DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Absent Hearts

They Grow Fonder, Or Waneer, According To Circumstances

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I have been going steady for three years with a wonderful boy. We love each other and get along beautifully together. He is attending college now, and we plan to be married when he graduates. But this is my problem. His father was transferred to a job in another state, and this summer my boy friend has to join his family. Do you think he will forget all about me then, or get lonely and find another companion? My friends tell me to look for another boy friend but that would be impossible as there could never be a substitute for my boy. Others tell me to marry him now but that also is impossible because we can't afford it. Also, he would have to leave college and I don't want that to happen when he is doing so well. I don't think my boy friend would leave me but everyone is putting ideas in my head so I, don't know whether I'm coming or going. What should I do?

CORNELIA

ANSWER: Here we go again with well-meaning friends who seem intent on spoiling your happiness. I notice they've given just about every bit of advice except the assurance that the separation couldn't possibly hurt people as well matched, as sensible and as devoted as you two. Summer isn't eternity, Cornelia. Just think of all the romance that have held together even though the boy has had to do service overseas for two or three years!

TRUE LOVE IS STRENGTHENED

The old adage about absence has two variations, you know. "Absence causes hearts to wander," and "Absence makes the heart grow fonder." Where hearts are already fickle, absence will not make them constant, but where true love and devotion already exist, a separation only strengthens the bond between them. You will both find lots to do during the summer, and letter-writing will be a major occupation. I'm sure neither of you will have the slightest inclination to find companionship in the opposite sex—but on your part, anyway, Cornelia, I would certainly be wary of girl friends who are too free with advice. Put your faith in the stability of your boy friend, and remember, if you couldn't trust him for a few summer months, he'd be a very poor matrimonial risk.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I am very much in love with a boy. He is younger than I. He is 18 and I am 19½. We have been going together for a year and he has asked me to marry him. The wedding would not take place now, but when he is out of the army. He is a senior in high school and I a freshman in college. We get along very well, but the trouble is with my parents who think he is too young for me. They like Dick very much and also like his folks. We love each other very much, but I also love my mother and would not want to hurt her. She has nothing to disapprove of in Dick except his age. Do you think the difference in age is that important?

TRUDY

ANSWER: A difference of a year and a half certainly is not so important. Of course, in the teens it seems more of a problem than it will be later. The difference between 28 and 29½, for instance, isn't nearly as great by comparison as the span between 18 and 19½. By the time Dick comes out of the army and you are ready to be married, your parents will probably be reconciled to the age disparity, which will already seem to be shrinking by that time. With all the other promising aspects of a happy romance you possess, such as mutual interests and the respect and affection existing between both families, I think you can very easily overcome the barrier of years and in time have your parents realize its unimportance.

DEAR MISS DIX: Could you help me find a solution to this problem? Should a boy attempt to stop his girl friend, who is a minor, from smoking?

TOMMY

ANSWER: Of course he should. Smoking is a habit for adults and not one to be encouraged in a minor. It is a health hazard in appearance by aging her elders with a cigarette in her mouth all the time. I hope you have enough influence over your girl friend to make her postpone smoking at least for a few years.

DOROTHY DIX cannot reply personally to readers, but will answer problems of general interest through her column.

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

"Oh yes—it's good to have a creed, Ellen," James offered at breakfast this morning, when our conversation had turned along these lines, "but," he smiled, "I always like to see a person living up to his belief. In fact, it's not so much what a person believes, or professes to believe, that I'm taken up with—it's what he does—how he handles his day by day living. I always think that if a fellow includes the Golden Rule to his creed of life—well, it's a fair-good rule to go by. Yes," he nodded, "if everyone did as he would be done by, I'm of the opinion that this old world wouldn't be too bad a place to live in. That's my notion of things, Ellen—of course," he smiled, "I could be astray!" Not that James actually finds his world anything but good as it is, though it sometimes seems to get extremely perplexing for him. He picked up his cap then, setting it off fancied at a well-contented June angle and was off to join the junior member of the place and Mr. D. to take up with them the schedule for the day. A mist of dampness lay along the hill-tops, and grey clouds foretold showers, but withal, the June-day was good. We thought as we gathered the dishes, which contribute cheerful spots of color to the darkest morning, to the pantry, we should have liked the month to mark time for us even as it was, grey and momentarily bleached. All too soon it will be gone, the wonderment, wealth of verdure and lushness of this June-time passed ever away.

The farmers brought their program of seeding to a close this week, one which like James we find somewhat incomplete, because their farming this year has not allowed for any planting of

BLOATING NOT ALWAYS DUE TO GAS FORMATION

When bloating occurs, there is no question but that in most cases foods like cabbage, lettuce, cauliflower and other green vegetables are the cause. Unfortunately, salads made up of these foods are very commonly eaten and many individuals prefer to obtain these vegetables in a raw state rather than cooked. These individuals would sooner undergo the bloating and pressure than do without their raw vegetables and fruits. Some months ago I recorded the findings of Dr. Walter Alvarez of the Mayo Clinic whose research work on digestion and constipation is known to most physicians. I quoted Dr. Alvarez as stating that all bloating is not caused by gas formation. As this statement will be a surprise to many I am recording again some findings about non-gaseous bloating. In Archives of Internal Medicine, Dr. Alvarez describes a syndrome (group of symptoms) consisting of pronounced bloating due to tonic reaction or tightening of abdominal muscles and often to assuming a lordotic (bending backward) posture which forces the abdomen forward. Commonly the swelling increases gradually during the afternoon and decreases at night without passage of gas. X-rays of a bloated abdomen never show excess of gas and opening up of the abdomen by operation reveals no cause for the bloating. In a series of 92 patients, 85 of whom were women and 7 men, almost all were nervous, unhappy and easily upset emotionally. Many were relatives of insane persons or of persons with epilepsy, migraine or diabetes. Most patients had

CHAPTER XXIII

"I'm not sure," he said truthfully. "But things are coming back to her."
"She must remember!" Kay said tightly. "Then we'll know, Johnny. Grandpoppa's death was an accident, wasn't it? I mean—"
"No, it was not an accident!" he said.
They found Nick Walker and Doctor Clark in the long library across the hall. Johnny wondered what was keeping Moe Martin. He also wondered about young Ralph Dunkirk, and asked the girl.
"He had to leave," Kay said. The storm will mean calls for service at the garage." She moved her shoulders uneasily as a particularly loud smash of thunder shook the house.
Johnny kept wondering what was delaying his partner. The butler came into the library with two more of the candle-holders. He placed them nearby on a table in case they should be needed and went out again.
Doctor Clark was saying something about the possibility of some of the shore roads being washed out, if the deluge of rain didn't stop soon, when Moe came into the library.
Instantly Johnny noticed that Moe was upset. Moe always had a

For Tomorrow

A MOST exciting state of affairs, with all phases and interests of living under pleasant stimulus for heightened ideas. There is much promise of achievement, progress, promotion, with all events rising to a happy climax. The energies are under high stimulation, with practical and aggressive plans finding support from high places. Intimate matters also have splendid promise for enjoyment and success.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may have an exceptionally exciting and progressive year, with much stirring in the realm of private contacts, of home, social and other creative opportunities. The mental and intellectual emotions are highly stimulated, with a happy combination, preference and personal favors. A time for moving to high goals, with vim, confidence and well directed intuitions. A child born on this day is richly endowed with aspirations and ambitions for a constructive and happy place in life.

Day After Tomorrow

The astrological forecast is for a most stimulating day, with affairs undergoing developments quite surprising and unplanned. Radical change, sudden travel, dramatic and thrilling denouements are in the offing. Removal, unplanned change, but with welcome or dynamic experiment, a re-vamping of programs, are indicated, possibly inspired by romantic or emotional urge, this with intent of freedom in thought and action. Bold and novel ideas may be thrilling, with exciting change and daring originality.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a sudden and unplanned change of far-reaching consequence. This may be a spectacular move, with a definite about-face in thought and action. Certain decisions involve radical and revolutionary ideas and projects. Progressive ideas may be put over with drastic and revolutionary daring, and with striking denouements. An element of the dramatic or romantic may be the incentive for such. It is probable that such action may concern social or fraternal affiliation, brotherhood. A child born on this day may have much originality and vision, novel and adventurous, romantic and dramatic. His career might be spectacular and bold, independent, progressive.
