Premier Showing Of 3-D Picture At Murray River

The premier showing of 3-D together with the new wide Astrolite screen took place at the new Mayfair Theatre, Murray River last night. The very large audience was treated to an experience unusual and unique in the history of motion picture production. Accustomed to viewing the flat 2-D as a painting on the wall, it was almost fantastic in the moving about in the paintings moving about in the same room. Such is the effect of 3-D.

So real is the illusion, the audience as a whole was ducking hurried objects, feeling they were certain to be struck. So vivid and realistic, it is an experience unique to movie picturings and should be a strong incentive to increase the numbers attending theatres.
