PLAYING MAJOR roles during the Maritime Convention of the Atlantic Provinces Jaycees, which concluded here Sunday

Truck Highways Would Spark Economic Growth, Jaycees Told

If government is to bring the Atlantic region up to the economic level of the rest of Canada, and do it in "a bold and comprehensive manner" special federal consideration should be given in the building of a fully integrated system of all weather arterial truck highways through the region, including the P.E.I. causeway, Lt. Col. J. David Stewart, D.S.O., E.D., said in Charlottetown Saturday.

Colonel Stewart, who was guest speaker at the evening banquet held during the second day of a three-day conference of Atlantic Provinces Jaycees, said that the road system he was proposing would link up with main access routes to the major markets of the U.S. and Canada, including a new direct line route from Fredericton, N.B., through northern Maine to the eastern townships of Quebec and on to Montreal.

"This would place Montreal just 400 miles from Fredericton, reducing the distance from the Maritimes to the Industrial area of Central Canada by 140 miles," he said.

Seated at the head table were William Peters, Nova Scotia president; Donald LeBlanc, national vice president, Mayor Edwin C. Johnstone and Mrs. Johnstone, Lieut-Gov. F. Walter Hyndman, Hon. Eugene Cullen, minister of agriculture and Mrs. Cullen; Stan Matheson, New Brunswick president and Mrs. Matheson; George Scantlebury, P.E.I. president and Mrs. Scantlebury; George Joyce, Atlantic Provinces president; Lt. Col. J. David Stewart and Mrs. Stewart; Mr. and Mrs. John Ward.

During the banquet, held at the Charlottetown Hotel, the new Atlantic Provinces president, George Joyce was installed by Don LeBlanc.

PRESIDENT INSTALLED
The provincial presidents were also installed. They were Thomas Cahill, Nfld.; William Peters, N.S.; Stanley Matheson, N.B. and George Scantlebury, P.E.I.

At a noon luncheon the visiting delegates were welcomed to the Island by Premier A.W. Matheson. The Premier also urged the Jaycees to continue their fine work throughout the Maritimes. During the luncheon three trophies were presented, the Man-Miles trophy, the outstanding Maritime Jaycee trophy and the effective speaking trophy.

Paul Norton of Halifax, N.S. was presented with the effective speaking trophy by Dr. George C. Fisher, director of veterinary services. The Man-Miles trophy was awarded to Newfoundland and was accepted by their Jaycee president.

TOP JAYCEE
The outstanding Maritime Jaycee trophy was awarded to George Findlay of Halifax by Premier Matheson. The award, which originated three years ago, was previously held by Henry MacWilliams and George Scantlebury both of Charlottetown.

Guest speaker at the luncheon was Dr. Frank MacKinnon, B.A., M.A., PH.D., LL.D.
Dr. MacKinnon stated that the greatest resource in the Atlantic Provinces is individual enterprise supplanted by individual initiative and that the largest commodity exported by these provinces is young leaders.

"Something must be done to keep our young leaders in their area," he said.

The guest speaker also stated that negativism, which is hampering the economic growth in the Atlantic Provinces must be overcome and that these provinces must all make an effort towards individual cooperation.

MAJOR REVISION
Other noteworthy suggestions put forward by Lt. Col. Stewart were:
"A major revision of our national freight rate structure with a view to encouraging the movement of 'finished produce' to the heavily consuming central Canadian market."
"Special income tax concessions as well as special depreciation allowances, to industries that now operate here or will operate here and depend upon the national market for the sale of their product."
"Greater regional allocation of defence and other contracts for publicly financed undertakings. This would also assist in the dispersal of industry, a must, if we are to survive in a modern day type of war."

who have assumed much direction in matters academic and physical respectively, for the forbearance and their cooperation which made this special task of mine possible. This summer ends my extra territorial responsibilities and I look forward with great relief to full-time participation in my primary duties here next season.

"In connection with my A.P.E.C. experiences I must comment on a fact which is of vital importance to all of us in the Atlantic provinces and which is of great concern to all schools and colleges. A.P.E.C. is representative of all the resources and interests of the region. As an educationist I represent and am concerned with, the most important resource of all—our young people."

"If we don't make the opportunities challenging and attractive for young Maritimers right here in the Maritimes, then all the talk about economic development is just so much waste effort. Similarly everything done to develop our trade and industry is contributing toward making places in our midst for these young people we are honouring here today. Economic development is a vital interest and concern to us in education, for our interest in and responsibility for, our graduates does not stop at the classroom door or on Convocation day.

"Let me say emphatically that one of the greatest weaknesses in the Atlantic economy is the fact that we are exporting too many of our ablest young people. We are noted for that right across the country, and we are proud of the achievements of able Maritimers elsewhere. But we need the services of these people right here at home and it is illogical to let too many of them get away from us. Indeed we should all ponder the question recently asked by an eminent visiting businessman: "How do you spare them?"

"We can answer the question frankly, 'We can't spare them!'. Speaking negatively, too many things fail in the Atlantic Provinces because, let's face it, we haven't the people to run them and because we have too many people trying to run things they really know very little about. Speaking positively, there's not one major industry or activity in these provinces that hasn't been brought into existence and kept operating effectively by intelligent, imaginative, active individual leaders.

"I know raw material, power, capital, subsidies, transportation facilities and the like are all very important in the development of our economy. Nevertheless we can get together all the resources we want, but if we don't have the people we won't have the industry. Furthermore, we have several major enterprises in the region which started out solely on the initiative of one or two men who had few resources at their command and who persevered when others said "it can't be done".

There are two challenges here. One is to the older people. Let us be proud enough of our provinces and active enough in their promotion to encourage our share of the next generation's leaders to remain here. The other challenge is to the young people. There are many opportunities in these provinces for those who want to seize them, for the simple reason that there's much which needs to be done. If you have ambition and are not afraid of work you won't look far before you'll find a job worthy of your effort. To those who are at this ceremony I repeat that the most valuable resource we have is represented right here in the front rows.

"It is customary in annual reports to comment on general movements in the contemporary educational scene. I should like to make an observation on two of those movements.

The first concerns the requirements of education which are changing rapidly. After the last war the social services approach to education developed and remained dominant until about two years ago. This approach, which included the laudable policy that everyone should go to school, now requires something more because it soon became apparent that mere presence in school was not enough.

"Today educational opportunity is beginning to mean just that, every boy or girl who is willing to take the opportunity for education seriously should be enabled to go as far as he can, regardless of who he is and of how much money his family has. That is the reason for the great and welcomed increase in scholarships in the last two years. Canada, which has been far behind most other countries in this respect, is now beginning, but only beginning, the task of catching up. Statistics indicate the situation: we think we do well by helping financially about 15 per cent of our students; some European countries finance 75 per cent or more of their students.

But this change carries obligations with it. Students who won't work have been found to accumulate more weaknesses by wasting time than they do benefits by being present, and they hold back students who want to work. The time is past for regarding education as a privilege.

Glace Bay bus driver, Jerry Butts, was given a demonstration Saturday of the honesty of the future citizens of Charlottetown.

Mr. Butts arrived here Friday evening with delegates from Glace Bay to attend the Atlantic Provinces Jaycee Convention at the Charlottetown Hotel.

While his bus was parked in front of the hotel Saturday afternoon he allowed some children to play in the vehicle.
On returning to his vehicle later in the day he found a note written on a paper bag and stuck on a stick. The stick was fastened to the steering wheel.
The note read:
Dear Mister danny swiched the thing that shut's the door. we are very sorry, sorry, sorry
We'll pay you if we can?
Love the Children
The "thing" they referred to was the air switch which operates the doors. No damage was done.

Annual Show Being Viewed At Academy

The annual display of art work, needlework work and home cooking now being shown at Notre Dame Academy is of the usual high standard and is drawing much favorable comment from viewers.

The results accomplished by the pupils in the home-making department are particularly encouraging. Among the home-cooking exhibits are: bread, rolls, tea biscuit, cooked cereal, pancakes, doughnuts, pies, cake, custard pudding, jams, jellies, pickles, chow and salads.

The needlework ranges from sewing cards by the children of grade one to the tailored skirts, dresses and suits made by the other girls.

The six years' work of the 4-H Garment Club is of a fine quality. The students who have completed the work of any of these years have merited certificates and have been awarded prizes.

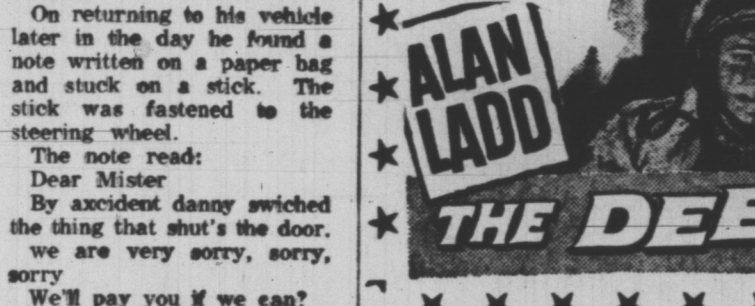

In the art display may be seen work done by the pupils of grade one to 10. This work includes water color, pastel and oil paintings. Many of the still-life paintings done in oil are original. We see also purses and billfolds in leather.
