Brief Conclave Predicted For Election Of New Pope

By WILLIAM L. RYAN VATICAN CITY (AP)—A brief conclave and a new Italian pope were generally predicted Friday night as 52 members of the college of cardinals prepared for the solemn election ritual. But nobody could claim to have the answer in advance. Talk of breaking the 400-year-old tradition of Italian popes gave rise to fresh rumors about the pre-eminence of Gregory Peter Cardinal Agagianian, patriarch of Cilicia of the Armenians, as the outstanding candidate. But at the same time, other speculation centred about Angelo Cardinal Roncalli, well-liked patriarch of Venice, among several Italian cardinals.

dinals will be led by a master of ceremonies, carrying the papal cross, toward the conclave quarters. The procession will wind slowly into the Sistine Chapel. Their contact with the outside will end. The prefect of ceremonies, Msgr. Enrico Dante, will intone the Latin word "extra omnes." It means all outsiders must leave. OUTSIDERS WARNE The great bell of St. Peter's tolls a warning for all outsiders to leave the conclave area. A group of cardinals must make a thorough search to "assure themselves that no person or spy lurks in hiding." The search over, the cardinal chamberlain, Benedetto Aloisi Masella, locks the doors within, and the marshal of the conclave, Prince Sigismondo Chigi, locks the doors outside. Any attempt to violate the rules will subject a violator to excommunication, the church's most severe punishment. Inside the conclave area, the cardinals may communicate freely among themselves. Most of the first night will be spent in meditation. There is no voting until Sunday morning. The rules call for no more than four ballots daily, two in the morning and two in the afternoon. If two ballots bring no result, black smoke will issue from a chimney of the Sistine Chapel. As soon as two-thirds plus one of the 52 cardinals agree on a new pope, the ballots will be burned alone to produce a white smoke announcing the news to the outside world.

STAY IN SESSION The college of cardinals meets today and will stay in secret session until it names the man who will rule over the world's Roman Catholics.

Before the cardinals are summoned, they assemble Saturday morning in St. Peter's Basilica. Their grey-bearded dean, French-born Eugene Cardinal Tisserant, will celebrate the mass of the holy spirit. Msgr. Antonio Bacci, secretary of briefs to the pope, is expected to give the church an able pastor in the shortest possible time, mindful of any other considerations. At 4 p.m. (noon AT) the car-

The entertainment feature of this meeting was a Symposium prepared by the students of Grade Twelve. These comments were interesting and instructive and provocative of later discussion. A vote of thanks was presented to the students and their teacher.

Reverend Father McLaugh then addressed the meeting. He congratulated those present for the work they were doing and expressed pleasure that a larger number of members had begun to attend the meetings. He also urged the parents to make every effort and sacrifice to keep their children in school until they finish high school.
