

Middle East And Related Problems Hold Spotlight

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A six-car train pulled into the railway station at Port Said Wednesday morning. Aboard were 220 Norwegians, the first of the United Nations emergency force to enter the British-occupied sector of the Suez Canal zone. The UN force was starting its job.

The station was decorated with blue and white bunting, the UN colors. The fair-skinned Norwegians wore blue helmets and UN armbands.

Their reception by the Egyptians was frenzied. A crowd of 10,000 milled about. Agitators shouted "Nasser! Nasser!" and held aloft pictures of the Egyptian dictator.

To the British and French troops trying to maintain order they cried: "Down with the criminals!"

The first job for the UN troops was to be joint patrols with the allied troops.

AT THE UN

UN Secretary-General Hammarskjöld flew back to New York from an on-the-spot assessment of the Middle East crisis. In his first report, Hammarskjöld said the Anglo-French forces should leave and the UN force take over. Then the UN troops would pull out of the canal zone.

In London, the British Government had reservations about the Hammarskjöld formula. R. A. Butler, acting prime minister, said certain conditions must be met before the British and French forces leave Egypt. One of these was that the UN force must be in a position to restore secure, free navigation through the canal.

EDEN BREAKDOWN

Since the allied ultimatum was delivered to Egypt more than three weeks ago, Prime Minister Eden had been under severe strain. This week his health broke down, and he took for a three-week rest in Jamaica. R. A. Butler took over direction of affairs.

Although British public opinion has come round to Eden's support, the possibility of Britain yielding to the UN demand that she quit Egypt without her conditions having been met raised the prospect of a revolt in the Conservative party. British newspapers saw a political crisis boiling up.

CANADA'S ROLE

Canada's contribution to the UN force underwent a radical change. The 1st Battalion of the Queen's Own Rifles was already aboard the aircraft carrier Magificent at Halifax, ready to sail for the Mediterranean.

Then word came postponing this indefinitely. Instead, administrative units were sent ahead, RCAF transport planes were flying the Canadian headquarters personnel to the UN staging area in Italy.

Prime Minister St. Laurent announced that Parliament will meet in special session Monday to vote funds for the dispatch of Canada's contribution to the UN force.

The UN General Assembly alternated between the Middle East and Hungary. Wednesday it passed a resolution demanding an end to the mass deportation of Hungarian nationalists to Soviet Prison camps.

The Hungarian economy continued paralyzed by strikes. Sixty thousand refugees poured over the frontier into Austria. The first batches of refugees reached Canada and the United States. Both countries have eased immigration restrictions to ensure speedy admittance.

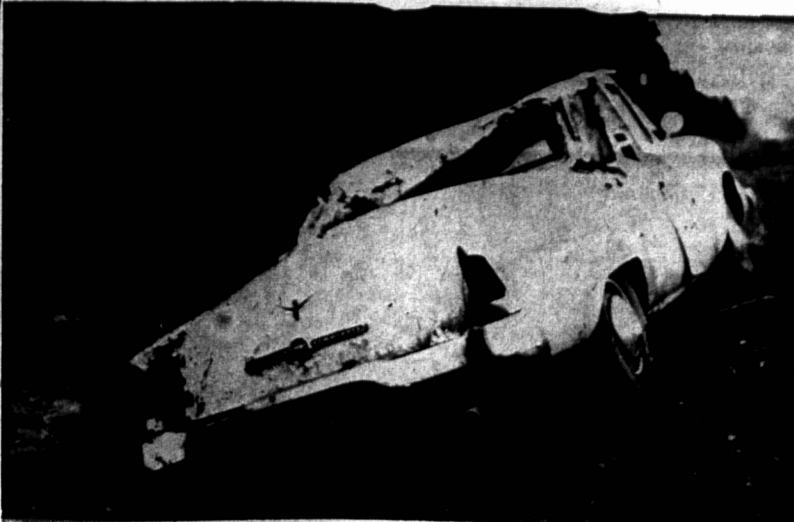

DOCK STRIKE

The United States had a dock strike on its hands. Sixty thousand longshoremen on the east and Gulf coasts struck in support of contract demands. Passengers arriving or sailing aboard the big liners at New York handled their own baggage. No freight moved. Losses in the first week were estimated at $120,000,000.

MOLOTOV SHIFTED

Vyacheslav Molotov, for so many years the voice of Soviet foreign policy, was put on the shelf by the Khrushchev-Bulgarian government. This week he got a new job—minister of state control.

This gives him wide auditing powers over Soviet government operations. There were differences of opinion as to whether this meant Molotov was moving up again. Most thought it wasn't much of a step up.

TWO UNINJURED WHEN CAR OVERTURNS

Early yesterday morning, the above car, a 1955 Studebaker bearing New Brunswick licence plates, was travelling north on the Commercial Road near Moore's Sausage Shop, when a blow-out in the left rear tire caused it to go out of control, hit a cement culvert, overturn and roll back on its wheels. Neither of the two occupants were injured, although the car was extensively damaged. Trudel MacLean, formerly of Peter's Road, owner of the car was the driver. He is at Camp Gagetown at present. A neighbor was with him.

LONG-LINERS

Long-liners are a new type of North Atlantic fishing craft, they are speedy, manoeuvrable, seaworthy and economical. This recent acquisition to one of Canada's large industries is rapidly replacing the tall-sparred, magnificently built but slow-moving, sail-bank schooners, such as the "Bluenose," that for many years brought fame and glory to Nova Scotia and Canada. It was just two years after the Bluenose was wrecked on a coral reef in the Caribbean that the David Pauline, the first of Nova Scotia's long-liners, slid down the ways on the ways on the La-Have river bank from the boat-yard of Warren Robar, a veteran boat builder.

The great expansion of the fresh fish industry following World War II, came when the facilities to supply the market were at a very low ebb in Nova Scotia. The Bank schooner fleet had dwindled, as no ships of that type had been built during the war, and many of the pre-war schooners had disappeared or were no longer available.

Another factor that added to the difficulty was the fact that dorymen, like many other of the older skilled workmen, such as sail-makers and harness-makers, were difficult to find. Newfoundland, the former main source of dorymen, had few fishermen in the post-war period who were willing to accept the hardships of hand line dory fishing on the dreary, cold, Newfoundland banks. The salt bank schooner required a normal crew of twenty-seven men, as they fish in the small boat class, felt that with twelve two-man dories, a skipper, a mate and a cook.

When the market for fresh fish outgrew the supply, draggers, both large and small, were operated from a number of ports. These sturdy ships ranged in length from sixty to over a hundred feet, and included a cone-shaped trawl net that gathered fish from the ocean floor, were expensive, and beyond the means of most of the inshore fishermen. Many hundreds of smaller craft were able to fish only within comparative short distance of their home ports.

THE LONG-LINER

An experienced fisherman from Liverpool, N.S., Lawrence Bolivar, who was skipper of one of these small craft, known as a Cape Sable Island boat, one of the sturdy in the small boat class, felt that he should have a much larger addition of this type of boat, with the same sleek hull, but completely decked in, with a wheel-house and quarters for the crew forward, and a covered fish house and a fish loft with ice bins, aft. He asked

Couple Observe Silver Wedding At Heatherdale

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Peardon, Heatherdale, was the scene of a happy gathering, when on Wednesday evening, November 21st, relatives and friends gathered to honor Mr. and Mrs. Peardon on their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

The dining room was tastefully decorated for the occasion with white and blue streamers and white bells. The table was centered with a three-tier wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. The cake was cut in the traditional manner by the honored couple.

After all the guests had partaken of a sumptuous wedding supper, served by Mrs. D.A. MacPhee, Mrs. Glen Peardon, Mrs. Austin Fraser, Mrs. John Nicholson, Mrs. Preston Peardon, Jr., and Miss Veda Allen, a well worded address was read by Mrs. Preston Peardon, Jr. on behalf of the guests, and a generous purse was presented by Mrs. John Nicholson.

The remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent in singing and dancing. Mrs. Jack Peardon was pianist for the sing-song, and music for dancing was supplied by Mr. George Hume and Mr. Kenneth MacPhee.

In the wee small hours the guests departed for their homes, wishing Preston and Mary many more years of wedded life.

Quintals Of Cod Change To CWT

OTTAWA (CP) — Modern times have caught up with the historic 112-pound quintal weight measurement in the Newfoundland salt cod industry.

"It had to come," one federal fisheries official said in commenting on the recent move of Newfoundland fishermen to discard the quintal in favor of the straight 100-pound measurement used in other Canadian fishing provinces.

The move came at the annual convention of the Newfoundland Federation of Fishermen at St. John's. It endorsed a resolution calling on the Newfoundland government and the fishing trade to forget the quintal, and get down to the 100 - pound hundredweight measurement.

The federal department official here explained that for centuries Newfoundland salt cod and the cod catch of some of the other countries fishing the Grand Banks was weighed by the quintal unit of 112 pounds. There were 224-pound barrels, two quintals and 448-pound casks of four quintals.

But in recent years, he said, there has been a bigger call for packing salt cod in boxes of 100 pounds. This complicated things for a trade accustomed to handling cod in 112-pound units.

Discard of the quintal will affect only the province's $12,000,000-a-year salt cod industry. Most of the salt cod is exported to countries like the West Indies, Italy and Spain.

Quintal is an old French word of Arabic origin. It was used to designate the British 112-pound hundredweight in pre-Confederation days in the New England settlements as well as in Newfoundland. After Confederation it was discarded in the Maritime provinces in favor of the Canadian-accepted 100-pound hundredweight.

But Newfoundland, where it had become almost a tradition, retained the measurement even after it became Canada's 10th province in 1949.

THE WEEK AT S. D. U.

The winter season, so much in evidence recently in the heavy morning air, has assumed its final form of thick snowflakes surrounding the campus. Many feet appeared to be heavier as students trudged along the narrow paths of snow in rubbers. The biting frost has been thrust upon us as the students are busy these days hauling out the overhauled long woolies.

Many enjoyed the Hockey Dance held at the Rollaway Tuesday night under the sponsorship of the Amateur Athletic Association of the College. This was the last dance sponsored by a College group before Christmas. Incidentally, the committee in charge of the Thursday afternoon college socials performed a splendid deed Thursday when they donated the full proceeds of the social to the Hungarian Relief Fund to go for rehabilitation aid for the stricken country. It was a fine gesture indeed on their part.

DRAMA FESTIVAL

The annual High School Drama Festival was held in the Assembly Hall last Saturday evening. The competition was won by Grade 12B whose presentation of "Copy" under the direction of Father Langdon was chosen as the one deserving top honors. The presentation was adjudicated by Father Kelly. The short plays were well chosen, and the fine enactments of the different roles speak well for the coaching efforts of the respective directors of each class.

SPORTS

This was an idle week for the Saints in the hockey schedule, although they did go through several short workouts during the week, to keep in shape. The protest which the Saints filed concerning their game with Summerside Aces was rejected in a hearing of City League officials, held recently. The Saints have two games left in this coming week as they play the Aces here Tuesday night and go to Summerside to play on Friday.

St. Dunstan's Senior basketball team have come through to recover their unblemished record by defeating St. Mary's University of Halifax by a 47-45 score as John Kelly scored a basket with less than a minute's play remaining. The Senior Squad have travelled to the Mainland where they will visit St. F. X. for a game on Friday night and Mt. Allison for a game on Saturday.

THE SECOND SAINTS BASKETBALL TEAM

The Second Saints basketball team have resumed play in the City League after a year's absence of league play. They opened the league schedule here Wednesday night against Summerside loads of scoring power in hand R.C.A.F. The Saints displayed an 80-40 defeat on the Airmen. Gerry Tingley and Gene Lake paced the Saints' attack, each netting 22 points.

CROSS COUNTRY

Many eyes were focused on a new athletic event inaugurated at St. Dunstan's this year. This was cross-country running competition held here last Saturday afternoon. Minto Memorial High School team defeated the St. Dunstan's team in a two mile cross country race by a six point margin, gained by placing four of their runners in better positions as a team than the S.D.U. team.

This is how the runners finished the course: 1. Bill Best, Minto; 2. Frank Gillis, S.D.U.; 3. Paul Beliveau, Minto; 4. Walter Bernard, Minto; 5. Ray Bryant, S.D.U.; 6. Dick Ays, S.D.U.; 7. Cedric Swift, Minto; 8. Rollie Sullivan, S.D.U. The Saints were represented by six starters while Minto had

Montague Presb. Young People Meet

The regular meeting of the Presbyterian Y.P.S., Montague, was held in the church hall Tuesday evening Nov. 20th, with the president, Carol Boehner presiding. The devotional period was conducted by Florence Stewart and Heather Jamieson. Margaret Hume was pianist during the evening.

Roll call was responded to by 21 members with a verse of scripture containing the word "Remember". In the absence of the secretary, Marjorie Gillis, the minutes of the last meeting were read by David McKenna.

It was decided to send letters of appreciation to all those who so kindly furnished transportation to the church and rallies during the summer months.

Plans were discussed for holding a social evening next week and Margaret MacLean and Joan Ferguson were appointed in charge of the worship period. Church calendars were distributed to the members and these are to be sold to church members and adherents.

An interesting and instructive study on missionary work was conducted by Rev. D.A. Campbell, the meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction, after which a period of games was enjoyed.
