New Storm May Bring Up To 10 In. Of Snow

Island highways were filling in rapidly last night as a storm, expected to bring up to 10 inches of snow by this morning, assailed the province. Snow, accompanied by drifting began falling in the eastern end of the province around noon yesterday, and the storm had hit Western Prince by 5 p.m. Charlottetown Radio Range reported north northwest winds of 25 miles per hour at 11:30 p.m. when the temperature stood at 21 degrees. (Continued from page 3) of the new university make arrangements to carry out necessary administrative plans. "Christian life and faith shall be nurtured and encouraged in the classroom and on the campus in the new university. "Staff shall be recruited without regard to race, colour, creed or post-graduate work, and regard only for academic qualifications, teaching ability, record of experience and personal character. "Finally, we are convinced that the continuation and expansion of discussions between individuals of various persuasions on this vital matter of university education will be of basic importance in the attainment of a single university on Prince Edward Island.

The group pointed out that while it is realized that it is impossible to introduce a new single university without the assistance of the present members of the faculties of St. Dunstan's and Prince of Wales yet it is also recognized that the faculty of the new university should become the responsibility of its board of governors rather than be determined by the pattern of the past. It is, therefore suggested that within four years of the formation of the new university, the two pre-existing faculties shall be phased out of their teaching and administrative positions. They then may be re-engaged or non-re-engaged at the discretion of the board of governors of the university, and judged solely by their academic qualifications and teaching ability.

TENETS OUTLINED
In subscribing to the principle that "frank admission and open acceptance of religious differences can create the situation which makes possible the single university of Prince Edward Island," the group said the following tenets:

- "That religion is a proper and logical component of a university education;
- "That religion, as expressed in academic courses and other campus activities, should be present in the university;
- "That recognition be given to denominational and theological differences, and to the fact that it is impossible to separate effective teaching of courses on religion from those differences. We should be able to accept the teaching of religious courses from a particular, or even sectarian, point of view, with as little difficulty as we accept the teaching of philosophy, history or English from particular points of view.
- "That the rights and privileges extended by the university must be the same for all denominations."

Near 100 Attend Scout Banquet

MONTAGUE GUARDIAN OF THE GUARDIAN
Approximately 100 scouts, cubs, leaders and their guests, attended the father and son scout banquet held in the MacKenzie hall, Montague last night. Clergy from all the churches as well as representation from all churches was a feature of the banquet.

The guest speaker, W.S. McMurtry, taking as his theme "What scouting can do for you and sportsmanship and teamwork," used his own case as an example and after a brief introduction to the subject he demonstrated one aspect of scouting and scout training with slides taken by himself and a friend on canoeing trips. The chairman of the group committee, G.A. Wightman, who was chairman of the banquet, in a few brief remarks advised those present that Montague was among the oldest troop of scouts in this province having begun in 1923, and that this was the first father and son scout banquet for many years. He also noted that the Montague scout organization was at its highest peak and a considerable amount of credit must go to Cpl. Douglas Hender who was unable to be present because he was on training course with the RCMP at Ottawa.

The plow dispatcher said plows were remaining on emergency standby, but would begin to battle drifts at 5 a.m. today. Roads were said heavy, although passable, late last night. Among events called off because of the storm were the Kings County Ice Sports scheduled for Souris last night and postponed until tonight.

Other parts of the Maritimes reported similar conditions. About four inches of snow were recorded by 8 p.m. at Moncton and Saint John, where winds were 30 miles per hour gusting to 50. Moncton had winds of 45, and expected about six inches of snow by morning.

S'ide Area Totals Over 11 Inches
SUMMERSIDE — A storm which struck early yesterday afternoon had dumped 2 1/2 inches of snow on this area by 8 o'clock last evening.

Prince County residents had just begun to dig out from a weekend storm which had left 9.1 inches of snow on the ground when the new storm arose. The forecaster at RCAF Summerside predicted continuous snow until 3 o'clock this morning and then a change to snow flurries. Winds were blowing from a northerly direction at 25 miles per hour at 10 o'clock last night but were expected to change to a west northwesterly direction by early morning and increase to 30 gusting to 45. Overnight temperatures of 12 to 14 degrees were anticipated with a high today of between 18 and 20 degrees. Roads were reported all open last night but visibility was said to be poor, especially in the cuttings where the driving was also reported to be heavy. All plows were expected to remain off until at least 6 o'clock this morning unless for an emergency. One dispatcher stated that if winds increase to the force predicted by the RCAF forecaster the plows will remain off highways until they have abated.

The ferry made a late evening trip at 10:31 to clear up accumulated traffic. The Borden train was approximately four hours late last evening due to a delay on the mainland. The train was further held up by the ferry and a mail pickup at Emerald Junction. The final delay was attributed to poor conditions on the line caused by the heavy snowfall.

Roger Schmidt of North Vancouver, a member of the Vancouver mountain rescue team that took a tracking dog into the camp, told Monday how Emil Myllila, 32, a Finnish-born carpenter from Stewart and Winnipeg, was uncovered in his tomb under the snow. A bulldozer was pushing slabs of snow from a strip being used as a helicopter pad. As it pushed snow from the side of the pad

He looked up at the bulldozer operator and blinked his eyes. There were two feet of packed snow covering part of him. Rescuers, including Schmidt, dug him out with their hands.

Li-Col. W. H. V. Mathews, army co-ordinator of the rescue operation, said it was "Spring-hill repeating itself." He was referring to the Springhill, N.S., mine explosion of 1958 when 31 men given up for lost were found alive days later.

He was reported partly frozen and in serious condition. A bachelor from Winnipeg, Myllila was saved by an air pocket in the cold, wet darkness. Doctors said they are amazed Myllila could survive for more than three days. He was weak and emaciated. Parts of his arms and legs were frozen but he had no broken bones.

WRAPPED IN BANDAGES
When he arrived in Ketchikan, his arms were wrapped in bandages. His hands were the color of chalk.

Dr. James Wilson, head of the medical team that examined Myllila, said the man would have to thaw out before a decision could be made on surgery. But he expressed fear several fingers and toes may have to be removed. He said parts of Myllila were frozen solid.

The slim carpenter said he didn't feel anything when the bulldozer came in on him "not even a jolt." He said he slept most of the time and thought he was in a coma.

PCs CRITICAL
(Continued from page 1) nipeg North Centre) said the Canada Pension Plan, now in its fifth or sixth version, had stood up "pretty well to criticisms" made by bodies appearing before the parliamentary committee which studied it during the Christmas recess. "But there are gaps," he added. "Notably, it is doing nothing to improve the position of those on pension. What needs most of all to be done is to round out the package and provide $100 a month for every one at age 65."

SHOULD BE SEPARATE
H. A. Olson (SC—Medicine Hat) said the present old age pension and the new Canada Pension Plan should be kept completely separate. As costs of living and the wealth of the country increase, changes would be needed in the basic pension.

The build-up of pension funds in the contributory plan, to be made available for bond and debenture financing by provincial and municipal governments, would benefit the country by opening the money markets more freely to meet private industry needs.

Sunday, the entombed man was exposed, said Schmidt. He was lying on a piece of shattered plywood.

Humane Society Men To Check On Seal Kill

OTTAWA (CP) — Representatives of humane and conservation societies will be invited to Gulf of St. Lawrence next month under new regulations, it was announced Monday.

Sealing opens in the Gulf area March 8 and representatives of the Ontario Humane Society, the Canadian Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the Canadian Audubon Society will be invited to view operations.

More restrictive regulations were announced by the government last year following complaints of cruelty during the annual seal hunt. The most restrictive method is with clubs. The fisheries department release said "in the opinion of experts the method presently used for killing seals, when properly executed, does not subject the animals to undue pain. However, in some instances it was discovered that a few of those participating in the sealing were either unskilled or somewhat careless in carrying out the operation."

Fisheries department officers will be on the grounds to enforce the new regulations. The new regulations provide for licensing of aircraft, ships and men taking part in the hunt. The number of harp seals to be killed is limited to 50,000 and certain breeding areas where the seals have their pups will be closed to hunting. The use of set lines with hooks for catching seals is prohibited and clubs must meet standards
