charlottetown gentleman purchase and take from Mr. Smith's carriage shop a buggy, which cost him $340. This alone speaks volumes for Mr. Smith. Any person in want of a good-looking, substantial carriage should call at his shop and give their orders.

A Yankee manufacturer and vendor of quack medicines recently wrote to a friend for the recommendation of his, the manufacturer's, "balsam." In a few days he received the following, which we call pretty strong: "Dear Sir—The land composing this farm has hitherto been so poor that a Chinaman could not get a living off it, and so stony that we had to slice our potatoes and plant them sideways; but hearing of your balsam, I put some on the corner of a ten-acre field surrounded by a rail fence, and in the morning I found the stones had entirely disappeared, and a neat wall encircled the field; the rails were split into firewood, and piled up symmetrically in my back yard. I put half an ounce on the middle of a huckleberry swamp; in two days it was cleared off, planted with corn and pumpkins, and a row of peach trees in full blossom through the middle. As an evidence of its tremendous strength, I would say that it drew a striking likeness of my eldest son out of a mill-pond, drew a blister all over his stomach, drew a load of potatoes four miles to market, drew grease out of flint, and eventually drew a prize of ninety-seven dollars in a cabinet lottery, etc.

Sir Charles Beresford, who won distinction at Alexandria, is thus spoken of by an officer who knew him fifteen years ago:—"This young fellow was the wildest, most reckless boy I ever saw in my life. There was nothing he wouldn't do. And with all that he was a splendid sailor. He could show older officers than he was all over the ship. Wild as he was, too, he was always up straight to the mark when on deck, but between decks—well there was nothing to hot for him. If there was ever a dangerous place to get into Beresford was there first."

The number of immigrants that arrived in Ontario during the first six months of the present year was 55,208, against 41,364 in the corresponding period last year, and the number remaining in Canada was 18,386 against 13,447 in 1881, an increase of nearly five thousand. Last year only 1,115 of those entering the Province proceeded to Manitoba, while this year the number swelled to 5,904.

London World.—"Actors, till quite lately, have mixed in general society less freely than authors, and have felt more keenly, in proportion as their consciousness of triumph follows more quickly upon the execution of their work; than in the case of most artists; the application of the critic's tongue."

The Chinese laundrymen of Philadelphia have combined to resist prosecution, and have created a fund for expenses, as indicated by the following notice posted on the front of each shop: "Tenn dollars will be paid for the arrest of any fellow that throws dead cats or dogs or bricks into this laundry."

Enjoy all the good things of life, and keep St. Jacob's Oil convenient in case of rheumatism. Such would seem to be the view of Mr. Roberts, business manager of the Milwaukee (Wis.) Scout, who says: "I believe St. Jacob's Oil to be the very best remedy known to mankind."
